QUAKE RIPS UP OCEAN'S BED

HARDING WANTS ANOTHER TERM, FRIENDS ASSERT

Believe G. O. P. Sure to Rename Him.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—President Harding is a candidate for renomination.

Rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, the President aspires to a second term in the White House. He is going after it as hard as he knows how.

Mr. Harding has not announced his ambition to succeed himself and he does not intend to do so for a year or more. He declines even to discuss the matter outside of the circle of his closest friends.

Close Friends Know It.

Nevertheless the word has percolated through the charmed political circle that the President is a candidate and that he is ready to fight for renomination, if a fight is necessary. Unless the situation should change tremendously in the next year, he probably will not find it necessary to do much fighting.

With the President a candidate, the Republican party could not deny him a renomination without such repudiation of its record of four years in power as would be likely to compass its defeat in the election.

That the President will be renominated is conceded by most of those insurgent Republicans, who would prefer another candidate. They do not believe that any opponent could win enough delegates, even in direct primary states to beat the President in the convention.

Expects Many Aspirants.

"I expect to see the largest field of favorite sons in years trotted out in the 1924 primaries," said an anti-Harding Republican. "In each of these states the delegates will be for the favorite son on the first ballot and for Harding on the second ballot. That's all there will be to it.

"The President will be renominated, and then we will get the worst trimming in the election we have ever had."

The intelligence that the President is a candidate gave a rude jolt to sundry Republicans of prominence, each of whom sees a fair chance of winning the nomination if Mr. Harding were out of the way but otherwise would not consider the race worth entering.

Doubt even that Senator Hiram Johnson [Cal.] will contest the renomination of Mr. Harding is heard in some quarters. At least, as matters stand at present, Johnson is not at odds with the administration as to either foreign or domestic policy. He has no issue. Unless he breaks with the administration in the next year he will have no ground for challenging Mr. Harding's supremacy.

La Follette Always Opposed.

With Senator La Follette [Wis.] the case is different. He is always antagonistic to the administration. He will fight Mr. Harding in the primaries, and he is not unlikely to go into the convention with more delegates than he ever had before, though with no better chance of being nominated.

La Follette will have Wisconsin and possibly North Dakota, and may pick up some delegates in Iowa, Nebraska, and Minnesota.

Friends of the President are confident that the tide of public sentiment has turned definitely in his favor. They regard the Republican reverses of the late election as an aftermath of the period of hard times. With returning prosperity, they expect the Republican party stock to go up again. The rural credits legislation and elevation of the agricultural interests to a powerful position in the federal reserve system are expected to alloy dissatisfaction among the farmers, who constitute the backbone of the G. O. P.

Believe Normalcy Obtained.

The President set out to restore normalcy, and by the time the first presidential primaries are held the country will realize that he has made good, the friends of Mr. Harding assure us. Furthermore, the country will be impressed with the tremendous reduction of governmental expenditures and economies of administration accomplished by the President.

If all goes well, congress will not be in session for nine months following March 4 next. The President will be the center of the picture in that period. He will go about the country some and make some speeches, possibly journey-ing to Alaska. A year hence, his friends predict, he will be so popular that there will be no question of his renomination and reflection.

DRY LEAGUE MAN REPLIES TO TRIBUNE

In response to THE TRIBUNE'S messages sent on Friday to the eleven members of the executive committee of the Anti-Saloon League of America, who have been in session in Washington, Wayne B. Wheeler wired yesterday as follows:

"Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—TRIBUNE, Chicago, Ill: Executive committee adjourned Thursday night. Members left for home Friday."

THE TRIBUNE'S messages asked whether the Anti-Saloon executive committee member approved of strict enforcement of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments to the federal constitution.

F. Scott McBride Replies.

One reply was received—from F. Scott McBride, who is in Chicago. It follows:

"To THE TRIBUNE.—Your telegram, which, according to your paper of Feb. 3, was sent to Washington, D. C., has not been received by me. The executive committee of the Anti-saloon League of America, of which I am a member, adjourned Thursday night, and most of the members left for their homes immediately.

"Our organization exists for one purpose, the destroying of the liquor traffic, and speaks for no other. This accounts for the declarations condemning your editorial encouraging the nullification of the eighteenth amendment.

"Speaking personally, but not officially, in answer to questions.

"No. 1.—I favor the enforcement of all provisions of the constitution and of all the laws on the statute books.

"No. 2.—The fourteenth and fifteenth amendments put it up to congress to enforce the provisions of the articles by appropriate legislation. Congress should decide as to what needs to be done by them in enforcing the articles. The eighteenth amendment gives a like power, not only to congress, but to the several states as well, making the power concurrent. Both the state and congress should meet this obligation.

"Since I have answered your questions, you probably will not object to answering one or two of mine.

"1.—Are you in favor of the enforcement of the eighteenth amendment?

"2.—Do you believe one wrong makes another wrong right?

"3.—Is it not a fact that under date of Jan. 12, 1919, in an editorial, your paper condoned the nullification of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments by saying in that editorial: 'It happened differently in the case of the amendment which enfranchised Negroes. But that was a horse of a different color. A constitutional amendment of fundamental social repugnance to a large section of the country might be handled to the liking of that section without drastic interference on the part of the nation. It has been so handled.'

"4.—Are the comparisons between the amendments made by you for the purpose of enforcing the fourteenth and fifteenth or for the nullification of the eighteenth? F. SCOTT MCBRIDE."

ASKS EDEN ISLE TO SAVE THINKER

League Is Urged to Open South Sea "Park."

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 3.—Frederick Burlington, Borneo explorer, failed to interest the council of the league of nations today in the establishment under mandate somewhere in the South Sea isles of an international park where thinkers may escape to regain their equilibrium.

"Within a few years," Mr. Burlington told Lord Balfour, "the whole world will be discovered, possessed and exploited for profit by large corporations. This will prove a catastrophe.

Whole World Going Crazy.

"There will not be left a single place in the whole world where a weary soul can find a primeval haunt. The whole civilized world is going crazy because the people have lost their grip on fundamentals, and one Eden should be set aside before it is too late. We are living too much under man-made laws, and have lost sight of the fundamental natural laws of nature."

Mr. Burlington was told gently by Lord Balfour that the league did not have any South Sea mandates available at present.

"Borneo Wild Men Most Sane."

"I have just visited the wild Dayak tribes 500 miles in the interior of Borneo," Mr. Burlington told THE TRIBUNE. "The wild men of Borneo are the sanest I have met. In the jungle everybody watches his step and minds his business. I never saw a fight or heard a harsh word or saw a child slapped or a dog kicked.

"When not contaminated by civilization, wild men neither lie nor steal. But justice is swift and vengeance rapid. Unfaithful wives get rough treatment. Anit, my chief canoeist, discovered his wife with a lover when he unexpectedly returned. He cut her into hamburger and then sold the meat to her lover, who ate it unwillingly. This is typical Borneo vengeance."

Mr. Burlington left for New York this afternoon.

PNEUMONIA KILLS GEN. KUROKI, JAP HERO OF MUKDEN

TOKIO, Feb. 4.—[By the Associated Press.]—Gen. Tamemoto Kuroki, one of the famous warriors of Japan, died today of pneumonia. He was 78 years old. Gen. Kuroki was honored in Japan as the hero of Mukden. It was there in the Russo-Japanese war that his legions rolled back the Russian forces.

Gen. Kuroki was of Satsuma extraction, that is to say, he was born the son of a Samurai. He distinguished himself in the civil war which occasioned the Meiji restoration, and also in the Satsuma rebellion of 1877. In 1893 he became a lieutenant general and was made commandant of the 6th army division.

In the Russo-Japanese war he inaugurated a series of successes by a signal victory in the battle of Yalu. This was followed by several other victories, culminating in the rout of the Russians at Mukden. This success contributed greatly to the eventual victory of the Japanese army, which was under the supreme command of Field Marshal Oyama.

At the conclusion of the war Kuroki was made a count and appointed a member of the supreme military council of the empire. In 1907 he visited the United States.

From a political standpoint French seizure of the Ruhr is declared to be proving a winning move. As an economic success there is still doubt.

BERLIN, Feb. 4 [Sunday].—[By the United Press.]—Chancellor Cuno went to the Ruhr today to exert his personal influence in stiffening resistance to the French occupation. The German chancellor will make his headquarters at Essen.

Sentry Kills German.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 3.—A French soldier on sentry duty shot and killed a German in the town of Brechten this morning. The soldier, who was guarding the railway, told the German three times to move off. The German put his hand in his pocket. The soldier, believing the German was armed, fired.

RIOTS IN RHINELAND

BY JOHN CLAYTON.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

DUSSELDORF, Feb. 3.—Demonstrations throughout the Rhineland were organized today when it became known that Dr. Johan Fuchs, oberpresident of the Rhineland provinces, had been expelled from the occupied territory for ordering government officials to disobey the orders of the Rhineland commission at Coblenz.

Workers in Coblenz struck for one hour to show their sympathy for the German chief of the Rhine provinces. Several thousand people gathered about the offices of the allied Rhineland commission. French troops with fixed bayonets broke up the mob. Some of the more pugnacious had to be quieted with butts of the soldiers' rifles.

Dr. Fuchs was on excellent terms with Maj. Gen. T. Henry Allen when the latter was commander of the American forces and the German a member of the Rhineland high commission.

French Extend Occupation.

The French army of occupation tonight encloses Elberfeld and Barmen on three sides. No advance has been made into these two important Westphalian industrial cities.

Yesterday and today French troops occupied the important railway junctions of Vohwinkel. Lennet and Bergbonn to make the cordon around the Ruhr complete. The action followed an attempt by the Germans to get coal ostensibly to Coblenz and direct it at one of these points into unoccupied Germany. The few coal trains which reached the barrier today, were halted by French patrols. The cordons proved so effective that attempts to evade them have practically ceased. One report says a few cars of coal succeeded in running the blockade yesterday.

Pile Coal in Fields.

Meanwhile the storage space of several mines is becoming filled despite the decreased production and the fact that the Ruhr district burns a large quantity daily. Fuel is being piled up in open fields as well as at the pitheads.

The situation at the coke ovens is even more serious than at the mines. Coke is accumulating so rapidly that it hampers the proper operations of the furnaces, and attempts are being made to have this fuel brought to Ruhrort, where it can be placed on barges and moved on French boats up the Rhine. No agreement has yet been reached, however.

Alaskan Chill Shivers City in Subzero Grip

Winter, begulled for weeks by spring breezes, asserted itself throughout much of the country yesterday, and Chicago last night found itself in the grip of the coldest weather of the season. By midnight the mercury had fallen to 6 degrees below zero, which it held for several hours, but indications were that it would go lower before sunrise.

The wave which struck Chicago about midnight Friday was, according to official weather reports, drawn down from Alaska, nipping much of the northwest enroute and sweeping eastward over the plains. It is scheduled to pass toward the Atlantic seaboard; the crest of it will leave Chicago today.

Relief in a Short Time.

The mercury reached the zero point here at 8 o'clock yesterday morning. Rising a bit during the day, it dropped back to zero at 6 o'clock in the evening. The decline from that hour was steady. The season's previous low mark was made in the middle of December, when the mercury registered 3 below zero.

The prospect is that within twenty-four or thirty-six hours temperatures hereabout will moderate.

Depletes Coal Bins.

The icy blast caught many Chicago householders with near empty coal bins, and retail fuel dealers reported a veritable siege upon their places of business. Some price raising was complained of, but the more reputable concerns did not take advantage of the situation.

Although the city shivered, the sharp change came as a "God-send," according to Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, health commissioner, who said the cold snap promised to check the mild but menacing epidemic of flumonia that had developed.

Will Halt the Flu.

Commenting with satisfaction upon the changed weather, he said last night:

"Nothing could have been more of a God-send. The damp, slushy weather of the last days had us worried. And there was good reason for our concern. We had 144 cases of flumonia yesterday; of these seventy-seven were influenza and sixty-seven pneumonia.

"With this cold snap, the number of such cases reported should be materially cut down next week. If the public will only realize that colds are highly contagious and will remain at home in case of illness, we can keep the situation well in hand."

Twenty-four deaths from pneumonia and three from influenza during twenty-four hours ending yesterday morning were reported.

Advises Ill to Stay at Home.

Reports of cold flats continued to flood the health commissioner's office yesterday. Up to noon—closing time—fifty complaints had been filed. In each instance an investigator was sent out. The landlords named in three of four cases were alleged "repeaters."

Dr. Bundesen said that where evidence of violation was strong the health department would institute criminal prosecution. Civil actions brought by tenants, he asserted, have merely cluttered up court dockets and yielded no satisfactory results.

70 Fires in 6 Hours Keeps Department on the Jump

More than 70 fires were recorded in Chicago during the first six hours of last night, most of which are attributed to overheated furnaces due to the extremely cold weather. Forty of the blazes were south of 39th street and eleven of these alarms called out Engine Company No. 51, 64th street and Wentworth avenue, in less than four hours.

TIDAL WAVES SWEEP HAWAII; SAMOA CUT OFF

Mt. Hood, Alaskan Volcanoes Active.

BULLETIN.

HONOLULU, Feb. 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Efforts to reach Samoa by wireless had been vain up to a late hour.

Samoa, which in 1889 was the scene of one of the greatest tidal wave disasters in modern history, lies in the region in which many reports place the center of the earth disturbance of yesterday.

BY BERT L. KUHN.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

HONOLULU, Feb. 3.—With reports of widespread destruction and some loss of life pouring in hourly, no accurate estimate as yet is possible as to the exact extent of the damage wrought by a series of tidal waves which swept the entire Hawaiian group and which are believed to be the result of several violent earthquake shocks recorded earlier by seismographic instruments here.

The islands of Hawaii and Maui apparently were the hardest hit.

With a maximum of twenty feet the waterfront and lower section of Hilo harbor, Hawaii island, were inundated late this afternoon by seven tidal waves.

A number of persons are believed to have been killed, their bodies having been seen tossed on the crest of the huge waves.

From four to ten Japanese fishermen were reported killed on the railroad bridge over the Wailuku river. Many frame buildings were washed out and torn down. One cottage was washed from its foundations.

Oil Tanker in Distress.

The streets are covered with mud, bowlders, and fish. The Standard Oil tanker Doane evidently is in distress and is whistling for aid. It is believed to be on a sandbar.

Kahului, Maui, reports a damage of $500,000. Three motor cars were caught by the first wave and demolished. Dr. L. C. Smith, who was riding in one, was thrown against a fence and suffered a broken leg. Many scows were set adrift and the streets flooded. The Kahului wharf was wrecked and freight destroyed.

The steamer Mahukona, which was tied up to the wharf, broke its hawsers and was set adrift and the steamer Kilauea also was torn loose. Neither was seriously damaged.

Thousands of persons witnessed the rushing in of the wall of waters. No loss of life is reported as yet.

Five waves hit Haleiwa, Oahu, washing out the Oahu railroad and doing considerable other damage. Each wave was felt in Honolulu harbor, the water rising in a slow swell to a height of five feet and then receding, leaving many sampans and scows high and dry.

TERRIFIC SHOCK RECORDED

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—Two distinct earthquakes, one of tremendous and unusual proportions, the other of moderate intensity, occurred today, but their exact location could not be determined from the records of delicate seismographs throughout the country, and scientists differed widely in their opinions as to the regions affected.

The first quake, the worst of the two, was estimated to have been centered 5,000 miles from Washington. Its tremors continued for more than three hours and before they had ended the seismographs recorded a second series of shocks estimated to be at another point between 3,600 and 3,700 miles from Washington.

Seismologists differed widely in their estimates as to the exact location of the maj.. disturbance. Designations ranged from Alaska, the Aleutian islands, and the Arctic region on the north to northern Argentina on the south.

Japan Answers Wireless.

On the west the range was from the bed of the Pacific ocean at a point southwest of Lower California to the vicinity of the Marshall islands, between Hawaii and the Philippines, and in Japan. Prompt radio communication with Japan, however, disclosed no unusual disturbances in that country.

Inasmuch as telegraphic or cable communications brought no intelligence of any earthquake in Hawaii, the Philippines, Alaska, or the countries of South America, it is considered most probable that the disturbances were submarine shocks or seaquakes, which never will be definitely located.

The heavier of the two quakes began at 11:13 a. m. when the first preliminary tremors were recorded on the seismographs of Georgetown university here, and the second preliminary tremors were recorded at 11:23. The maximum vibrations were at 11:40 and continued for ten minutes during which the needles on one of the Georgetown seismographs were thrown off the records. Other instruments also "lost their needles" during the day.

Buenos Aires Can't Place It.

BUENOS AIRES, Feb. 3.—The seismograph at the University of La Plata registered a light earth tremor at 12:22 o'clock this afternoon. The distance of the quake could not be calculated, but its center was believed to be to the north.

Mount Hood Smokes Up.

Sandy, Ore., Feb. 3.—[United Press.]—Mount Hood this morning enjoyed a quiet smoke for about an hour and three quarters, according to Mrs. C. L. Hensen, wife of a former forest ranger residing a mile east of Sandy. Mrs Hensen first noticed the peculiar action of the famous peak at 5:40 o'clock, the exceptionally clear atmosphere and bright moonlight making the the phenomenon remarkably visible. She saw the last evidences at 7:15 o'clock after daylight had made the "smoke" more plain.

Alaska Volcanoes Active.

Seattle, Wash., Feb. 3.—The earthquake recorded here today may have some connection with recent unusually severe volcanic activity in the Alaskan peninsula, which began with the eruption of Mount Pavlof late in December. Shocks were felt at that time as far east as Cook Inlet, and huge meteors fell along the Kuskokwim river. Mount Shushaldin, on Unimak island, and Mount Matses, near Pavlof, have been in intermittent eruption during the month, many of the periods of activity being accompanied by earthquake shocks.

U. OF C. NEEDLE IS BUSY.

A severe earthquake, said by officials to be the second greatest in point of disturbance ever recorded at the United States weather observatory at the University of Chicago, was reported by that bureau yesterday. Indications were that it occurred 4,788 miles from Chicago, probably in a northwest direction. The first "wave" reached the observatory at 10:13 a. m., the maximum from 11 to 11:30, and lesser tremors at 2:10.

VOLCANO RENDS TOWN

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MILAN, Feb. 3.—A huge volcano which broke forth in the center of Francenigo, near Sacile, in the Venetian district, suddenly opened its crater still wider this afternoon and swallower several houses. Many buildings have been knocked down and it is believed the town is doomed.

It now appears that the village, which is hundreds of years old, was built unknowingly directly over the crater of the volcano. Since the terrific explosion with which the crater has opened up in the central square of the village, yellow fire, dark smoke, and gasses have been belching forth.

The townspeople have fled the country and are camping in the open to escape what they call a vengeance visited upon them from the infernal regions within the earth.

MRS. F. L. HOUGH WANTS $2,750 IN ALIMONY, FEES

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Lawyers for Mrs. Florence Lord Hough will argue before Justice Guy in the Supreme court Monday a motion for $2,500 counsel fees and $250 alimony from William M. Hough, playwright, who lives at the Lambs' club. Admission by lawyers for Mrs. Hough and by Hough's counsel that such a proceeding was scheduled was the first public intimation that the matrimonial affairs of the couple were in a snarl again.

Mrs. Hough lives here with her father, Daniel M. Lord. Until he retired Mr. Lord was head of the Chicago advertising firm of Lord & Thomas. He formerly was president of the Chicago Athletic Association. She was married to Hough for the first time in 1910. They traveled extensively for two years—their travels and the romance ending together in a divorce granted to the wife in April, 1912.

Two years later they remarried and settled in Evanston, Ill. At the end of four years the wife alleges Hough was guilty of misconduct with a vaudeville actress.

BRASLAWSKY IN JAIL, WIFE TRIES TO END HER LIFE

Cuts Throat When Bank Head Is Caught.

Grief stricken because detectives had wrung from her information that earlier in the day had led to the arrest in New Orleans of her husband, Eugene Braslawsky, fugitive president of the defunct International State bank, 1706 West Roosevelt road, Mrs. Anna Braslawsky yesterday cut her throat with a safety razor blade. A four inch gash was made, but she will recover, physicians said.

Meanwhile steps had been taken to extradite the husband, who, upon the information reluctantly yielded by Mrs. Braslawsky, was taken in a raid on 5025 Daniel street, New Orleans. There, as letters seized from his wife had indicated, he was found living under the alias of Eugene Miller.

Peculations Put at $100,000.

Braslawsky, now under indictment, is alleged to have embezzled $100,000 from the bank he headed. The bank, which was one of the chief depositories of the Jewish quarter, closed its doors several weeks ago. Braslawsky had fled.

For weeks detectives maintained a futile search for the fugitive. Mrs. Braslawsky disappeared when her husband fled, but was not with him all the time. Detectives found her trail, and when she returned to Chicago several days ago they shadowed her persistently.

Raid Home of Wife.

Thursday night they raided her rooms in Barry avenue and seized many letters from Braslawsky. Fighting with detectives and Assistant State's Attorney John A. Scarbaro for possession of these, Mrs. Braslawsky for hours stoutly maintained she knew nothing of her husband's whereabouts.

Finally, however, the evidence of the letters overcame her and she told the authorities where the missing bank president could be found. A telegram to Guy Maloney, superintendent of police at New Orleans, soon brought word that Braslawsky had been taken into custody.

Mrs. Braslawsky had been detained at the home of Mrs. F. Larson, policewoman, 1240 West 73rd street. It was there that she attempted suicide. Dr. George P. Kerrigan, 6946 South Racine avenue, caused her removal to the psychopathic hospital. There, according to attendants, she lamented her failure to end her life, moaning, "I want to die."

CALLED PRISON "DUDE"

New Orleans, La., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Eugene E. Braslawsky, arrested here on a charge of embezzling $150,000 in Chicago, refused to believe reports that his wife had slashed her throat in an attempt to end her life today. Braslawsky seemed to think that the attempted suicide had been fabricated in an effort to break his morale. Telegrams failed to convince him.

Braslawsky announced that he would waive requisition and return to Illinois and stand trial.

Braslawsky was arrested at Dryades and Robert streets, in the heart of the fashionable apartment house center. In the parish prison yard today he wore his gray tweed tailored overcoat and a dark business suit, despite the fact that the temperature hovered close to 75. The other prisoners, in shirt sleeves or undershirts, dubbed him "the dude."

$50,000 Policy Hinges on Bernard Mayer Autopsy

Dr. William H. Burmeister, coroner's physician, is expected to announce early next week the result of an autopsy performed upon the body of Bernard Mayer, brother of the late Levy Mayer, famous Chicago attorney, following refusal of the Employers' Liability Assurance Company of London, to pay a $50,000 accident policy before the cause of death was clearly shown.

Mr. Mayer, who was 65 years old, died at his home in Glencoe, Jan. 4, following a fall upon a basement stairway. The point at issue is whether a cerebral hemorrhage, the cause of death, resulted from the fall.

Wife of E. E. Braslawsky breaks down under questioning, reveals hiding place of her fugitive husband, missing president of a defunct Roosevelt road bank, then seriously cuts her throat when he is arrested.

NEW GOWNS OFFER GLIMPSE OF BOSOM IN RIOT OF COLOR

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 3.—A riot of color, dethroning black, which has been the favorite since the war, marked the spring and summer collection of Jean Patou modes, which were exhibited to American reporters tonight.

Vivid multi-colored, printed materials—crepe de chine, muslin and crepe georgette—featured the styles.

Fabulous prices, hitherto unheard of, are being asked. One white evening gown encrusted with brilliants is listed at 12,000 francs ($750). It required fifteen workers three days apiece to construct the gown. The most ordinary and simplest gowns cost 2,000 francs ($125).

Green, maroon, and yellow are the favorite colors, ousting red, which was last season's favorite.

Clinging materials on straight lines gives the appearance of tight skirts, but when they are stretched out they leave plenty of room for walking with no hobble effect.

Deep panel-like vents in the bosoms of afternoon gowns, which were worn without lingerie, made the spectators gasp at the daring revelation of skin. The evening gowns have no backs, but they do not have exaggerated decollette in front.

TOMB GIVES UP GOLDEN CHARIOT OF EGYPT KING

LUXOR, Egypt, Feb. 3.—[United Press.]—A chariot of gold, studded with priceless jewels, that was once the personal conveyance of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, who ruled Egypt 3,000 years ago, was removed from the tomb of the ancient pharaoh by excavators today. Crowds of American and European tourists who braved a sand storm in the desert that now overspreads what was once the world's mightiest empire, were amazed at the splendors of the vehicle. The body of the chariot was covered with sheet gold, elaborately and artistically carved and bejeweled.

The excavators are approaching the inner chambers of the tomb. The body of Tut-Ankh-Amen and possibly that of his queen, with their most priceless possessions, are expected to be found there.

Removal of the chariot followed excavation of a gold inlaid statue of Tut-Ankh-Amen, parts of chariots, and delicately wrought pieces of jewelry which in artistic workmanship are unequaled by that of the present day.

Doctor Guilty of Causing Death; Had Been Drunk

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 3.—Dr. H. T. Brogan today was found guilty of mansuaughter in the fourth degree. Dr. Brogan was charged with having performed an obstetrical operation while under the influence of liquor and causing the death of his patient. He admitted on the witness stand that he had been drinking on the day of the operation, but denied that he was intoxicated while performing his duties as a physician.

WAR ON POLAND THREATENED BY LITHUANIANS

Defy League of Nations on Vilna Edict.

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 3.—An open threat of war against Poland was made by the Lithuanian delegate before the council of the league of nations today.

M. Sidzikanskas, in behalf of the Kovno government, boldly declared that if Poland accepted the league plan to split provisionally the neutral zone around Vilna and permit Poland and Lithuania each to administer one-half Lithuania would oppose the Polish administration with all the means in its power, going to war if necessary.

"It will mean Lithuania's expulsion from the league and an economic blockade by all the member states," furiously shouted M. Viviani, the French delegate, who was presiding.

France Fears Baltic War.

It was the threat M. Viviani was fearing. Being involved in the expedition in the Ruhr and the prospect of trouble in the near east, a threat of a Baltic war over Vilna or Memel, dragging in Russia and Germany against Poland, makes the French government highly nervous.

"Do you mean that Lithuania will consider itself in a state of war with Poland if the latter begins to administer part of the neutral zone on Feb. 15?" inquired Lord Balfour sharply.

M. Sidzikanskas replied Article 13 of the covenant justified the attitude of the Lithuanian government, although Article 13 merely provides for peaceful arbitration in disputes.

"Must Fight Whole League."

"Article 13 is not concerned," interjected M. Viviani, hotly; "only articles 15 and 16. As Poland already has accepted the league plan, Lithuania alone is at fault. If Poland loyally executes the league plan Lithuania has not the right to oppose with force under penalty of an economic blockade provided in article 16. In this case all the member states must break all relations with Lithuania. Lithuania will not fight with Poland, but with the entire league."

With this pronouncement, M. Viviani proposed the adoption of the league project, which had been drawn up by Senor Saura, Spanish consul to Brussels, and M. Symans, Belgian delegate. It was approved unanimously, as the Lithuanian delegate walked out.

Ultimatum to Lithuania.

KOVNO, Lithuania, Feb. 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—An ultimatum demanding withdrawal from the Memel region of all armed elements and dissolution of the Simonaitis government and the committee for the salvation of "Little Lithuania," was handed to the Lithuanian minister of foreign affairs today by representatives of France, England, and Italy, according to an official statement.

If the specified measures are not fulfilled within seven days the allies intend to suspend diplomatic relations with Lithuania and turn over the matter to the league of nations, says the ultimatum which accuses the Lithuanian government of organizing, instructing, and financing the armed bands now in Memel.

The government statement telling of the ultimatum says the accusations are unfounded and that the Lithuanian government, although desiring to comply with the allied wishes, is physically incapable of carrying them out.

"With the best will possible, it cannot fulfill the terms of the ultimatum," the statement declares.

RYAN CONVICTION IN TIERNEY CASE STUNS FRIENDS

Detective Sergeant Frank J. Ryan, who shot and killed Timothy Tierney, a bailiff in the Muncipal court on Nov. 20, 1921, was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury in Judge John A. Swanson's court after two hours of deliberation yesterday afternoon.

The verdict was a surprise and caused such a commotion in the crowded courtroom that Assistant State's Attorney Michael A. Romano, the prosecutor, had to be escorted out by bailiffs.

Ryan will not be sentenced until after Feb. 6, when a motion for new trial, filed by his attorneys immediately after the rendering of the verdict, will be heard. In the event that this motion is denied counsel for the defense are expected to appeal.

The shooting took place during an altercation in the saloon of William Barys, 2601 West 15th street, in which Tierney is said to have insulted the policeman's sister. Ryan claimed that Tierney reached for a revolver before he fired, but testimony was introduced to show that the slain man never carried a weapon.

LEAGUE'S GHOST STIRS SENATORS TO HOT DEBATE

Democrats Call It Remedy for Europe's Ills.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—In another extensive and animated debate of the international situation in the senate today, Democratic members undertook to resuscitate the league of nations as the only available remedy for the ills of Europe.

Their efforts drew derisive responses from the Republican side, particularly from Senator Borah [Rep., Ida.], and Senator Brandegee [Rep., Conn.], who contended that membership in the league would only handicap the United States in anything that it might try to do to help the European situation.

The debate began when Senator King [Dem., Utah] brought up the appeal of German labor urging American intervention in the Ruhr crisis. Senator King took occasion to suggest that the United States would have been in a position to be immediately helpful if it had joined the league.

"Not a Matter for the League."

Senator Borah promptly pointed out that when an attempt was made to bring the Ruhr question before the league of nations Premier Poincare immediately blocked it, declaring it was not a matter for the league to consider.

"Had we begun four years ago and lent our aid and sympathy, might we not have been much more helpful than to begin now?" interrupted Senator Caraway [Dem., Ark.].

"There is where the senator and myself differ," replied Senator Borah. "I think the wrecking of the world is due to the Versailles treaty."

"The treaty itself I do not think anybody justified," said Senator Caraway. "It is a monstrosity in many of its features. But we did not keep it from becoming the law of Europe by refusing to take our place with Europe in its solution and we were withdrawn from any possibility of being helpful in the solution of these problems, which I will not say threaten to wreck Europe, because Europe is already wrecked."

United States Is Most Powerful.

"The truth of the matter is," Senator Brandegee said, "that all the nations of the world admit that the influence of the United States today, whether it be wise or beneficial, is paramount in the world and everybody knows it. In my opinion, if we had been in the league, we would have been utterly powerless compared to the position we occupy now."

Senator Williams [Dem., Miss.] insisted that the Democratic débacle of 1920 was not due to the league issue.

"There never was a greater mistake than the statement that the people voted against the league and against Woodrow Wilson," said Senator Williams. "A lot of people on both sides tried to make it the issue, but it never became the issue. The issue really was a lot of German-Americans, hyphenates, who voted against Mr. Wilson because he dared to war on the kaiser. Also a lot of Irish-Americans, also hyphenates, dooming him to hell because he had appeared to be in alliance with Great Britain, and besides that the reaction from the high taxes we had to collect to carry on the war. If there ever was a party that appeared in a national arena with contemptible and contemptuous motives, it was the Republican party in the campaign of 1920."

Pig's Eye Grafted on Boy's May Fail to Restore Sight

Paterson, N. J., Feb. 3.—Tests made upon Harold Lemonowics, to whose eye about ten days ago was grafted part of a pig's eye in an effort to restore his sight, indicated that he was unable to distinguish objects, it was learned today. The boy was reported now to be less able to distinguish between light and darkness than he was last week. Dr. Morgan declared the boy's eye was in a healthy condition and healing normally.

"HATE DIARY" WOMAN SHOOTS HER HUSBAND

Cynical View of Men Is Shown in Writings.

The line of reasoning which led Mrs. Lucille Kavanagh, fashionably dressed proprietress of a rooming house at 21 West Superior street, to shoot her husband, Patrick Henry Kavanagh, treasurer of the National Club of Athletics, in his office at 116 West Madison street yesterday morning, was revealed in a diary found in her room by police.

MRS. LUCILLE KAVANAGH. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The diary, which is virtually a "hymn of hate" against the male sex and a sermon on faithless husbands, reveals the reveries of a woman who had been duped by men until she planned to resort to murder if necessary to extract what she deemed to be a measure of happiness from "a man's world."

"Nearest One Will Get It."

"If I could only deal with women, I would not be so cynical," she wrote. "My mind is filled with hate. I will work one more year in this city, and God help the man I can get a bat at. The nearest one will get it."

It was in this frame of mind that she went to her husband's office, located between the Brevoort hotel and the La Salle theater, shortly after 8 o'clock yesterday morning. He had left her three months ago, as she claims, to "go with other women." She arrived a few moments after he had entered his office. Three Negro porters were the only others in the place at the time.

"I asked him to come back to me," Mrs. Kavanagh hysterically sobbed to the police. "He told me he wouldn't. I asked him who the blonde woman was I saw him with a few nights ago at Division and Clark streets when he jumped into a taxi and got away. He told me it was none of my business. I asked him for money. He said he had none. I asked him to let me see his bank book.

Denies Intent to Shoot.

"With that he grabbed hold of my purse and opened it. I had a revolver in it and I jerked it out. We had some words and there was a struggle. Without knowing what I was doing I shot him. I had merely taken the pistol along to scare him."

Mrs. Kavanagh's purse, almost torn to shreds, was found on the floor. On the way to the central station she pleaded with police to see that her husband was given the best of medical attention. At other times she kept repeating: "He deserved it. He deserved it."

Kavanagh was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where Dr. A. E. Halstead found the bullet had entered the right side of the abdomen.

"I didn't think she'd do it," Kavanagh moaned as he was being wheeled into the operating room.

Police Withhold Statement.

Following her preliminary examination Mrs. Kavanagh made a written statement to police which they refused to make public. Attorney Leslie Whipp, who represented her in several legal matters, arrived at the station shortly afterward and she was removed to the women's annex of the South Clark street station.

"We were married eight years ago," she said. "He left me to run around with other women and I wanted him to come back to me or else help support me. He hasn't contributed any money to my support since last October, and I have only what I have made out of my rooming house."

But the diary, scribbled in pencil in Mrs. Kavanagh's room, tells its own story. Under date of Jan. 29, 1923, this was written:

"He called and asked to see me. Said he had two propositions to offer. Well, this is a man's world, say what you will. Ask any woman in the business world if she is alone and has a bank account.

"At last I will have to admit it is a man's world. It took me thirty years to find that out, all right. I will try to make up for lost time.

"He forced his attentions on me—yes, that is the truth. In allowing him to come here it was purely business.

Writes of Vengeance.

"A —— a dog, I hate him—some day when I am on a better financial footing or when I get the opportunity to stick a knife in his ——. I believe this opportunity will come. My husband should be out in the business world for me instead of the dog doing as he is doing.

"Alone, alone, always and always alone. Watching from babyhood up for bread and bacon to eat. Clothes to wear to school that other children would make fun of. No school but what I walked miles to get to.

"Then six months a year snatched between wash days. No mother, no father, no real friends but my animal pets. [A dog and canary were found in the flat.]

Finds "Husbands False."

"How far superior the dumb animal.

"A few months of happiness with Frank until I found that also false.

"A few months with Harry, my husband, until that awful day when I found that letter. And then my heart broke. My husband was false in every way to me, and I was sick, tired, and disgusted. That was the year 1915 and early 1916 during the fair in San Francisco. Two years I didn't know what to do. I got out of Harry all the money, because I mistrusted and hated him.

"My faith has had cuts and jags all my life. When I found that letter I died. Five long years of hell! The only diversion I had from that old dull heart has been work, work, some dissipation, and—I must not lose or die.

"Men, how I hate them. I hope the day will soon come so that—damn them—I won't need them.

"Little narrow minded pigs, bighead pigs! The dear protected and conceited home women! It is a good thing for you, dear thing, that you don't know what goes on in hubby's office, factory, or store.

Her Estimate of Fidelity.

"Yes, your husband is true to you. He is different. Throw him in company, day by day, with some nice looking girl and, O, how different he will be then than what you expected——

"There surely would be race suicide if women knew what men really are.

"I will play the damned man, he is my only hope. I think of quick. Perhaps 1924 will find me in God's country. The wilderness for me. I can do without these degenerated pups who must have a city.

"Mind Filled with Hate."

"Mountains, birds, trees, solitude—that is pure and good; away from every one outside of dogs and animals. Wolves are more harmless than the people of this city.

"If I could only deal with women I would not be so cynical. My mind is filled with hate.

"I will work one more year in this city and God help the man I can get a bat at. The nearest one will get it."

Last Tuesday night Mrs. Kavanagh had scribbled the following entry:

"I saw last night the damned man. I was as nice as I could be to him. Sure hard work. How can women swallow that hot air that men try to hand them? Hot air? Bull! I would like to brain them. O, I would like to say 'Shut up, you fool. I am after the money; you are after what you can get.'

"The repulsive damn man! When I get my claws on him, and I don't believe it will be long until I will, then this poor little fool, as he thinks I am—O, he thinks he is surely going to get what he is after, and do me out of money besides.

Writes of Laying Trap.

"All right, old man. I will match wits with you. 'Heads I win, tails you lose.' Try to get any money I have. You want me and I need you until I can make a trap for you.

"He won't get away as he did three years ago. I think I know his game. Well, let him get by the lawyers. Well, anyway, he might soon have to call his hand—I intend to call his bluff."

2 YOUNG GIRLS HAD $472,544 INCOME IN 1922

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Two girls still in their early teens had a combined income last year of nearly $500,000, according to an accounting filed today in the Surrogate's court by their mother, their special guardian.

The girls are Adelaide Brevoort Close and her sister, Eleanor Post Close, granddaughters of Charles W. Post, cereal manufacturer of Battle Creek, Mich., who left them each approximately $1,000,000 in trust. The girls' mother, Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, divorced their father, Edward B. Close, in Connecticut in November, 1919, and was married to Edward F. Hutton the following July. She inherited half of her father's $20,000,000 estate.

The present value of the trust estates of her two daughters, according to today's accounting, are: Adelaide's, $1,447,001; and Eleanor's, $1,453,270.

WRIGLEY FILES LIBEL SUIT FOR KU KLUX LABEL

Seeks $50,000 to Punish Anti-Klan Organ.

While the editors of Tolerance, anti-Ku Klux Klan organ of the American Unity league, were fighting one another with injunction suits and assault and battery actions yesterday, William Wrigley Jr. stepped into the battle by filing suit for $50,000 damages against the magazine, charging libel.

Mr. Wrigley directed the filing of his suit by long distance telephone from Pasadena, Cal., insisting that his attorneys, Mayer, Meyer, Austrian & Platt, get the action into court at once, and the Superior court clerk's office was held open for three quarters of an hour after closing time so that the suit might be recorded.

Application Faked, Charge.

Mr. Wrigley based his suit on the publication in Tolerance of an alleged application for membership in the klan credited to him. The Tolerance Publishing company and five others, Robert E. Shepherd, the American Unity league, the American Unity League Publishing company, and Mrs. Bernard J. Mahony, were made defendants in the suit.

"I have just been talking with Mr. Wrigley by long distance in Pasadena," Attorney Isaac Mayer said. "He said that he does not propose to have any one forge his name to a document and escape unpunished. He is not a member of the Ku Klux Klan and he wants that known; and he has issued orders that this suit is to be prosecuted with great vigor."

Tolerance Lawyers Retract.

Immediately after the filing of the suit Attorneys Brown, Packard, Peckham, and Barnes, stating they were acting for the majority stockholders of the Tolerance Publishing company, issued a statement repudiating the publication of the matter concerning Mr. Wrigley.

A supplementary temporary injunction was obtained by Grady K. Rutledge, president of the Tolerance Publishing company and secretary of the Unity league, restraining Shepherd from interfering with the publication of the magazine. Hearing in the assault and battery action of Lionel Moise, former managing editor, against Shepherd, his son, Robert Jr., and Attorney Benj. H. Vanderveld, was continued at the lawyer's request until Feb. 6.

SOUTH BEND MAN TO SUE.

South Bend, Ind., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—"Tolerance," the Chicago anti-klan organ, which credited a Ku Klux Klan membership to Floyd O. Jellison, state's prosecutor in the Fiernan-Poulin paternity case, made an error, according to Jellison. He announced that he was looking up the law relative to carrying an action into the federal court against "Tolerance."

Jellison denied any klan connection.

MOTHER FAILS IN EFFORT TO AVERT HANGING OF SON

'Jaunty Jimmie' Smith Denied New Trial.

JIMMY SMITH.

Another vain attempt to save the life of James ["Jaunty Jimmie"] Smith, recently sentenced to hang for the murder of Frank O'Connell, crippled cigar dealer, was made by Mrs. Susie Smith, mother of the youth, yesterday afternoon. Accompanied by her attorney, the woman appeared before Judge Marcus Kavanagh in Criminal court and asked for a new trial for her son.

In his arguments to the court, Attorney Melville Thompson produced affidavits signed by four women and Smith, to the effect that Smith had entered a plea of guilty to the charge after being given a "guarantee" by a former district attorney that the court would sentence him to twenty-five years in prison.

Four Sign Affidavits.

The affidavits were signed by Mrs. Margaret Rein, 9538 Princeton avenue, an aunt of Smith; Mrs. Mae Swoyer, 9548 Princeton avenue, sister; his mother; Mrs. Cecile Busse, 4732 Kenwood avenue; and the condemned boy. All the above were present when the arrangements for Smith to plead guilty were made, it was alleged.

In answering the argument, First Assistant State's Attorney Edgar A. Jonas stated that he considered the assertion that an attorney for the defense had guaranteed Smith immunity from hanging was an unjust reflection upon him.

"There could have been no such agreement," said Mr. Jonas. "Smith's attorney came to me before the case was called and said he was going to plead his client guilty. I told him the plea would not stop me in making a demand on the court that Smith be sentenced to death."

Judge Denies Plea.

Judge Kavanagh heard the evidence and then denied the motion. A pardon from the governor or reversal of Judge Kavanagh's decision by the Illinois Supreme court are the only means left by which Smith can escape hanging. The execution is set for Feb. 23.

TURKS TO OFFER COUNTER TREATY TO ALLIES TODAY

U. S. Envoy Strives to Win Peace Agreement.

BULLETIN.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Mustapha Kemal, Turkish war chief, in a fighting speech at Smyrna declared Turkey will never yield on the Mosul question, according to a Central News dispatch.

LAUSANNE, Feb. 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Turkish delegation announced tonight that it will present a counter treaty project to the allies.

At midnight the entire Turkish delegation was still in close conference drafting a reply to be submitted to the allies tomorrow.

The allied delegations are awaiting with some anxiety Turkish action, some of them believing that the Turks will ask for further delay and perhaps time to refer back to Angora. Both the French and Italian delegates declared tonight that if the Turks did not sign the treaty tomorrow and the British departed they would follow suit.

Allies Make Final Concessions.

The allies have made their last concessions, which are so considerable that some of the delegates remark that if the Turks do not sign they must be mad.

Ambassador Child again played a leading part in these closing hours of the parley. Ismet Pasha spent two hours with the American ambassador, but was noncommittal as to whether he would place his signature on the treaty or reject it. Nevertheless, Mr. Child said afterwards: "I am optimistic."

The French spokesman referred to Ismet Pasha's "disconcerting attitude of reserve" in all of today's conversations. The general impression is that the Turks, with habitual Oriental disinclination to come to a decision, will hold back until the last moment, then sign.

Offer Compromise in Capitulations.

A copy of the allies' last compromise on capitulations, which was handed to Ismet Pasha today, was obtained. It is of especial interest to American residents in Turkey. So as not to offend Turkish pride, this will not be incorporated in the treaty of peace but will stand as a declaration by the Turkish delegation.

Turkey engages to employ legal counselors chosen from a list drawn by the permanent court of international justice. These counselors will participate in the preparation of legislative reforms and will be assigned to judicial districts of the courts of appeal at Constantinople and Smyrna and the ordinary courts at Samsun and Adana. They will not sit as judges but will have the right to receive complaints from foreigners respecting the administration of the law and submit such complaints to competent Turkish authorities in order to insure strict observance of the Turkish code.

Arrests of foreigners must be executed in accordance with the views of the counselors, while Turkey recognizes the legality of decisions in civil and commercial cases reached by outside arbitration.

Make Other Concessions.

Other concessions in the interest of peace were made by Lord Curzon, M. Bompard and Marquis Di Garroni, the chief allied delegates, at a lengthy conference with Ismet Pasha, head of the Turkish delegation this morning. The concessions, which were based upon the list of thirty points submitted by Ismet yesterday, included:

Acceptance of the nonlimitation of the number of Turkish troops in eastern Thrace, previously set at 20,000.

Reduction of the reparations of the allies from 15,000,000 to 12,000,000 Turkish gold pounds.

Acceptance of the distribution of the principal of the Ottoman debt among Turkey and the so-called succession states, formed from the old Turkish empire.

More British Go to Chanak.

VALETTA, Malta, Feb. 3.—Although the news from Lausanne is more satisfactory, the British authorities are apparently leaving nothing to chance. It is stated a strong military draft of several hundred men, landed here two days ago from England enroute to Chanak, in the area of the straits, will be sent on to Chanak at the earliest opportunity on board the cruiser Cardiff, which also will carry a quantity of munitions. The dreadnaughts Royal Sovereign and Resolution are expected to take on munitions on arriving at Malta tomorrow, leaving afterward for the near east.

COUE IS DUE HERE TUESDAY MORNING FOR FOUR LECTURES

M. EMILE COUE.

It will be good-by to the "stockyards odor" when M. Emile Coué starts his auto-suggestion working on Tuesday against the fragrance so characteristic of Chicago when the wind is right.

"There is one thing above all else I wish to see during my Chicago visit, and that is the stockyards," the distinguished French apostle of auto suggestion yesterday wired the local manager of his lectures.

Stockyard officials last night predicted that it would be difficult for Mr. Coué, "day by day, in every way," or in any way, to do away with the "stockyards smell." "But let him try his theory, we're for it," they agreed.

Owing to the great demand for seats for the two lectures originally planned for Chicago, M. Coué has added two more apearances to his schedule, which is now as follows: Tuesday, at 11 a. m. and at 2:30 p. m.; Wednesday, at 2:30 and 8:15 p. m. All the lectures will take place in Orchestra hall.

ZONING HAS DONE WONDERS, SAY ALL GOTHAMITES

And Has Been in Effect Only Seven Years.

BY AL CHASE.

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Old Doc Zoning, rapidly becoming one of America's most popular municipal surgeons, has been operating on Father Knickerbocker for the last seven years. And every New Yorker you talk with even the midwest born gentlemen with carefully cultivated Gotham accent, frankly credits the Doc with literally saving New York from all kinds of municipal illnesses.

Not even the most violent believer that everything on Manhattan Island is the way our Maker intended it should be, however, will admit that the Doc has completely cured the patient. Old Father Knickerbocker still has cramps in his tum tum from terrific traffic congestion and other minor municipal pains which will take years to remedy even under the most stringent zoning diet.

Chicago Will Have to Hurry.

The old doc, being strictly up to the second, has become a beauty specialist as well as a general surgeon and physician, and as a result New York, already one of the world's most attractive cities—if you close you eyes to its vast slum districts—is bound to become the most strikingly beautiful municipality in the world, unless Chicago steps on it and shoots ahead with its own zoning ordinance.

It took Gotham six years of hard pioneering to work out its zoning program. The ordinance was passed in 1916 and has been in active successful operation ever since — it'll be seven years in July.

New York has had four great municipal problems to solve in latter years—the question of water supply, rapid transit, port development, and finally the one which zoning is rapidly solving, the chaotic building conditions which have resulted in blighted districts, canion streets, and the driving of people out of the city to pleasanter living quarters in neighboring states.

Important as Subways.

It cost New York approximately $325,000,000 to solve the transit problem—and untold miles of new subway are planned. It cost in the neighborhood of $77,000 to get zoning under way—and most New Yorkers admitted it's as important as subways.

You can't find a New Yorker, small shopkeeper or millionaire department store head, suburbanite, downtown clerk, or uptown billionaire banker, who won't admit zoning has done wonders for his town and is going to do more remarkable things.

Probably the most far reaching result, one that affects every owner of property, is the stabilizing of realty values and at the same time insuring permanency of its use. Residence streets will remain residence streets and not have garages and stores sprinkled in when the spirit and bank balance moves certain owners. And business thoroughfares will remain devoted to business.

Rejuvenates "Blighted" Spots.

There hasn't been what they call a "blighted district" developed in New York since zoning went into effect. Instead several badly blighted districts have been so rapidly rejuvenated by Doc Zoning's surgical skill that the patient has been almost as surprised as the neighbors. And when one remembers that blighted districts in any city means an economic loss of millions, the value of prompt zoning can be seen.

No one in New York, so far as I can find out, will give specific figures on what zoning has accomplished. They hint in carefully worded sentences that billions have been saved or earned property owners through appreciation in values; through saving property from depreciation, and from stabilization; that the city is now in a position to grow normally into its logical position among world cities, and that the health and happiness and prosperity of the individual New Yorker has been furthered.

New York would no sooner think of giving up its fire or health departments than it would give up its zoning law," declared Attorney Edward M. Bassett.

DIVORCES WIFE WHO NEGLECTED CHILD FOR CLUBS

A decree of divorce granted yesterday to Arthur C. Boule from Mrs. Clemence R. Boule, prominent in various women's organizations, probably will result in Dorothy Boule, 13 year old daughter of the couple, spending the rest of her juvenile years in an institution. Boule is cashier for Conkling, Price & Webb, an insurance company, with offices at 174 West Jackson boulevard.

Mr. Boule charged his wife with infidelity, testifying that she neglected their daughter to attend her club meetings and to entertain Jack Glaser, 3032 Sheffield avenue. Glaser is chief investigator for Attorney General Edward J. Brundage.

Admits Neglect of Child.

"She would tie the key to the house around Dorothy's neck and send her to her music instructor," Mr. Boule told Judge Friend. "Then she would go to her club meetings."

Mrs. Boule, who formerly was worthy matron of the Standard chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, admitted on the witness stand that she had neglected the child, stating that she knew now that she had cared more for her organizations than she did for her own daughter. She denied any improper conduct with Glaser, and charged her husband with cruelty

Mother's Plea Debied.

Both the father and mother asked custody of Dorothy, but Judge Friend denied the plea of Mrs. Boule.

"If any one would get the custody of the child, it would be the father," the judge said, "but I understand that he would rather have her in an institution where she will get the proper care. Therefore, I will have to sustain the request."

RALPH DORT, SON OF AUTO BUILDER, REPORTED DEAD

Cable reports received yesterday from Paris contain a rumor of the death in Geneva, Switzerland, of Ralph Dort, son of Josiah Dort, head of the Dort Motor Car company of Flint, Mich. Young Dort is said to have been suffering from nervous troubles growing out of shell shock, and Swiss police officials are reported to be conducting an investigation.

Dort's father said last night that his son was "wayward—one of the kind that gets along best away from home." He said he had heard no word from his son since Christmas and had no report of his death. He had heard indirectly that his son, who had been in Paris, had lately gone to Geneva. The son, who is 32 and a son by a first wife, traveled for his father's firm until a break between himself and his father, when the latter established a trust fund for his son and turned him out on his own.

VETS OF MANY WARS GO OVER TOP FOR LUEDER

Ex-Service Men's Club to Attack at Once.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Spanish war comrades of Arthur C. Lueder, Republican coalition candidate for mayor, joined with overseas veterans and men who saw service in the civil war, the Indian wars and the Mexican troubles joined in the formal organization yesterday of the Ex-Service Men's Lueder club.

Following a luncheon at the Hamilton club, officers and an executive committee to be known as the advisory staff were chosen, resolutions were passed, plans for campaign work were discussed and Candidate Lueder spoke briefly, emphasizing his idea of the importance of service.

It was announced that general headquarters will be opened in connection with the regular campaign headquarters some time this week and that active fighting then will be begun in all wards. An active recruiting campaign will be begun at once, special meetings for ex-service men will be held and ex-service men will be sent as speakers to the regular campaign meetings.

These Officers Chosen.

The officers elected were the following:

Commander in chief .....Roger V. Flory
General .....Louis K. Peifer
Major General .....Thomas K. Davey
Adjutant General .....Edward E. Mohr
Secretary of the Treasury...Harry F. Hamlin
Judge Advocate .....Abraham Greenfield
Sergeant-at-Arms .....William A. Purdy

The roster of the advisory staff is not complete but up to date it includes the following:

Gen. George Bell Jr.	Gen. Joseph B. Sanborn
Gen. Walter A. Robbins	Archie Benson
Harry Wertz	John Peoples
R. W. Schroeder	George V. Lauman
J. C. Pollock	Charles T. Wilt
Reeve C. Andrews	Harry F. Hamlin
Harry L. Brin	Thomas K. Davey
George F. Lee	Charles A. Deneen
Earl B. Dickerson	Harry N. Pritzker
Abraham Greenfield	William A. Purdy
Alfred B. Horder	John E. Scully
Paul S. Hoar	Philip R. Davis

Who They Are.

Gen. Robbins is a veteran of the cavalry corps of the army of the Potomac. Archie Benson and John Peoples, marines, were both wounded at Chateau Thierry. Schroeder set a world's record for altitude in the aviation corps. Maj. Hamlin was attached to headquarters of the thirty-third division. Lieut. Pollock was Lueder's immediate commander in the old first infantry in Cuba. Lieut. Col. Lauman was higher up in the same unit. Maj. Lee was in the air service but also is a veteran of the Indian wars, the Boxer rebellion, the Spanish war, and the Philippine insurrection. Others listed have equally interesting records.

The resolutions, presented by Charles Ashley Deneen, son of former Gov. Charles S. Deneen, indorsed Lueder's record as soldier, business man, and postmaster.

Address by Lueder.

Candidate Lueder spoke of "service as the supreme commitment of life."

"I doubt that a truer word was ever spoken," he said. "Ever since I was a young man I have held that he who gives generously in service is blessed with the greatest opportunities. I feel that the service I have given in various organizations led to my being considered for the office of postmaster. As postmaster I tried to give the people the service to which they were entitled and I have an idea that this service had something to do with the action of the citizens' committee in recommending me as a candidate for the mayoralty.

"I want to assure you that if I am elected I shall endeavor to serve not one portion of the people alone, not merely one group of men and women but I shall be mayor for all the people all the time. And if I win we'll fly above the city hall the banner of honesty, efficiency, and economy."

Columbia post No. 2 of the United States Spanish War Veterans adopted resolutions indorsing Lueder Friday night. This is the post of which he is a member. Other posts are expected to follow suit.

Municipal Judge Barasa, who has announced his candidacy against Lueder, made public a platform of twenty planks. The first six were devoted to personal liberty, free speech, and similar subjects. Friends of William H. Wesbey, another candidate, asserted that his boom has spread from the north to the south and west sides. Sheldon Clark's friends reported he had received mighty bad news from New York. New York is the headquarters of the Sinclair Oil company, of which Clark is vice president.

Iroquois Club Dinner.

In recognition of the work of the Democratic leaders and managing committee in establishing complete harmony behind Judge William E. Dever, the only mayoralty candidate in the field on the Democratic side, the Iroquois club will give a dinner in their honor at the Hotel Sherman on Feb. 19.

More than 1,000 Democrats, including many who, while important in the life of the city, ordinarily pay little attention to organization politics, have been invited. The guests will be the leaders to whom the club gives the credit for the new unification—George E. Brennan, William L. O'Connell, Robert M. Sweitzer and County Judge Jarecki, and the fifty members of the managing committee. Judge Dever, of course, also will be a guest.

ON THE LUEDER FIRING LINE

Veterans of many campaigns and wars who mustered in yesterday at the Hamilton club as the Ex-Service Men's Lueder club. Col. John V. Clinnin is shaking hands with Mr. Lueder, a Spanish-American war veteran. Others in the group are C. H. Graham, G. N. Malstrom, D. S. Musser, A. B. Horder, George F. Lee, George W. Richardson, A. Greenfield, H. A. Stowell, Arthur Hufton, William Purdy, and C. G. Avery.

POLITICAL NOTES

Despite contrary reports, the "better council" unit of the Forty-first ward failed to agree on a candidate, but J. J. Manning, chairman of the group, and other leading citizens of the ward have put Maj. Frank W. Barber, a 33d division veteran, in the race. It is believed the Brundage and Deneen forces will unite on him to defeat Ald. E. R. Armitage, a Thompson tool.

Miss Amelia Sears will address the Fortieth Ward Citizens' association at its headquarters, 3357 Lawrence avenue, tomorrow night. The association is backing I. N. Chellew for alderman.

Officers of Pulaski post of the American Legion issued a statement yesterday denouncing Congressman Stanley Kunz for refusing to back an ex-service man for alderman and saying: "The soldiers are all right in time of war, but now that it is over they are no more than a public nuisance."

Eighty-sixth division veterans have completed their own organization to support John J. Sullivan, a candidate in the Seventeenth ward. Its officers include Capt. William Meyering, Lieut. Timothy Dunne, and Private Daniel Winfield.

DANCER PREFERS SOVIET FREEDOM TO BRAND IN U. S.

Vodka Beats Moonshine, Isadora Says.

New York, Feb. 3.—Isadora Duncan, whose classical dances created an uproar in various cities on her recent tour of the United States, sailed for Paris today on the steamship George Washington after firing a broadside at America and things American. Winding and unwinding a brilliant red scarf which she wore around her neck, the dancer exclaimed:

"I would rather live in Russia on black bread and vodka than in the United States at the best hotels. We have freedom in Russia. Here the people and capitalistic newspapers—because I came here to teach them what freedom is—ruined my promised prosperous tour.

"I am against prohibition, newspaper photographers, and the world in general that lies this side of Paris and Moscow. The people in this country do not want art. They don't know what it is. I came here to tell them of art and they put me on Ellis Island.

Can't Stop Her Thinking.

"The government here tries to persecute persons who speak freely, but they can't stop my thinking."

Warmed up to her subject, Miss Duncan, who is returning to Paris and Moscow to assume charge of schools for instructing children in classical dancing, continued:

"Freedom here? Every time I got up or went to bed the people wanted to know what I ate and what I drank. Why, I got up the other morning to find in the morning newspapers a story to the effect that my beloved Serge had given me a black eye in a Bronx flat.

"It's a darned lie. I don't know where the Bronx is. I was never there.

"Am I coming back here? I don't know.

Raps Our Liquor.

"No prohibition country for mine. Some of the liquor I drank here would kill an elephant. It would have killed me if I had stayed much longer.

"If I came here to borrow money as a foreign representative or banker I'd get a great reception. But as a recognized artist, I get Ellis island. They treated me as a dangerous revolutionist.

"Well, I am a revolutionist. So is my husband. All real artists are. I don't mean that they are bolshevists, but that they are revolutionary at heart. They have to be."

SECOND INFANTRY TAKES HIGH RANK IN MARKSMANSHIP

Target practice recently completed at Fort Sheridan by members of the 2d infantry, U. S. A., shows that organization to be one of the most efficient in the use of small arms, according to officers at the post. almost 93 per cent of those taking the tests were rated marksmen or higher.

MAJ. J. A. DOE.

The tests were conducted under the supervision of Maj. John A. Doe, son of Dr. and Mrs. A. Doe of 2344 Kedzie boulevard. Maj. Doe was appointed to the military academy in 1910 and, after graduation in 1914, served in various stations in Texas and Arizona, going overseas with the 5th division. He commanded the 14th and 15th machine gun battalions at St. Mihiel and in the Meuse-Argonne offensives. He recently completed a three year term at the Infantry school at Fort Benning, Ga.

BRITAIN TO BUILD 2 NEW WARSHIPS; COST IS $50,000,000

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The British government has awarded contracts for the building of two new capital ships, according to an official report to the United States department of commerce from London. These ships may be constructed by Great Britain without violation of the terms of the naval treaty negotiated at the Washington conference a year ago, it was stated by American officials today.

One of the ships will be built by the Cammell-Laird company and the other by the Armstrong-Whitworth company. About $50,000,000 will be expended by the two companies in wages during the building of the ships, and it is expected that construction work will be started almost at once. Employment will be furnished to an average of 21,000 men over a two years period.

NOONAN, TRANT, LEAD DETECTIVES IN EFFICIENCY

Sergts. John Noonan and Michael Trant, who led the efficiency roll of the detective bureau in 1922, were the leading two man team for the first month in 1923, with a score of 312 points, according to announcement made yesterday by Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes.

ISOLATE GERM OF FLU IN INSTITUTE OF ROCKEFELLERS

Science Looks at Slayer of Many Millions.

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The cause of influenza has been found and specialists of the Rockefeller institute of medical research have succeeded in isolating the germ. This important announcement, one of the most significant in recent medical history, was made by Dr. Simon W. Flexner, director of the institute today. Dr. Flexner radiographed the news from Schnectady.

The discovery represents the triumph of medical science over one of the most obstinate problems ever encountered. Two years ago Dr. Flexner announced that his laboratory had been able to segregate masses of the influenza germs, but because each germ was so extremely small it was found impossible then to separate them into individual units.

This is what has been accomplished now. The bacilli are so very small that each must be magnified 1,000 times to be visible to the eye.

From May, 1918, to March, 1919, influenza killed more than 25,000,000 persons in its sweep of the entire world. Only 7,068,300 men were killed in the fifty-one months of the world war.

"Investigation has resulted in the discovery of a previously unknown and very minute germ present in the nose and throat during the first thirty-six hours of the influenza infection," said Dr. Flexner. "This bacillus has never been found in healthy persons nor in those sick with other diseases, but when injected into the windpipes of rabbits it produces effects similar to those seen in human beings in several stages of influenza."

Print Concerns Draw Up New State Law.

Declaring that present statutes aimed against the purveyors of illicit whisky are "inadquate and ridiculously puerile," a group of business men, forming the membership of the Typothetae, representative of 400 large printing establishments in Chicago, announced yesterday the launching of a campaign for enactment of a state law making conviction for bootleggers punishable by long penitentiary sentences.

At a recent meeting of the organization the legislation committee was urged to draw up a plan looking toward passage of the proposed new statute.

Win Senator's Support.

Last night, it became known, the committee had proceeded to the point of interesting State Senator James J. Barbour, who is expected to introduce the measure.

"I have long realized our present laws are insufficient to cope with the situation," said Senator Barbour, following a conference with William C. Hollister, chairman of the legislation committee. "But we can make no positive announcement yet. After my return from Springfield next week perhaps we will get the matter whipped into shape.

"I will say offhand though that I'd favor a bill that will provide a prison term of from one to fourteen years for convicted moonshiners."

Sixty Deaths from Poison Liquor.

Senator Barbour declared that "something must be done" about a "situation that has brought about the deaths of more than sixty persons in Chicago in the last three months presumably from the drinking of poison in the guise of whisky."

"It is the brand of bootlegger who is flagrantly vending poison about our streets and in these little holes in the wall formerly dignified by the name of saloon that we want most to get at," declared the senator. "But, of course, the spirit of our bill will be for the total abolishment of the illicit liquor traffic."

Mr. Hollister, who is president of the Champlin Law Printing company said that the members of the typothetae had long considered with concern the increasing number of "wet spots" about their plants

College students, janitors, instructors, chauffeurs, and men professing several other occupations—nineteen in all—were arrested in a raid on an alleged "moonshine" distributing center at 112 Curtis street by Lieut. William Schoemaker and his squad from the detective bureau last night.

JACKIE COOGAN VISITS CHICAGO

Jackie Coogan, having concluded a million dollar film contract in the west, finds pressing business calls him to Chicago. With the 8 year old man of affairs are his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Coogan, posing at the Northwestern station. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Meets "Jackie" Frost

Jackie Coogan, the 8 year old business man of the movies, who signed a million dollar [press agent figures] contract some three weeks ago in the balmy breezes of southern California, dropped off in Chicago yesterday.

A blustering northwester whipped Mr. Coogan's expensive coat and laid icy hands on his bare knees as he stepped from a train at the Northwestern station, and the prodigy of the pictures ejaculated, "Gee, whiz, ain't it awful!"

Then the opulent actor cuffed his ears a couple of times, shook hands with Marcus Loew, his employer; Frank Behring of the Hotel Sherman, his host here, and posed.

Jack's business will be done this afternoon when he signs a release at the office of Balaban and Katz for his latest picture, "Daddy." After that he is going along with Papa and Mamma Coogan to visit some other Coogans in New York.

"BANDIT QUEEN" LURED INTO CRIME BY MEN, SHE SAYS

Sobbing hysterically, Wilma McMullin, brown eyed and pretty, confessed yesterday, according to police, that she lured to a north side apartment Joseph Kirschner, 4735 Carlisle avenue, so her four men confederates might rob him of $79. When the "bandit queen," who lives at 6045 Kenwood avenue, and her alleged assistants were arraigned in South Clark street court a continuance was granted to next Wednesday.

"The four men were introduced to me by a girl friend while I was working in a south side bank," said the girl. "That was a month ago. At first I refused to assist them in robberies, but finally consented. Kirschner was our first and only victim."

The four, held with the girl under $10,000 bonds, gave the names of Ted Drummond, 25, 4015 Lake Park avenue; William Strucher, 21, 4878 Magnolia avenue; Paul Cave, 24, 4435 Prairie avenue, and Arthur College, 25, 2641 South Michigan avenue.

FATHER BLAMES INTERNE IN GIRL'S PLUNGE TO DEATH

A revised verdict to the effect that "because of the note she left we believe she committed suicide with previous intent" was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury at the reopened inquest on Miss Jeanette Lovenhart, 25 years old, 362 East 26th street. Miss Lovenhart jumped from a fifth floor window of St. Luke's hospital, where she had been a patient for over two months, last Thursday. The note referred to was the one addressed "Dear Everybody," in which she detailed arrangements for disposal of her money.

Leopold Lovenhart, father of the dead girl, said after the inquest that he blamed an interne of the hospital for his daughter's act. "I have learned," he said, "that an interne told my daughter, the night before she was found, that she would have to stay three or four months more and be incapacitated for another six months. He also advised against marriage."

EMBASSY LIQUOR QUESTION AGAIN HEARD IN HOUSE

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—A congressional investigation of the extent to which intoxicating liquors which come into Washington consigned to foreign embassies and legations may be involved in violation of the prohibition enforcement act in the capital may folow introduction of resolutions of inquiry into the subject in the house today by Representative Cramton [Rep., Mich.], one of the dry leaders.

Representative Cramton submitted two resolutions, one asking the treasury department for a statement in detail of all importations of liquors for the diplomatic corps during the last three years under national prohibition, the regulations governing such appropriations, and under what law the department acts.

Of the state department the resolution asks what regulations have been adopted, what certificates of identification have been issued, and under what law the department acts.

"Of late," said Representative Cramton, "the importation and use of liquors for foreign embassies and legations has been the subject of country-wide discussion.

"The other day the President said the question of the amount of liquor to be received by the diplomatic corps here is a matter for congress to consider rather than the executive.

"It is time congress and the country knew the facts about this—knew whether that which has been permitted as a courtesy is being used as a cover for abuses."

Hearings on Lakes to Gulf Waterway Plans in April

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The special committee appointed by the senate to investigate the proposed nine foot channel for the gulf to the lakes waterway will go to Chicago and open hearings in April.

SENATORS TRY TO KICK SLATS OUT OF PORK BARREL

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—That the pork barrel is in for a hard battering was plainly indicated today, when the senate began consideration of the army appropriation bill, which contains the $56,000,000 appropriation for rivers and harbors.

Senator Borah [Rep., Idaho] gave notice that he would move to separate the rivers and harbors appropriation from the bill proper, as not a proper part of the army bill. The Idaho senator declared that "the budget had met its match when it encountered the pork barrel," and said he would have a great deal more to say on the subject next week.

Senator Smoot [Rep., Utah] and Senator King [Dem., Utah] are planning to take a leading part in the fight against the rivers and harbors appropriation. They are preparing speeches exposing some of the projects which they regard as particularly flagrant.

WOMAN FARMER QUITS THE PLOW TO TAKE UP PEN

Mrs. Edith W. Locke, 45 years old, until last week a farmer at Braidwood, Ill., fled into Chicago yesterday and took a room to remain until she has mastered every trick of the journalistic trade. She has sold her farm, her cows, chickens, horses. She is rid of her plows, her rakes, and her wagons. Mrs. Locke entered the Medill School of Journalism yesterday. She contracted to take the full course. And she is going to stay until she has completed the work, she asserts.

Her son, Theron Locke, is a sophomore at Northwestern university. He was surprised by the news.

"But I'm tickled to death," he said.

Not a Neophyte.

Mrs. Locke has done some newspaper work, having been employed on the Joliet Herald, but she says she wants to "perfect her style."

"Yes, sir, I've sold my farm," she said. "I've decided that I can't get along without this education. I have worked on newspapers before. I never had to go to 'em for a job. They always sent for me. But I figure that my style may be all wrong and I'm going to learn how to do it the right way.

"I wanted to come up here last September, but I had the farm and I just couldn't get away, but now I've cleaned up everything and they can't stop me now. Of course, I wouldn't sell my Berkshire hogs, but I've rented them out all over the state and—well, I'd even sell them if I had to have funds to pay my way through the school.

Her Course Outlined.

"This method may take five years, but I'm going through with it. Prof. Harrington has mapped out my training. It includes short story writing, modern tendencies, literature, and what all I don't know."

Mrs. Locke was married twenty-five years ago. Her husband died the following year, shortly before twins were born.

"I've always wanted to write, but I had to work too hard," Mrs. Locke said. "But now I've got the money necessary to obtain instruction."

Mrs. Locke submitted several short stories she had written to Prof. H. F. Harrington, head of the Medill school.

"I'm surprised," he said after reading them. "Mrs. Locke writes mighty well. I am delighted to have her in our school. She is a find."

COURT CASTS OUT HAMON-ROHRER DIVORCE ORDER

Mrs. Georgia Rohrer, widow of Jake L. Hamon, slain Oklahoma politician and oil millionaire, and her second husband, William L. Rohrer, capitalist and art collector, are man and wife again. Yesterday Judge Walter P. Steffen in the Superior court set aside a decree of divorce granted Mrs. Rohrer several weeks ago.

MRS. GEORGIA HAMON ROHRER.

The action was taken on the filing of an affidavit by Mrs. Rohrer that the estate of Mr. Hamon, purported to amount to several million dollars, is, in reality, insolvent, and consequently she is unable to support herself without allmony from Mr. Rohrer.

Unable to Earn Living, She Says.

"I have been a married woman for many years," the affidavit states in part, "and I have not earned my living for a long time. I was always dependent upon others for my support, especially my father, Jasper Perkins.

"I expected to receive enough money from the estate of my late husband, Jake Hamon, to support me properly, but now I have been informed that the estate is insolvent and I will receive nothing."

Mrs. Rohrer's suit still stands and will be tried again in two or three weeks.

Cross Bill Planned by Rohrer.

Attorney Henry M. Hagen, representing Mr. Rohrer, stated that Mrs. Hamon has an income of $650 a month, but he made no objection to having the decree set aside. He intimated that Rohrer will probably file a cross bill against his wife and that the suit will be hotly contested.

At the divorce hearing three weeks ago, which Rohrer did not contest, Mrs. Rohrer testified that her year of married life with him had been one of torture. She waived alimony and dower rights to his estate and accepted his waiver of any interest in the Hamon estate, then thought to be worth more than $2,000,000.

BEG YOUR PARDON!

William R. Bowlin, assistant principal of the Lindblom High school, states that the boys who are held as responsible for damage done in the store of Matt Kleinbauer, 6136 South Winchester avenue, recently during a clash between the pupils of the Lindblom High school and the Wendell Phillips school, are not members of his school.

QUITS HAMON ESTATE

Ardmore, Okla., Feb. 3.—Notice of his resignation as administrator of the estate of the late Jake L. Hamon of Ardmore has been filed in County court here by Frank L. Ketch, it became known today. Ketch was Hamon's business manager.

The Hamon estate was held to be insolvent at a hearing Jan. 23. Judge Winfrey held that the federal revenue department has legel claim to $42,000 inheritance tax sought from the widow, Mrs. Georgia Hamon Rohrer of Chicago.

Figures on the condition of the estate were not available today and Ketch refused to discuss the matter, declaring he would "have nothing to do with Mrs. Hamon or any of her statements."

Wife Must Not Betray Husband's Liquor Secrets

Spokane, Wash., Feb. 3.—Wives have no right to show peace officers where their husbands' liquor stocks are hidden unless said husbands specifically authorize them to do so, Superior Judge Oswald held here in ruling out as evidence samples of alleged intoxicating liquors seized in a raid on the home of Al Champaigne.

MILLION IN NEW AUTO BUSINESS AS SHOW CLOSES

The twenty-third National Automobile show closed its doors last night while scores of motor devotees still clamored for a final inspection of the industry's 1923 offerings. First official estimates indicate a total attendance for the week of 350,000, a daily average of at least 50,000 paid admissions.

Although there is no official tabulation of car sales available, directors of the show declared last night that the retail orders booked in the Coliseum, Annex, and Armory and as a direct result of the exhibit will run well over the million dollar mark.

New Mark Each Year.

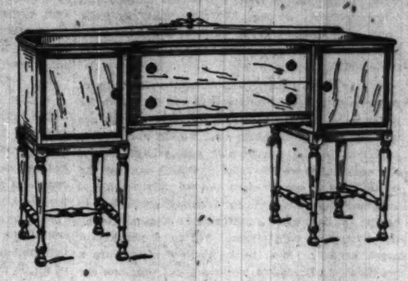
"Public interest in automobiles and their development has never before been so strikingly illustrated," declared S. A. Miles, general manager of the exposition, after receiving the first box office reports.

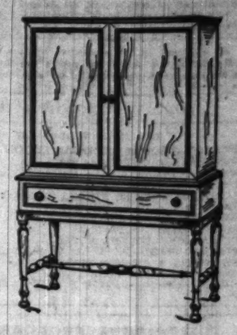
"Each year at the close of both New York and Chicago shows the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, under whose direction they are staged, has been convinced that people will never again patronize the shows with the same enthusiasm. And each year the interest has grown, together with the crowds and the sales records.

Foreign Cars Fare Well.

Reports following the close of the eighth annual automobile salon in the Drake hotel established another record. A tabulation of sales showed retail orders for fine cars and special bodies amounting to approximately $650,000, in addition to orders from middle west dealers for de luxe chassis and custom bodies. As a result the exhibitors are predicting a big year for the fine motor car and custom body. Practically every car exhibited in the salon will be operating on Chicago boulevards this week, according to the exhibitors.

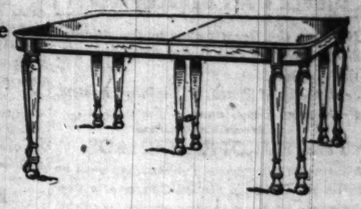
Scholle's Semi-Annual Sale of Good Furniture



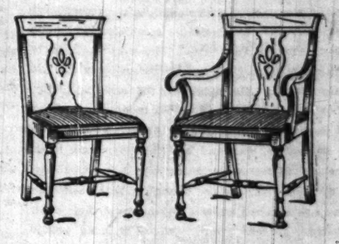


Hepplewhite Dining Room Suite in Mahogany and Maple and Walnut and Maple

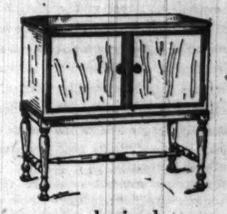
Sideboard, Dining Table, Cabinet, 5 Chairs, Serving Cabinet, 1 Arm Chair, 10 Pieces, Sale Price..$500



YOU'LL have a new idea about sales—about Scholle sales, anyway—after you see the character of furniture we have for you here.



You may think of a sale as a general reduction of prices in order to "get rid" of something. We don't. We look upon our sales as opportunities to do some unusual "value giving"; furniture of Scholle quality at attractively low prices. If you're familiar with Scholle sale, you know just what that means.



There are some old pieces in this sale; nothing the matter with them; they're just not fresh stock. But for the most part, every piece we're showing is new; just from the factory. We bought them some time ago, at very low prices; they'd cost us considerably more now; and we're passing along to you the price advantage we obtained.

You know our guarantee, of course; you're satisfied or your money back; it applies to everything we sell—and no "strings tied to it."

Scholle sales have made February a more important month. It's a good time to buy furniture; and Scholle quality means there's nothing better.

You'll find a lot of interesting things listed here:

THE EUROPEAN CHAOS.

A survey of the European situation by such an observer as the Italian historian, Ferrero, is especially worthy of American attention, for his opinion is based not only on knowledge of the sources of action of the various participants in the struggle but upon a considerable measure of philosophic detachment. There is very little of either in this country, and we recommend Ferrero's summary in the January Atlantic. He begins with the following picture of conditions: "From month to month the condition of Europe continues to grow worse. The effects of a monstrous war and an unhappy peace make themselves felt with increasing force. Confusion multiplies. Nations are wrangling with each other and are crushed under the burden of their debts. Distrust spreads apace. Capital is being wasted, or concealed. Governments are losing what little authority they still possess and are headed toward bankruptcy. Misery, unemployment, and the sullen discontent of the populace are growing. Peace is preserved only by general prostration. We are not even assured that famine, that ancient scourge of humanity, long exiled to the remote places of the orient, may not lift its head again in central and southern Europe."

A dark picture, but actuality. Out of such a condition, says Ferrero, a new order will some day be born, but at the present stage we have not reached "the point at which we can even discuss measures and methods for converting chaos into order."

We commend this opinion to the impatient partisans who have been insisting that we must "do something." That is our amiable optimism. With little consideration of the lessons of human experience but an unlimited confidence in tinkering with human fate, we confront any evil, however ancient, deep rooted, or complicated, with the naïve demand that something must be done about it. This usually means for us passing resolutions or enacting laws. We are great believers in words, and our pleasant expectation is that when we have stated or restated a problem we have solved it.

The European mind is not able to enjoy this exhilarating treatment of problems. It is too full of the sediment of past sorrows and trials. Ferrero at least knows how Europe came to be what Europe is and he cannot adopt easy devices to change the deep flowing currents of its destiny. He does not even mention the league of nations. He does give us his analysis of the causes of the existing chaos, which, he says, are three—namely: the instability of eastern Europe, resulting from the peace treaties, international indebtedness, and the growing tension between France and Germany.

As to the instability of eastern Europe, to which we repeatedly call the attention of our readers in discussing the problem of peace and restoration, he points out that the capital blunder lay in attempting to reconstruct that region without the aid of either Germany or Russia, and especially the failure to see that the bolshevist revolution made it imperative for the victors to impose mild conditions on Germany. "What we needed then was the smile of an Alexander I., of a Talleyrand, of a Metternich; because, just as Europe could not be saved in 1815 except with the aid and consent of France, so, in 1919, she was predestined to ruin without the aid and consent of Germany."

The rearrangement of eastern Europe, in other words, is an act not of agreement but of superior force, a settlement imposed, which will stay settled only so long as Russia, Germany, and Hungary are enchained, and they cannot be kept in chains. But the imposed settlement, Ferrero recognizes, was a natural result of the resentment aroused by the war, and we cannot hope for correction until the nations have learned in suffering and sorrow that it is a mistake.

As to the international debts, Ferrero holds that, while the American doctrine that all debts should be paid is self-consistent and logical, no government will ever be able to extract from its taxpayers the sums required to fulfill its obligations. The only way out is for creditors to reduce their claims as much as possible and for debtors to exert themselves to the utmost to pay their debts upon a reduced basis. "America," says Ferrero, "who will sacrifice most by this arrangement, should be compensated by political advantages." THE TRIBUNE has pointed out one way of doing this with respect to the British and French debts to us; that is, by ceding to us the British and French islands off our coast. This would involve no economic loss to either debtor and would in some measure compensate us for the sacrifices required for international debt adjustment.

Unless this reduction is agreed upon in time, Ferrero warns that Europe will suffer a moral cataclysm, and yet he asks: "How can we expect one government to forgive the debts of another so long as the debtor country continues to lavish money at home with the reckless hand that every government" (except the British) "is using at present?"

As for the relation of France and Germany, which is the key to peace, Ferrero admits that the general opinion in France is that Germany could pay even more than is demanded of her, an opinion based on fairly accurate estimates of Germany's wealth before the war, and the conclusion is therefore drawn that Germany is willfully defaulting upon her obligations because the allies are not doing what they ought to do to force her to fulfill them. The task in hand, says Ferrero, is to convert France, not merely her government but the rank and file of her citizens.

What shall we do? "Enforce a treaty that is unenforceable? Square a circle? In truth," confesses Ferrero, "I do not know what an honest and informed adviser can suggest to our government in this most terrible crisis that Europe has confronted for centuries. We must wait," he feels, "and trust to the healing hand of time, aided by human wisdom, if any trace of that is still left in the world."

This is a conclusion hard especially for hopeful America to adopt. Perhaps it is not necessary for America to wait in complete inaction. If we are wise we shall be thankful that we did not involve ourselves in the inextricable embarrassments of the treaties, but we shall also anxiously canvass the possibilities of our freedom and we may be able to do something practical by friendly mediation to hasten the arrival of a better state of mind among the struggling contestants. We need not expect much at first. We cannot hope to formulate a practicable adjustment while present opinions are held in Europe, but we may be able tactfully to bring about the beginning of the more moderate spirit without which the ruin of Europe is certain. We cannot profitably propose terms of readjustment until the European governments and peoples are convinced that the peace treaties are unenforceable and worse. We do not forget that conferences thus far have been futile or worse, but it does not follow that a time will come, and may be hastened by our mediation, when yet another conference, perhaps in Washington, may bring results.

NEEDS OF THE STATE UNIVERSITY.

The intelligence of the people of Illinois has created a state institution of the higher learning. It is an institution to be proud of, one of the foremost universities of the United States. It has an attendance of over 9,000 students, which indicates that its privileges are appreciated by the people of the state.

There is no question, therefore, of whether the commonwealth of Illinois is to have a state university. That question long ago was answered in the affirmative. The only question, if there is any question, is as to how we shall support and advance the institution. At each assembly is presented the needs of the university and provision is made for its maintenance for the succeeding legislative period or biennium. Of the present legislature the authorities of the university, having considered its pressing needs and formulated a budget of expenditure for the biennium, ask for $8,000,000 for operating expenses and $2,500,000 for building.

As to the operating budget we believe there can be no intelligent challenge unless on behalf of increase. Inquiry will disclose that the amount is a minimum based on rigid economies. If there is doubt the doubt should incline to increase, for the principal item, that of salaries and wages, $5,800,000, involves compensation in some cases so low as to be at the danger point. Valuable members of the faculty have been lost to Illinois because better compensation and conditions have been offered by other universities. But considering the pressure for economy in public expenditure, let that problem be waived for the time being and the operating budget accepted as a practicable minimum.

This leaves the question of expenditure for building. The sum asked is $2,500,000, and there is said to be a disposition in some quarters to reduce this sum substantially. We trust no such action will be taken. There is retrenchment which is not economy but a very serious waste, and a fair investigation of the university's needs in the way of construction, we are confident, will convince the legislature and the governor that the sum asked for is emphatically needed.

The fact is that while the attendance has increased, space increases have lagged behind since 1916, and both classroom and other facilities are now seriously deficient. This involves not only the scholarship efficiency of students but their health. It represents not a saving but a serious waste. The situation in the library, the women's residence hall, the agricultural building, the building for the college of commerce and business administration, etc., calls for prompt relief. In fact, the university needs and deserves a policy of intelligent expansion, not restriction nor postponement, and the state is not economizing in any sense by withholding proper maintenance.

We have reminded the legislature in past years of the service of the university in applied science, through which large material returns from agriculture and engineering have been won for the state and the country. Besides these profits we have the vital function of popular instruction which the university performs. No bookkeeping can show profits of this service in professional training, in business training, and in the general development of useful citizenship. Yet all this service is performed at an expense which, compared to other public service, seems small. For example, from each dollar raised for home purposes 1.9 cents is asked for the support of the university. For this sum 11,000 young men and women, all told, are given instruction and invaluable research and other work is accomplished for the benefit of the commonwealth and its people.

The university should not be received by the legislature of Illinois as a mendicant, but with an intelligent perception of its public service. It is one of the few public institutions which through its researches and invention actually puts money into the pockets of the people, produces wealth directly and substantially, and besides that performs a service of general instruction of our coming citizens upon which the welfare of the state depends.

Retrenchment and restriction which hampers the usefulness of this agent of civilization and progress is not economy but waste.

DEFEND U. S. FROM ALIEN INVASION.

The house committee on immigration is reported in Washington dispatches to be working on a bill to alter the present immigration restriction laws. The measure is said to follow somewhat the lines of the Vaile bill recently introduced in the house. That measure, as outlined in the news dispatches, appears to have the fault of most immigration measures. It considers the welfare of prospective immigrants before the welfare of this country.

While theoretically proposing to reduce present quotas of immigration it would prove a wedge to open the way for increased immigration. That is the one thing against which congress and the citizenship of the United States should be constantly on guard. We can, perhaps, assimilate immigration at its present rate. But the numbers now coming in are almost if not quite as great as we can hope to turn into Americans. We want none who cannot become Americans, or at least bring or produce families in circumstances which will make them good American citizens. We cannot afford to allow any increase in the proportion of aliens in this country.

Thus any proposed change of immigration restrictions must be looked upon with suspicion. The pressure exerted by large employers of labor, by families or racial groups who desire to have the gates opened for their relatives and friends, by religious groups who seek to relieve their foreign associates from persecution, etc., is tremendous. Only pressure of public opinion exerted with equal force can prevent the cracking of the restrictions so that some of these people can come in. When some start through holes in the law others will follow in greater and greater numbers. That must be opposed.

The Vaile bill, for instance, proposes to open the doors to intellectuals, including preachers, professors, professional men, and students. The latter, at least, would be expected to return to their home countries after completing their studies, but how would such returns be enforced? The bill also opens the gates to skilled labor upon certain representations of prospective employers. What might the limit of such an arrangement not be? Worst of all, it would allow the admission of any person over the age of 18 who gave notice of intent to become a citizen and provided evidence of good character, good social views, and superior intelligence. Doubtless many hundreds of thousands of foreigners could meet that requirement and still never become good American citizens.

We do not want a flood of immigration in any circumstances. Any bill which would open the way to even a trickle of such a flood is dangerous.

AMERICANS AND THE FRENCH AND BRITISH ISLANDS.

The Washington conference for the limitation of navies was based on the theory that nations would avoid distrust if they avoided harmful competition in building warships. Seagoing nations were forced to suspect each other and they might be forced to fight each other if they kept on building ships to seize the control of the sea.

Great Britain, Japan, and the United States agreed to limit their navies to a ratio pronounced fair, and Italy and France were assigned relative positions which they have not yet accepted. The fair purpose of that conference would be continued if Great Britain and France would withdraw from American waters. They have no need to be here, and their islands are only military possibilities against our coast and trade routes.

The British opposed the suggestion. We make it to the French. It was tied up with the debt. The British are arranging to pay that, which does not prevent negotiations for a cash payment from the United States to the British. The French say they cannot pay. They can turn in their islands as a payment.

A transfer of the islands, particularly the British, would be an act of good will. It would be an act in accord with the limitation of navies. It would decrease the necessity of preparations for protection. The French islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence are illogical possessions. They should be British. If we had them we'd use them in a trade with Great Britain. They are no more illogical than the British West Indies.

Some of the drys in the United States senate have favored the acquisition of the islands to stop rum smuggling. Rum fleets from Nassau lie off the New Jersey coast and bombard New Jersey and New York with whisky bottles. The drys want to stop that. That is one idea. It might reasonably lead to the idea that if slow tubs in the liquor traffic can make trouble—if they call it that in New York—airplanes dropping bombs can make more.

Where the United States is exposed to a danger in war we do not trust the future not to provide wars. We must correct the danger and then trust the future. There are two ways of correcting the danger to which the coast and the Panama canal may be exposed. One is friendly and not military. The other is military, even if it is in its superficial aspect friendly.

One is the transfer of the military bases to the United States by friendly negotiation and fair dealing. The other is the fortifying of defense bases against them. Our islands and our coast can be made bases of attack and defense against the British West Indies. Then we could neutralize or overcome the military effect of the British bases.

The alternative is there. We much prefer a perfectly friendly and just international rearrangement which would give protection without warlike preparations.

It is hard to persuade the British that this is in essence reasonable and pacific, but if France transferred to America the St. Lawrence islands it might seem more friendly and reasonable than it does now.

SHOULD CHILDREN READ NEWSPAPERS?

[Free translation from Svenska Tribunen-Nyheter (Swedish Tribune-News).]

This question is just as old as modern journalism. In the past as well as in the present many persons have condemned and are condemning with zeal and conviction the reading of newspapers by children. Wide, indeed, is the range of reasons given by these opponents; thus it is asserted especially that the souls of children are ruined by the sensational stories printed in the dailies; that political and social controversies should be kept from those of tender age; that newspaper reading takes up much time which could be employed to better advantage; and so on.

The objections in this sweeping form are not any too well founded. At the same time it must be admitted that to place indiscriminately any paper whatsoever into the hands of the young would by no means be advisable. There exist unfortunately not a few publications which are catering to sensations and are subordinating appropriateness. Oftentimes, also, little attention is bestowed on the style chosen for conveying the information. Papers with such defects are not suited for children. Still, if we take a broad view of the question, it would be a one sided and irrational method of education to withhold from the growing generation the educational influence which the study of the periodical press affords. It would be inflicting a wrong on the young people to keep them from learning gradually through the press a good deal of what, after all, learn they must. For the periodical press reflects daily life; no one, not even the worst hater of newspapers, can do without them.

To introduce children to the intelligent and profitable reading of a daily paper, to control them in what information they are thus absorbing, to speak to them about it: this should be the aim of all parents who are true to their duty. In this way newspaper reading can be made to contribute not only to widening the scope of knowledge, but also to building the character of the coming generation. On the other hand, an attempt to forbid the children such reading would mean "to build ice dams in springtime"; it would induce especially the brighter children to indulge stealthily in that practice; and it would thus oftentimes do indeed the very harm which it is sought to ward off, quite independent from the fact that it would deprive the children of the educational factor pointed out by us.

AGE AND OBESITY.

AMONG men 5 feet 7 inches tall, 40 years old, and weighing 184 pounds the mortality rate is 30 per cent above the normal. Among men of this height and age weighing 214 pounds the mortality rate is 80 per cent above the normal. Among men 5 feet 10 inches tall, 40 years old, and weighing 201 pounds the mortality rate is 40 per cent above normal. Among men of that height and age weighing 235 pounds the mortality rate is doubled.

The weight proper for a man of 40 and 5 feet 7 inches in height is 153 pounds, and for one of that age 5 feet 10 inches tall it is 168 pounds.

This means that obesity is a health liability and one of major importance. These facts are taken from the statistical bulletin of the Metropolitan Life. They are based upon millions of observations and, therefore, are proof and not vague speculations and hypotheses. Here is a statistical basis for the age-old epigram "Men dig their graves with their teeth."

In the statements cited the age 40 years is made use of. The statements hold true, in substance, for every age period beyond 35. Up to age 35 one can be a little overweight without being harmed thereby. Age 35 is the Rubicon. When we cross that 35 river, if we are wise, we will hold the fat down. As a matter of fact, it is just that particular place in our journey through life that we begin to accumulate "a fair round belly with good capon lined," as friend Shakespeare has said.

In old age especially is the harmful effect of obesity seen. Most all of us recall stories of scrawny folks, who looked like they would die at 50, who held on to life until they just sort of dried up and blew away at 95 or thereabouts. Recently I wrote a story taken from French sources in which it was contended that emaciation in middle life and beyond was a major factor in attaining extreme longevity.

The bulletin goes on to develop two additional thoughts:

One is that the standards of weights for given ages and heights represent averages. When we say a man 5 feet 7 inches, 40 years old, should weigh 153 pounds we mean that the average weight of a large number of people of that height and age was 153 pounds. The probability is that the average man is too fat, and, therefore, that 153 pounds, while the average weight, is not the proper weight. The proper weight would be, say, 143 pounds.

The second point is that, if a man is tall and heavy, his chance of life and health will be better if he has a large, full chest. The men who are in danger are the small-chested, big-bellied fat men.

We are starting a new year. Now is the time to get the weighing habit.

VICTIM OF APOPLEXY.

O. F. writes: "For the last seventeen years and more I have had no sickness requiring the aid of a physician, but, unfortunately, seven months ago I was paralyzed from head to toes on the left side of my body, even the left side of my face to the center line of my nose, and my speech was affected.

"When first afflicted, which affliction came on me without a moment's notice, it changed me from an apparently well man into a helpless invalid.

"A wheeled chair, with the aid of an attendant at first.

"I have constantly, both day and night, endeavored to keep my muscles in better working order by massage and gradually increased motion by the aid of my right hand. I have improved wonderfully in the last seven months. I can now walk a little with the aid of a crutch, can readily open and close my fingers now with a very perceptible grasp, whereas my fingers were useless before.

"1. Will paralysis become a fixed feature?

"2. Does massage and constant forced movement improve such a case?

"3. What is the distinction between being paralyzed and partly paralyzed?

"4. Is there a chance for further improvement by will power and massage?

"What is your general opinion of this case?"

REPLY.

1. It will, but, in all probability, you will get back a fair amount of muscle control and power.
2. Yes.
3. Both terms are used loosely and without definite meaning.
4. Yes.

You have had a stroke of apoplexy, probably due to rupture of a blood vessel in your brain. This has destroyed some of the brain cells and nerves in your brain and which controlled the muscles now paralyzed. Persistent, judicious exercise and massage reeducates some of the muscles and nerves and trains other muscles, nerves, or cells to take up some of the work of those prematurely disabled by the stroke.

DIET FOR MOTHER.

K. P. H. writes: "I will appreciate your advice on a diet for me.

"I have a 4 months old baby, entirely breast fed. Orange juice is given. He is gaining about four ounces a week, which is very much less than my other babies have at the same age. He does not seem to be getting enough fat in his nourishment, while I am getting very stout. According to charts, I should weigh about 127 or 130 pounds, while I weigh about 154 pounds.

"Now, I want to know what to eat and drink which will afford sufficient nourishment for my baby and at the same time help me to take off a few pounds."

REPLY.

Eat more meat, vegetables, fruit, and milk and much less bread, desserts, cereals, potatoes and sweets.

But do not try to lose much weight until your baby is getting a mixed diet. You can begin cautiously giving your baby a mixed diet when he is six months old.

When he has been weaned shut down hard on your diet. Eat less as to quantity. Eat no bread, cake, pies, desserts, sweets, or cereals.

AMMONIA FUMES.

F. I. I. writes: "What will be the result of constantly inhaling ammonia fumes which escape from a faulty refrigeration system? The office in which I work is filled with the fumes practically all day, and though I have had until recently very strong lungs, lately I have had a sharp pain at intervals which seemed to be in my left lung, although near my heart. Every morning when I enter the office I become short winded and the pain in my lung immediately returns."

REPLY.

Ammonia fumes are irritating. Plainly, you have been breathing air containing a small percentage of ammonia.

The question, then, is not one of acute effects due to heavy dosage, but is one of the effects of long continued inhalation of air containing a small proportion of ammonia.

I do not know, nor have I read of any chronic ammonia toxaemia. My guess is that your symptoms are due to other causes.

Have your physician examine you and decide whether you are suffering from worry, anxiety, and fear, or from some lung or heart disease.

NOTICE TO VACATE.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—1. How long a notice to vacate must the landlord give his tenants?

2. When they pay their rent promptly how long may they remain after receiving notice?

3. I live on the fourth floor and cannot get enough water to flush the toilets properly. Is the landlord compelled to remedy this? H. A. H.

1. In case of tenancy at a monthly rent where there has never been an agreement for a longer term, either party can end the tenancy or the landlord can increase the rent at the end of any month of the tenancy on sixty days' notice. There is no legal obligation to assign a reason for such action. Since the statute merely specifies that the "landlord shall have the right to terminate the tenancy by sixty days' notice in writing," the legal effect of an oral notice is not clear.

2. Under 1921 statutes if a tenant of residence property in a city, town, or village holds over and the landlord sues for possession, a judge has discretionary power to grant to the tenant six months' stay of execution upon the tenant's giving bond to pay rent at a figure fixed by the judge. If the lessor demands notice of the lessee's intention as to applying for a stay, the lessee must notify or no stay will be granted. No provision in a lease shall operate to increase damages for holdover above the rate of previous rent.

3. Not if it is not the landlord's fault, as seems probable.

IS 55 DEGREES AVERAGE WARM ENOUGH ON LI

Chicago, Jan. 23.—[To the Friend of the People.]—On Jan. 15 about 9 a. m. I boarded a Wilson avenue L train and found the car absolutely without heat. The temperature during the period between 9 and 12 was 33 to 34 degrees. I wonder if the citizens of Chicago could elect a mayor and city council who would pay a little more attention to the comforts of the people and less to politics?

F. F.

Our records show that at noon, Jan. 15, the outside temperature was 34 degrees. Cars in Wilson-Englewood service, inspected in both Wilson and Loomis street terminals, showed an average temperature of 55 degrees.

RIGHT TO SUBLEASE.

Chicago, Jan. 25.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I am renting a heated apartment, the lease of which expires Oct. 1, 1923.

I wish to give up this apartment and move into a smaller one, therefore would like to sublease same.

Does the landlord have to accept such an arrangement, providing I get another tenant? G. B.

If the lease contains the usual prohibition of subleasing, you would have to get the landlord's consent. If it contains no such prohibition, you are at liberty to install a subtenant.

THE BRICKLAYER'S TRADE.

Oelwein, Ia., Jan. 29.—Referring to some of the statements made through THE TRIBUNE by James A. Patten, who is at the head of the state prison commission and has charge of the erection of the new penitentiary at Joliet, I read in THE TRIBUNE of Jan. 26 that "we are turning out bricklayers in two weeks." He has let the cat out of his own free will. Now every one knows that he don't know anything about buildings. My honest opinion is this, that he was trying to make the taxpayers believe that they were getting a big bargain by the method they are using in the erection of the new buildings, which will cost the taxpayers by the time they get through at least $10,000,000. But if this matter had been taken out of politics and a contract let to some good, honest contractor the cost would be cut in two.

But take it from me that if any one should ever tell you that they turn out bricklayers and plasterers in a couple of weeks you can put such statement down as a lie. An apprentice will contract to serve three years with the contractors, and let me tell you facts, that at the end of three years most of them will come to the conclusion that they have got a fair start to learn the trade. I believe it would pay me to take a trip to Joliet and take a two weeks' course in the art of bricklaying. I have been at the trade for forty-four years, and two weeks more would not make the time much longer.

Also he would like to have some one answer this question as to why does a plasterer earn more than a college professor. I will answer that question for you: Because a plasterer spent more time learning the business, and he may have to use more brains in his business.

PARENTAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Maywood, Ill., Jan. 27.—On the heels of the Anderson High school trouble, only a few months old, comes Oak Park with similar lurid disclosures. Isn't it about time parents got awake and placed the responsibility where it belongs? Why shouldn't parents know what their boys and girls are doing? If it isn't their business to know and check up on them, whose is it?

Every one present at those parties is equally to blame and should share alike in the consequences. "Protect our boys from the girls" is just another excuse to shift the responsibility.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—The Chicago Tungemeinde, a society existing since 1854 in the city of Chicago, whose membership consists of American citizens only, has passed at its meeting Jan. 24 a resolution, a copy of which follows:

"Whereas, The United States of America has entered into a peace treaty with the republic of Germany; and,

"Whereas, Under the said treaty the United States secured certain rights, some of which are prior liens and some concurrent liens; and,

"Whereas, The occupation of Germany or part thereof by France jeopardizes the interests of said liens and is of irreparable damage to the citizens of the United States; and,

"Whereas, By reason of the occupation of Germany hunger and famine, already prevalent, has greatly increased and is spreading throughout Germany; and,

"Whereas, As the result of said famine intolerable conditions will spread throughout Europe and will eventually affect the United States seriously; therefore be it

"Resolved, That the President of the United States be requested to intervene with France and take such steps as will produce normal conditions again. We entered the war in 1917 to 'make the world safe for democracy.' May we not now intervene to 'make the world safe for humanity'?

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE SOCIETY UPON THE STANISLAUS.

By Bret Harte.

I reside on Table Mountain and my name is Truthful James;
I am not up to small deceit or any sinful games;
And I'll tell in simple language what I know about the row
That broke up our society upon the Stanislow.

But first I would remark that it is not a proper plan
For any scientific gent to whale his fellow man,
And if a member don't agree with his peculiar whim
To lay for that same member for to "put a head" on him.

Now nothing could be finer or more beautiful to see
Than the first six months' proceedings of that same society,
Till Brown of Calaveras brought a lot of fossil bones
That he found within a tunnel near the tenement of Jones.

Then Brown he read a paper, and he reconstructed there,
From those same bones an animal that was extremely rare;
And Jones then asked the chair for a suspension of the rules
Till he could prove that those same bones was one of his lost mules.

Then Brown he smiled a bitter smile, and said he was at fault—
It seems he had been trespassing on Jones' family vault;
He was a most sarcastic man, this quiet Mr. Brown,
And on several occasions he had cleaned out the town.

Now I hold it is not decent for a scientific gent
To say another is an ass—at least, to all intent;
Nor should the individual who happens to be meant
Reply by heaving rocks at him to any great extent.

Then Abner Dean of Angel's raised a point of order—when
A chunk of old red sandstone took him in the abdomen,
And he smiled a kind of sickly smile and curled up on the floor,
And the subsequent proceedings interested him no more.

For, in less time than I write it, every member did engage
In a warfare with the remnants of a paleozoic age;
And the way they heaved those fossils in their anger was a sin,
Till the skull of an old mammoth caved the head of Thompson in.

And this is all I have to say of these improper games,
For I live at Table Mountain and my name is Truthful
James;
And I've told in simple language what I know about the row
That broke up our society upon the Stanislow.

MINISTER'S CAR IN CRASH, KILLS MOTHER, HURTS 3

On Way to Wedding, Sign Obscures Road.

The automobile in which the Rev. A. G. Kolkebeck was driving to Antioch, Ill., to perform a wedding last night collided with another machine at Waukegan and Dempster roads, and Mrs. Josephine Kolbeck, 52 years old, 8748 North Leavitt street, his mother, was killed, and three occupants of the second motor injured.

A signboard which obstructed the view of the drivers is believed to have been responsible for the collision, as neither was going fast. The injured, who were taken to St. Francis' hospital, Evanston, were: David Winship, 1009 South Elmwood avenue, Oak Park, the driver; William Vorbaugh, 505 Superior street, Oak Park, and E. N. Cedarleaf of Hinsdale, Ill.

Mrs. Bert Selbach, 38 years old, 5543 North Meade avenue, was killed last night when a Norwood Park motorbus, driven by Stephen Jukish, 4845 Milwaukee avenue, collided with a buggy in which she was riding in front of 5144 Meade avenue, and threw her to the street. Jukish was held by the police.

"Vampire" Driver Jailed.

As an example to "vampire autoists," who speed away after they have hit somebody, Judge Francis Borrelli in the Municipal court yesterday fined Boleshaw Korsak, 1414 West 49th place, Cicero, $500 and costs and sentenced him to four months in the house of correction. The charge was assault with a deadly weapon.

Some time ago Korsak's automobile injured J. Mahon, a fireman for the Chicago and Northwestern railroad, when it ran him down at North Crawford avenue and West Kinzie street. Mahon was tossed several feet into the air.

Korsak drove away, according to witnesses, and a short time later appeared at the Austin police station and reported that his car had been stolen.

"This is the first opportunity the court has had to pass on a case of this kind," said Judge Borrelli after he had sentenced Korsak and overruled a motion for a new trial. "I propose that this is to be an example to the community."

J. S. Bousquet Dies.

Joseph S. Bousquet, 55 years old, a well known stock broker, died in St. Luke's hospital of injuries received when he was struck by an automobile driven by Walter E. Kipp, 3209 Argyle street, Friday night. Mr. Bousquet was run down on Michigan boulevard a moment after he left St. Luke's hospital, where his wife is seriously ill. She has not been told of his death. Kipp is being held pending the outcome of the inquest.

Two women narrowly escaped serious injury when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a bakery wagon, killing the horse and scattering biscuits and buns all over the street. Mrs. Edith McNeal, 911 East 47th street, who was driving; Mrs. Corinne Ford, her companion, and John Tucker, driver of the wagon, escaped with only slight injuries.

Woman Run Down, Hurt.

An automobile hit Mrs. Charles W. Spofford, 1922 Sheridan road, Evanston, as she alighted from a street car last night at Sherman avenue and Foster street. She was seriously injured and was taken to the Evanston hospital unconscious. Her husband has just been operated on and was too ill to be told of his wife's accident. Harold Anderson, 2023 Ridge avenue, Evanston, driver of the car, was taken into custody.

Two Missing Wives Sought in Chicago

Chicago police were asked by two men yesterday to search for their wives who have been missing for several months. James Eggleston, 41 Hayward street, Buffalo, stated that his wife, Mrs. Jennie Eggleston, had left him several months ago, taking their 9 year old daughter with her. The other request was from M. B. Rafter of St. Louis, who asked the police to look for his wife, Mrs. Delina Girard after.

HER HUSBAND VANISHES ON HIS WAY TO THE LOOP

JOHN LEJEWSKI.

John Lejewski, 2234 West North avenue, a city salesman employed by Durand, Homer & McNeal, left home last Thursday to attend a meeting to be held at the H. O. Stone real estate office in the loop, but failed to reach his destination. His wife, Mrs. Harriet Lejewski, has requested THE TRIBUNE to help locate the missing man. She has searched hospitals and morgues, enlisted the aid of the police, but can find no clew to the whereabouts of her husband.

He is 33 years old. The couple have been married nine years, and, according to the wife's statement, never had a quarrel or any financial difficulties. There are two daughters, Nathalie, aged 8 years, and Evelyn, 4.

Dr. E. P. Koch, Teacher and Physician, Dies

Dr. Edward Phillips Koch, county physician at the Oak Forest infirmary, who died suddenly last Friday at his home at 4809 Lake Park avenue, was buried yesterday at Mascoutah, Ill. Dr. Koch was a cousin of the world famous Prof. Koch of Germany, who discovered and isolated the germ of tuberculosis.

Born in St. Louis, Mo., 68 years ago, the son of the Rev. Herman Koch, founder of Wesleyan college, at Warrenton, Mo., Dr. Koch was graduated from the School of Technology at Boston and the Washington University Medical school at St. Louis. At the age of 20 he was professor of philosophy and of French literature at the Warrenton Wesleyan college.

Dr. Koch had been a practicing physician in Chicago for the last thirty years. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elise Liebrock Koch; a daughter, Mrs. Katherine Koch Eaton, and a grandson, Kirke Eaton.

Former President Chandler of Postal Telegraph Dies

West Randolph, Vt., Feb. 3.—Albert Brown Chandler, former president of the Postal Telegraph company, died at his home here last night, aged 83. Mr. Chandler was a descendant of John Winthrop, first governor of Massachusetts. Manager of the Western Union office in Bellaire, O., in 1858, he during the civil war was a military telegrapher. After the war he returned to the Western Union, in 1875 became president of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph company, later president of the Fuller Electric company, and then went to the Postal Telegraph as counsel, receiver, and eventually president.

Memorial Services Held for Two Newspaper Men

Memorial services for Addison C. Thomas, former superintendent of the central division of the Associated Press, and George Wood, former newspaper man, were held yesterday at the Press Club of Chicago.

James F. Bishop, who introduced the speakers, mentioned briefly the outstanding achievements of Mr. Thomas.

"He was the man who first thought of holding the World's Fair in Chicago," Mr. Bishop said. "All his time was put into helping to make Chicago the great city it is."

CUNO IN RUHR TO DIRECT "WAR" AGAINST FRANCE

Army Extends Blockade Into Westphalia.

ger of a famine owing to the congestion in the railway yards following the French prohibition of coal exports.

He was about to prohibit the use of wheat bread and white flour. He said there was a shortage of milk and fats and meat would soon be exhausted. He indicated that the French were stopping most of the food trains into the Ruhr.

The young German spoke up: "I have brought thirty tons of food supplies into the Ruhr today from the people of seven communes about Hanover. They have given this to their brothers in the Ruhr, together with 2,800,000 marks. The population of the seven communes is 1,400."

20 Tons of Potatoes.

He explained that he had no difficulty in entering the Ruhr, when Dr. Grutezer interrupted, and the boy enthusiastically continued:

"We have brought them twenty tons of potatoes," he said.

"Then you must have nothing more to eat in your communes," answered Dr. Grutezer again.

"O, no. We have plenty there," returned the Hanoverian.

FRENCH SHOW GAINS

[Copyright: 1923: By the New York Times.]

DUSSELDORF, Feb. 3.—French chances of success in the great experiment they have undertaken in the Ruhr grow brighter each day on the political, if not on the economic side. It is going to be touch-and-go yet, and, in spite of official optimism, the economic complications are too great to be neglected in making an estimate. The fact is incontestible that within the three days there has been a decided weakening in obedience to the orders from Berlin and an equally marked tendency to coöperate with the French rather than work against them.

There has not been in the three weeks since the occupation of Essen any single act of personal disobedience to French orders except at the instigation of the Berlin government.

There has been no spontaneous refusal to work, and the French are well entitled to feel satisfied with their previous calculation of the reception they would get from the local people and with the way it would work out.

Spurn Germany's New Plea.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—The reparations commission today adopted a resolution sustaining its own action of Jan. 26, in refusing Germany a moratorium. The resolution was passed as a reply to yesterday's protest note from Germany.

France, Italy and Belgium voted for the resolution. Great Britain abstained from voting, as in recent reparation commission ballots.

Germany's note of yesterday represented an effort to renew the discussion with France and reopen the reparations controversy.

FORMER CHICAGOAN WINS ART LAURELS

This is the painting called "Sleep" which won art honors for Walter Ufer, former Chicagoan. It is a painting of Pueblo Indians.

Portrays Indians

Walter Ufer, former Chicago advertising man, now one of the most distinguished of American painters, yesterday was notified he had been awarded the Temple fund gold medal for the best oil picture in the 118th annual exhibition of the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts at Philadelphia.

The painting is Mr. Ufer's most recent work, having been completed early last month. It is called "Sleep" and is a representation of the Pueblo Indians of Taos, N. M., where the artist has made his home for the last nine years.

Mr. Ufer's works have won medals in exhibitions conducted by several of the art institutions of the United States and are hung in many famous galleries, including the Chicago Art institute.

Prior to 1911 the artist was advertising manager for Armour & company of Chicago.

ATTORNEY FINED $25 FOR VIOLATING ELECTION LAWS

For the first time in the history of the election commissioners, penalty was exacted yesterday for violation of laws governing ballot booths at an election, when Frank H. Culver, attorney, of 5 North La Salle street, was fined $25 and costs by Judge Emanuel Eller, in Municipal court.

It was charged that on Dec. 12 last, Culver went to the polling booth of the First precinct of the Fourth ward and proceeded to mark his ballot paper on a window ledge outside the booth. Mrs. Tillie Brown, 4311 Lake Park avenue, who was in charge of the booth, protested several times, but Culver took no notice. Mrs. Brown eventually called a policeman and Culver was arrested, after having torn up the paper and put it in his pocket.

Flaming Man Dashes Through Street; Saved

Harry Hawkes, colored, 2311 South Dearborn street, was severely burned yesterday when he tried to start a fire with kerosene in a stove in a store at 20 West 29th street. Engine company No. 29 was called, but Hawkes had fled to the street, with his clothing afire, and started toward State street. Firemen met him on the way and smothered the flames with blankets. He was taken to the county hospital.

City Hall May Get 3 More Floors for Extra Courts

Three stories must be added to the city hall in the near future to accommodate the growing Municipal courts, the judges of the court decided after they had approved the establishment of three courts on the tenth floor of the municipal building.

HARDING TO PUT REFUNDING PLAN UP TO CONGRESS

Democrats Expected to Oppose Interest Rates.

BULLETIN.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—(By the United Press.)—The French government considers it impossible to settle its debt to the United States now on a basis similar to Britain's settlement, it was semi-officially stated today.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—The plan for funding Great Britain's debt to the United States was turned over to President Harding tonight by the debt funding commission. The commission also gave the President a statement suggesting methods of congressional action translating the results of the commission's negotiations into law.

The President probably will submit the proposal to congress early in the week.

Rumblings of opposition were heard in both the house and the senate. Senator Lodge [Mass.], Republican leader in the senate, visited the White House to discuss the situation with President Harding and Representative Mondell [Wyo.], the house Republican leader, conferred with Representative Burton [Rep., O.], a member of the funding commission, as to ways and means of handling the legislation.

House Democrats plan to oppose the interest rates contained in the settlement plan on the grounds that they constituted a discrimination. Several of them protested that the rates proposed to be applied on the British debt were lower than the United States pays on its own obligations.

Could Pay in Liberty Bonds.

An interesting feature of the tentative debt agreement was the provision that any payment of interest or principal might be made in any United States government bonds issued since April 6, 1917, such bonds to be accepted by the American government at par and accrued interest.

This provision was inserted because it was intimated that the British government in accumulating exchange to make payments, might wish to enter the American market and buy up Liberty bonds or other government issues.

An administration official, in discussing this feature of the terms, said that the effect of such a step by the British government probably would have a stabilizing effect upon the American issues and also prove a profitable procedure for the British government.

Would Reduce National Debt.

The governmental theory was that any of the Liberty bonds turned in by the British government in payment of interest or principal would be applied to reduction of the national debt. If the amounts involved were large the procedure would aid in the effort to reduce taxation.

One official estimated that the turning over of government bonds in the open market probably approximated from $600,000,000 to $700,000,000 annually. It was apparent, he felt, that if the British purchased not more than $100,000,000 annually the effect would be to strengthen the position of the American issues.

Sees Exchange Rate Stabilized.

That the entry of the British government into the American market would have a stabilizing influence on the British-American exchange rate is also considered probable.

It is considered probable by some of the experts that the British payments would be made largely in the form of United States bonds, as the British government is able to make these transactions on a profitable basis.

The theory in arriving at this arrangement to accept American bonds from the British in payment was that it would work to the interests of both governments and of the American tax payer and also that such bonds as were turned in by the British government could be cancelled and applied to the reduction of the public debt.

It was noted that government bonds rose in the New York market today.

TWO HUNDRED IN CAST OF WESTERN ELECTRIC "FOLLIES"

The Hawthorne works of the Western Electric company refuse to admit that Flo Ziegfeld has anything on them when it comes to providing a really attractive and lively chorus. They point with pride to the chorus of the fourth annual Hawthorne Follies, to be given by employés of the concern at the Arvan grotto theater during the approaching week and especially to Miss Mary Riley, one of the particular stars of the production. The cast numbers over 200, and one of the most effective features of the show will be the "Dance of the Lamp Shades," in which the Misses Evelyn Egbert, Betty Skolka, Elsie Flynn, Mary Baker, Lucille Lasota, Marie Majeska, Rosella Dewey, Christine Libera, Helen Yelsik, and Libby Bezemek will take part.

U. S. DEBT TERMS NOT UNFAIR, SAYS LLOYD GEORGE

But Intimates America Asked Too Much.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 3.—[Tribune Radio.]—"Under the circumstances, the American terms of repayment are not unfair, but I cannot help thinking of how the debt was contracted; that it was made in the interests of the allies, of which America was one," said former Prime Minister Lloyd George to THE TRIBUNE this afternoon on his arrival in London from what he described as his first real vacation in seventeen years.

"I also cannot help remembering that America is not pressing the other allies. Under the circumstances, I think other terms might have been negotiated. However, we must honor our bond, whatever it was.

"Frankly, the whole question was what concessions America was prepared to give and not what we were prepared to offer. Whatever happens in the future will be a question of America's opinion. It is not a British question, but one of educating American opinion. If we had waited I think we could have got better terms.

"Regarding Ireland there is only one thing to say, which is that Ireland is getting on as well as could be expected. The Free State government is handling the situation with firmness and undoubtedly will win the end."

May Visit America.

When asked if he was going to America soon Mr. Lloyd George said: "I would like very much to do so and I hope to go, but if I do it will be late in the year."

He said he would be sorry to see the British withdraw their troops from Cologne as he believed the population there would make trouble if that occurred. He added that he regretted the withdrawal of the Americans.

"I do not like the situation in the Ruhr. It becomes impossible to say when once in a muddle like this what will happen. It is certain that Premier Poicare will not get reparations or the equivalent in cash or kind by these means and he could have got more by other means. On a cash basis France will lose."

Believes French Made Mistake.

The statesman said he was certain that the British government disapproved the attitude of France, but it must be remembered that the latter fought side by side with the British and their losses were very great. He asserted he was sure the government did not want to adopt an attitude of hostility.

Mr. Lloyd George believed the German opinion was solidly behind the Berlin government for the first time since the war, and this was an omnious feature of the whole business. He thinks the French action was a technical mistake, one which has made it impossible for Germany to give way.

M'KINLEY GIVES BOODLE INQUIRY BROADER FIELD

Orders Jury to Continue Hunt for Grafters.

Continuation of the school board investigation by the special grand jury which indicted Fred Lundin, Virtus Rohm, and a dozen more of their henchmen, was ordered yesterday by Chief Justice Michael L. McKinley. The order entered called for only an investigation of school affairs, but plans are under way for including all Thompson-Lundin offices in the probe, with the possibility that this jury will take up the investigation of vice.

LOUIS PIQUETT.

The first indictment of City Prosecutor Louis Piquett was permitted to lapse yesterday, it now being null and void under the "four term act," and it is claimed the state will now be barred from placing Piquett on trial under the blanket indictment with Lundin and the twenty-two others.

State Fails to Appear.

Piquett had made four demands for trial in four successive terms of court. This made it imperative that he be formally placed on trial before Monday, the beginning of the February term. The attorney general failing to appear yesterday before Judge George Kersten automatically wiped out the indictment against Piquett only, the others named not having demanded trial.

Attorneys familiar with criminal law hold that inasmuch as the other indictment covers the same allegation as was contained in the former, the law specifically protects Piquett from trial now. His attorney announced he would fight to the bitter end against forcing Piquett to submit to trial.

To Try Other Piquett Case.

Special Assistant Attorney General Marvin Barnhart declared Piquett would be tried, giving as his opinion that the second indictment is still valid as a different set of defendants is named and a different conspiracy alleged. The first indictment charged Piquett with seeking and obtaining a "rakeoff" of 50 cents per ton on coal sold the board of education. The remaining one is less specific concerning Piquett, but links his name with that of Lundin, Rohm, Severinghaus, Davis, and others as conspiring to obtain many "rakeoffs."

Definite action was taken yesterday regarding Mortimer B. Flynn, "angel" of the William Hale Thompson Republican club. He is ordered to appear before the grand jury on Thursday at 6 p. m.

PREACHES INITIAL SERMON TODAY AT ST. MARK'S CHURCH

The Rev. Rowland F. Philbrook will preach his initial sermon today as rector of St. Mark's Episcopal church, 442 Drexel boulevard. He comes to the Chicago parish from Rawlins, Wyo. He is a graduate of the University of Iowa and of the Philadelphia Divinity school. He served parishes in Iowa City and in Philadelphia and when in Wyoming was chaplain of the Wyoming state penitentiary and examining chaplain to the bishop.

THE REV. ROWLAND P. PHILBROOK.

START FUNDS FOR NEW BUILDINGS TO ENLARGE DE PAUL

Enlargement of De Paul university in the near future is presaged by inauguration of a building fund, announced yesterday by the Rev. Hugh J. O'Connor of the university. "Our present housing facilities are so inadequate as to necessitate breaking ground for new buildings as soon as plans for financing are completed," said Father O'Connor. "We intend to erect a new science hall and a college of liberal arts, which will enable us to accommodate our rapidly increasing student body."

To aid in the raising of this fund Joseph Regan, Irish tenor, has offered his services for a concert next Sunday afternoon. He will be assisted by Alberta E. Curliss and two artists from De Paul Conservatory of Music, S. Victor Tufigno and Arthur Becker.

6 Legal Fraternities Form Uplift Association

Representatives of six legal fraternities, the Phi Delta Phi, Phi Alpha Delta, Delta Theta Phi, Gamma Eta Gamma, Eigma Nu Phi, and Sigma Delta Kappa, met at the Hotel Sherman yesterday and formed the Legal Interfraternal association. The association will meet once a year to discuss matters pertaining to law fraternities and to foster a higher regard for the ethics of the profession. Officers will be elected at a later date.

8,500 NEW PUPILS FOR HIGH SCHOOLS ALREADY JAMMED

Chicago high schools tomorrow will face the problem of handling 8,500 new pupils. Twenty-four of the twenty-five buildings already are overcrowded, and sixteen of them are doubling up classes.

Because the Thompson-Lundin school trustees lagged in providing new buildings, it is pointed out, while the boodlers were overstocking on costly phonographs, and whatnot, the only solution will be further overcrowding for the students.

More Teachers Required.

"It will be impossible to tell until the end of the week exactly how many schools, pupils, and new teachers will be affected," Supt. Mortenson said yesterday, "but more schools certainly will have to be put on the extended day basis."

This will mean that, in addition to the inconvenience of the "extended" hours—ranging from 8 in the morning till 4:45 in the afternoon—the taxpayers will have to assume the expense of hiring more teachers.

Three thousand five hundred graduates left the high schools, so, with a normal dropping out of 20 per cent who do not complete the course of study, there will be a net gain of about 4,000. The two new buildings in course of construction will not be ready in time to help the situation this semester.

Urges Haste in Building.

Ten thousand boys and girls were graduated from elementary schools and 15,000 were promoted to higher grades. The extended day plan is in effect in twenty-eight schools.

The superintendent has urged upon the board the necessity for concentrating on new buildings and it is planned to spend $11,000,000 for construction during 1923.

Overcrowding and other problems will be discussed by Supt. Mortenson next Saturday at a meeting of principals and district superintendents in Fullerton hall at the Art institute.

Asks $50,000 for Injuries in Railroad Collision

Suit for $50,000 damages against the Pennsylvania railroad was filed in the Superior court yesterday by H. Raymond Pitt, 6034 South Green street. Pitt charges that he was injured in a collision at Garfield boulevard on Jan. 13, when he was thrown between two cars. His legs and one arm were broken. Pitt served as a stretcher bearer in France.

FRAT GUN DEATH STILL BAFFLES POLICE INQUIRY

With all sources of inquiry practically exhausted, the police yesterday admitted themselves still baffled as to proof of whether John R. Minahan Jr., University of Chicago student, was slain by the accidental discharge of his shotgun early Friday at the Alpha Tau Omega chapter house, 5735 Woodlawn avenue, or whether he, for a now unknown cause, deliberately turned the weapon upon himself.

Dr. John R. Minahan, prominent surgeon of Green Bay, Wis., the boy's father, said his son was of cheerful disposition and had no trouble of any kind to his knowledge.

Following opening of an inquest by Deputy Coroner Fetzner, the hearing was continued to Feb. 14 to admit of further investigation.

Miss Suzanne Smith of the Shorecrest hotel, 420 Wrightwood avenue, young Minahan's fiancée, will not accompany the body to Green Bay, it was said. Miss Smith dismissed the theory of love trouble as a motive for suicide on the youths' part by declaring she and Minahan were on the best of terms. In support of this she told of a cordial note written by her to Minahan the day before his death.

Public Joins War on Pirate Undertakers

Charge of Profiteering Easily Proved

How the worst of crooks can, by engaging in the undertaking business in Chicago, practice bold robbery without any danger of molestation is not difficult to understand. Rarely, if ever, is the victim willing to publicly denounce one of these wolves in sheep's clothing.

For example, our establishment was recently visited by a man who had come directly from a wholesale casket house where he had been asked by one of these profiteers to pay $325.00 for a casket in every way inferior to one he found in our stock and bought at its regular price of only $225.00. Many others who come to us have had similar experiences.

That even the immediate friends of these people are not told about their experiences is perfectly natural. Whoever has suffered the loss of a loved one can readily understand why in such transactions the purchaser is averse to "haggling." It is this very fact that these heartless wretches rely upon.

That there is at least a degree of honor among thieves—that even the most hardened criminal can be trusted within limits—is generally admitted. But how can any distinction be drawn between an undertaker who extorts from a client from $50.00 to $100.00 more for a casket than it can be bought for elsewhere and a crook who picks another man's pocket?

We invite any one interested to investigate for himself our statement that other undertakers are charging as high as $1,200.00 for the magnificent copper casket we sell for only $750.00, and that our $25.00 casket cannot be duplicated in any of hundreds of places for less than $60.00 or $65.00. Proportionate savings are to be found in our entire line, ranging in price from $25.00 up.

That the public has only been waiting for a chance to express itself in denunciation of the band of knaves who have brought the undertaking profession into disrepute is indicated by the many letters of encouragement and support we are receiving each day. We reproduce below extracts from only a few of them.

This from a casket manufacturer:

"The writer has just read your large two-column advertisement in a Chicago newspaper and wishes to say that you certainly hit the curbstone undertaker in the solar plexus. We commend you; this article, to our notion, was masterly and well written."

This from a newspaper publisher

"At the present time I am trying to settle for a funeral for which the undertaker is attempting to charge $750.00 for a casket which two undertakers in this state say should be sold for $350.00, including the embalming service. The man wants $750.00 with $35.00 extra charge for the embalming. It would be a godsend if you were to open a branch in this community."

"How ready we all are to excoriate and condemn the member of a labor union who attempts to earn a full day's pay for nothing less than a full day's work. Yet without protesting at all we pay ten undertakers full wages for 'sitting idle on the bench' while an eleventh one is actually working.

"How long could any other business on earth survive under such conditions? How long would the public stand for being mulcted thus by any other class of men?"

The one discouraging fact of the present situation is that the worst offenders in this gang of sharpers are actually being helped along in their nefarious work by the innocent recommendations of victims who do not realize that they themselves have been robbed. If men and women everywhere will refrain from recommending undertakers about whom they have only a casual knowledge this crying evil will soon be suppressed.

After you have been decoyed by one of these pirates to some wholesale dealer's display room and before you pay two or three prices for any casket he shows you;

After you have been assured by no matter how big an undertaker that from $50.00 to $100.00 is the lowest price for which you can obtain a casket of any kind:

Telephone us to send one of our automobiles to bring you (without any charge for the ride) to either of our establishments and let us prove the absolute falsity of such statements.

Bear in mind that the price you pay for any casket you select includes, without any extra charge of any kind, the use of either of our two beautiful memorial chapels, if desired, so perfect in their appointments and special conveniences that they have been extensively copied in other cities throughout the country. We make removals to our establishments without charge.

Keep our telephone number where you can find it readily and be prepared to strike a telling blow at the worst band of reprobates Chicago has ever had to contend with.

The Sixty-Ninth

Tobey Semi-Annual Sale

Begins MONDAY MORNING

Furniture Reduced 10% to 50%

The Story of the Sale

SEVERAL MONTHS AGO our buyers visited furniture production centers in search of furniture for this sale.

They bought furniture at the lowest prices in many years and discovered many collections of fine sets and odd pieces of our standard which were bought at reductions of 25% to 50%. The value of these today is greatly enhanced and they are priced for this sale on the basis of the reduced purchase cost.

These purchases in themselves afford sufficient material for a sale, yet they are only one of many features, for we put into this one event all of the price attractions of a half-year.

Almost every bit of our regular stock, and this includes the new spring patterns now arriving, is reduced in price for the sale. Several manufacturers' spring sample lines come at a discount of one-fourth. Besides this we have made very drastic reductions in our odd pieces and discontinued patterns.

From this it is clearly to be seen, as most Chicagoans know already, that now is distinctly the time to buy furniture. Whether an odd piece is needed, or furniture for an entire home, it can be bought now at the lowest price and from the most complete showing.

STATE RAILWAYS ADD TO EUROPE'S FINANCIAL WOE

Cause Half of Austria's Huge Deficit.

BY RAYMOND FENDRICK.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 3.—During the course of an investigation to find out how far the new boundaries of Europe and the consequent tariffs were responsible for the economic difficulties of the continent, TRIBUNE investigators obtained information that shows the chief cause of Europe's financial woe lies in government operation of railways.

The Austria state railways' annual operating loss of $30,000,000 was responsible for more than 50 per cent of Austria's budget deficit last year. This year the deficit will be larger.

With a system of 6,375 miles, the government railways have 90,000 employés, which is a 30 per cent increase in personnel since the same lines were under private ownership a few years before the war. The superfluous employés, now that Austria has accepted a receivership from the league of nations, will be progressively eliminated, but heretofore it has been practically impossible to discharge an unsatisfactory worker. Railway jobs were political plums.

Once Made Large Profits.

The average earning of the state railways before the war was 2½ per cent of the capitalization, which was approximately the real value of the lines. The same lines made large profits before being bought by the state.

The stock of the single privately owned railway called the Southern was always quoted on the Vienna bourse at five or six times par. Since the war the stock has been greatly watered and the railway is now operating at a loss.

Dr. Richard Schuller, financial and economic director of the Vienna foreign office, told THE TRIBUNE that state ownership in Austria had resulted in the efficiency of the railways being broken down, thus making the industry almost impossible to operate. He said enormous charges had been added to the government's payroll on account of superfluous employés and that finally the huge operating deficit was being loaded on the government during the crisis.

Easy to Put Out of Gear.

Dr. Schuller asserted state ownership by Austria under the monarchy had shown that the railways might be operated by government employés when everything was going smoothly at little or no loss and perhaps at a profit. When the slightest difficulty, either physical or financial, arises, he said, the entire operating system breaks down because there is no one who has sufficient interest to make superhuman efforts to straighten things out.

Under the systematic reorganization of Austria by the allied receivership the government has agreed to reduce the railway deficit continuously both by increased tariffs and dispensing with unnecessary employés. The allied experts are in favor of the sale of the railways to private interests, but not until they have been put on a better basis by the government.

DETECTIVES GET OUT ON HALF BOND IN FLOGGING CASE

Detective Sergeants William L. Cox, James J. Hayes, and James Rabbitt of the motor vehicle bureau, who were indicted for the beating of Edmund Fitch, organist at the Stratford theater, appeared in Judge Michael L. McKinley's court and succeeded in having their bonds reduced from $10,000 to $5,000 each. The bonds were signed by Joseph G. Glaser, automobile dealer at 1518 South Michigan avenue.

"Not guilty!" all three said when asked by Judge McKinley if they had anything to say.

Cox's photograph has been identified by Fitch as that of the man who beat him almost into unconsciousness with a piece of rubber hose at the detective bureau last Sunday night when he refused to confess that he knew an automobile which he had purchased was stolen property.

"MERRY MAID"

MISS CATHERINE COFFEY.

Miss Catherine Coffey is taking a prominent part in the production by the Columbus council of the Knights of Columbus of a "Merryland Frolic," described as "a musical mixture of merry maid and merry men in miles and miles of melody." The frolic is to be given next Thursday and Friday at the St. Ignatius auditorium, Glenwood and Loyola avenues. North shore society will be well represented in the cast, among the well known names being the Misses Ita McMahon, Olive Mellon, Evelyn Morrison, and Ann Hanses, and Bart Doodey, Clarence Herdrich, James O'Connor, and William Lahey.

CHURCHES FIGHT OAK PARK VOTE ON SUNDAY FILMS

Oak Park churches are bitterly fighting the petition which is being circulated for "Sunday movies" in the village. The matter is to be voted on at the April election, and it is reported that sufficient signatures have been obtained to place it on the ballot.

The question has been put to the vote twice before in the last six years. The first time it was defeated by a large majority, but on the second occasion the supporters showed greatly increased numbers. Lubliner & Trinz of the Oak Park theater believe the majority of voters now favor the proposed change.

MUSTY LEDGER BARES POVERTY OF 'HONEST ABE'

Was Often Broke During Douglas Debates.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Rats in the old law office of Abraham Lincoln led to the discovery here today of musty, molded documents which open a new insight into the life and character of "Honest Abe."

It was here that Lincoln lived and worked and struggled up to fame. With the story of each historic spot goes a tale of some important period in his life, and the rats in the old law office dug up the information that he was sorely pressed for money during his debates with Stephen A. Douglas in the senatorial campaign of 1858.

Paul Boose, a 15 year old high school boy, discovered the latest Lincoln documents while setting traps for rats in a store room above the shoe shop of B. H. Leurs & Sons. The store room was once the office of Abraham Lincoln, lawyer. It was there he wrote his first inaugural address.

Old Store Ledger Found.

In those days the room beneath was occupied by the general store of Clark M. Smith, Lincoln's brother-in-law. Covered with dust in a corner of the room, young Boose found Smith's store ledger for 1858. The account of Abraham Lincoln had been transferred on Feb. 1, 1858, from a former ledger. On that date Lincoln owed the store $249.93. He had paid $8.26 on account.

In the midst of the campaign with Douglas, the ledger shows Lincoln frequently found it necessary to go to Smith for cash. Fuel bills had to be paid.

The debt side of the ledger extends over three pages. Few items appear on the credit side. When the account was balanced on Dec. 31, 1858, the bill amounted to $556.18. Lincoln had a credit of $19.46.

Strenuous Year for Abe.

It was a strenuous year in both politics and finance, but on Feb. 15, 1859, the campaign over, the income at the Lincoln law office was sufficient to permit Mr. Lincoln to pay $139 on account, leaving a balance of $407.72. Less than a month later, on March 12, 1859, the account was paid in full.

R. H. Leurs, for fifty years proprietor of the shoe store, began clerking in the Smith store a few years after Lincoln went to the White House. Entries in the ledger were made by John S. Condell, who later became Smith's partner and whose handwriting Mr. Leurs readily recognized today.

TRACE ANCESTRY

Evidence establishing the identity of "Lincoln's lost grandmother," as Lucy Hanks was presented before a select gathering of Lincoln scholars and historians at the Chicago Historical society yesterday by the Rev. William E. Barton, pastor of the First Congregational church of Oak Park.

Not only is the Hanks tradition cleared but so also is that of Lincoln's paternal grandmother, concerning whom all the histories and biographies are said to be in error. The paternal grandmother is found to be Bathsheba Lincoln, whose maiden name may have been Herring, according to Dr. Barton, who has spent years of severe research in this investigation. His announcements are expected to cause a controversy, as they dispute eminent authorities and put distinguished writers in error.

Offers Intricate Proofs of Identity.

Dr. Barton presented an intricate and detailed analysis of the evidence in the Hanks case.

"In an obscure corner of Kentucky," he said, "far from railroads, is a section known as 'the cutoff' which a legislature separated from one county and added to another, with the benevolent purpose of making two Democratic counties where formerly there was one.

"There reside literally hundreds of descendants of the President's grandmother, including some first cousins of Abraham Lincoln. They have read no books about him and have never been interviewed, except by me, and by those who are working for me. And every one of them knows himself to be related to Abraham Lincoln, and they know how.

"Separated from the Hanks family and the Hanks tradition by hundreds of miles of distance and a full century of time, their family Bibles confirm the Hanks tradition at every disputed point.

"Not only so, but I have been able to secure copies of marriage bonds of all the original Sparrow family and most of the Hanks family, including the marriage of Thomas Sparrow, not to Elizabeth Shipley, who appears never to have existed, but to Elizabeth Hanks, and they were not the parents of Dennis Hanks, whose mother was the Nancy named in the will of Joseph Hanks.

Reared Two Sons as Ministers.

"As for Lucy, I have her marriage bond in photostat, and a certificate of her legal marriage. She was married to Henry Sparrow, a revolutionary soldier and an honest man, and she brought up her children well, including two ministers of the gospel.

"She is no disgrace to the family. She had somewhat superior advantages. Her father and her brothers could not write, but she, like all the Hanks who could write at all, wrote with a flourish. Thus do we restore to her rightful place on the line of the President's ancestors, Lucy Hanks, Abraham Lincoln's lost grandmother."

Other experts have declared that there was no Lucy Hanks, because her father's will made no mention of her.

All the biographies are incorrect as to Lincoln's paternal grandmother Dr. Barton declared.

"Last summer, in a pile of old tax lists in the basement of the old capitol at Frankfort, the secretary of the Kentucky Historical society discovered a list of Washington county for 1795, which shows that Bathsheba Lincoln survived her husband, Abraham Lincoln, grandfather of the President, was murdered by Indians, not in 1784, as the President thought, but in May, 1786, and his widow long survived him. Here, then, is the paternal grandmother of President Lincoln, Bathsheba, whom the pioneer Abraham Lincoln married in Rockingham county, Virginia, in 1770, the mother of all his children, his one and only wife."

EXPERTS DIDN'T GIVE FULL TIME TO CHICAGO WORK

Some of Mapes' Statements Called Misleading

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The forthcoming opinion of Internal Revenue Solicitor Nelson Hartson is certain to flatly contradict—unless a policy of politeness commands silence—certain misleading statements in the opinion of former Solicitor Mapes, who rules that the Chicago experts were exempt from income taxes on the $2,742,666 in fees collected from the city.

The affidavits of President Faherty and others represented to the internal revenue bureau last year that the experts gave their exclusive time to the city or "practically" so.

The government now knows, or should know, because others in Washington know, that Ernest H. Lyons, one of the Thompson administration experts, collected about $28,000 from the Chicago and Western Indiana railway for work done in about two wekes in May, 1921. Verification of that can be obtained through the interstate commerce commission. This was during the five year period when Mr. Lyons was supposed to be devoting his exclusive time to the city.

Solicitor Mapes' Opinion.

The Mapes opinion says on this subject: "It is stated in an affidavit of the president of the board of local improvements (Faherty), that prior to blank date, the real estate experts had worked for the city under the direction of the board of local improvements on certain projects of the board, that some time in that month he sent for one of them (said to have been Lyons), told him that the work of such experts was satisfactory, but that they must drop all other work and give their exclusive time to the city, and that at a final conference with them in that month he definitely employed them upon the condition that they were to give their entire time to the city for a period of five years, and that each of them accepted employment upon these conditions."

This was oral and a written agreement, so called, came later. At another point in his opinion Mr. Mapes said: "The services (of the experts) to the city have also been practically exclusive of all other work."

Proof Work Was Not Exclusive.

The doing of a private railroad job for which he charged $28,000 is evidence that Mr. Lyons' services to the city were not practically exclusive of all other work. It is offensive to the claim of Mr. Lyons that he was a city employé and therefore exempt from income taxes.

Another humorous statement in the Mapes opinion relates to the legal powers of the board of local improvements. It says "Section 23 of the local improvement act empowers the board to appoint an attorney," and so on. At the very time the Mapes opinion was given out a lively dispute was taking place in the city hall in Chicago over who had the power to appoint the attorney and his assistants for the board. The Illinois Supreme court has since decided that that power lies in the corporation counsel and not in the board of local improvements.

The activity of the agents of the experts since the hearing also shows that they are not satisfied with the results obtained. All of the incidents of the last week indicate that the experts have obtained information that the forthcoming opinion of the solicitor will hold that they must pay income taxes.

Congressman Kahn, Taking Rest for Health, Improved

Omaha, Neb., Feb. 3.—Congressman Julius Kahn of California, who left Washington recently on account of his health, said here today while en route to San Francisco that he is feeling much better.

"When I left Washington I didn't expect to last long, but I've changed my mind," he was quoted as saying.

LEARN TO TALK OUT, ADVICE TO WOMEN VOTERS

Men may throw bunk, but women must throw the voice if they wish to succeed as public speakers, Mrs. Florence Beckett advised the Chicago League of Women Voters in the meeting held yesterday at the Congress hotel.

Reminding her audience that even if a woman has the last word, her work will be ineffective unless that word can be heard in all parts of the hall, Mrs. Beckett urged the women to "practice public speaking, to learn to throw the voice to the back row, and never to waste an audience's time by speaking indistinctly."

"Let women in public life," Mrs. Beckett continued, "try Coué's method on their speech. Soon we will have better speeches, day by day, in every way."

The speaker also urged her audience to add two new words a week to their vocabularies.

SKATING on the Midway Plaisance is the subject of the beautiful three-color cover painting on this issue of the Fort Dearborn Magazine. In this picture the artist, Paul Strayer, gives us his conception of a colorful and picturesque scene familiar to thousands of Chicagoans. The skaters in their gay scarfs and sweaters, the stately buildings of the University of Chicago and the sweep of the broad avenue with its border of bare trees in the background, are shown in the rosy light from the oblique rays of the setting winter sun.

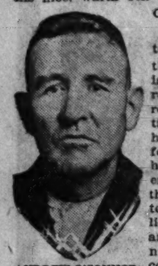
"GROUNDHOG" IN DIVE FOR CELL AS COLD CURLS EARS

Every February "Bum Thief" Is Nabbed.

BY JOHN KELLEY.

The "ground hog" is again back in his nice, warm cell at the House of Correction.



ANDREW O'CONNOR, the "Ground hog." [TRIBUNE Photo.]

It may be well to explain that this "ground hog" is a biped. The records at the bureau of identification show that he has been a thief forty years. He has served a dozen sentences in the Bridewell, two terms in the Joliet penitentiary, and the same number in the county jail. Burglary has been his particular line, but the police say he is a "bum thief."

First Convicted in 1883.

The real name of the "ground hog" is believed to be Andrew O'Connor. That was the name he gave when he was first arrested in 1883. He was 15 years old at the time. Since then he has been convicted of burglary under the following names:

Thomas O'Neill, Anthony O'Connell, Frank Hayes, Charles O'Connell, John Conlon, John Myers, John Collins, John Smith, and Frank Hefron. When arraigned yesterday before Municipal Judge Prindiville he gave the name of John Kelly. He was convicted of larceny. The court gave him ninety days in the house of correction, besides a fine of $50 and costs.

"Thank you, judge," said the "ground hog" as he was led away. "That will put me over the winter fine and dandy."

Thirteenth Trip, but Happy.

While waiting for the Bridewell bus to transport him back to his old home the "ground hog" talked volubly.

"This is my thirteenth trip to the bandhouse," he said, "but I ain't superstitious. Not me. It ain't goin' to be my last. I'm goin' to live to be a hundred.

"Forty years ago when I was a kid I knew all the old dicks. There was Jack Shea, Joe Kipley, Jimmy Murnane, Andy Rohan, Horace Elliott, Ed Laughlin, Denny Simmons, Ed Steele, and a lot more of them. Where are they now? Out in Calvary or in some other cemetery. All dead and gone. And I'm here, ain't I?

"Say, look-a-here. I've been sent to the bandhouse so often that they call me the 'ground hog.' About this time of the year—around the first or second of February—I takes the notion to go back to the old homestead. That's how they gave me the name of the 'ground hog.'

Always Gets Caught.

"I knew this cold spell was headed for Chicago and I says to myself, 'Ground hog, old boy, you'd better get back in your hole.' I tried to 'lift' something and was caught. I knew they'd nail me. In all my forty years of knockin' around I never yet pulled a job and got away clean.

"Forty years ago Jack Shea told me I was a bum thief, and I guess he knew what he was talkin' about. I would just like to for once in my life 'lift' something and get away with it.

"But what's the use of talkin'. I couldn't steal a bushel of cinders where they were givin' them away without bein' nailed for it."

Return Greeted Warmly.

When the Bridewell bus pulled up in front of the Des Plaines street station the driver cordially greeted the "ground hog."

"Hello, there, Ground Hog," he said. "The boys are lonesome for you out at the farm. Hop in. I'll telephone out to the boss to have your own cell put in shape for you."

AMERICANS AND BRITONS DISCUSS RUBBER OUTLOOK

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Representatives of the British rubber producers' associations and the American consumers' associations met with Secretary Hoover today.

The British representatives, explaining the recent legislation in the British colonies in restriction of rubber production and price control as having been necessary in view of the practical collapse of the industry, due to prices below cost of production, stated that their objective was to establish a price under which reasonable returns could be secured and the necessary expansion in rubber plantations obtained in pace with increasing world demand.

The American consumers' representatives stated that they were equally desirous of securing a fair return to the producing industry but were fearful that the restriction plan adopted might at times stimulate speculation and runaway prices.

SAY ANDERSON'S DONATION FUND IS OVER MILLION

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, today sent two books to Acting District Attorney Pecora required by the assistant prosecutor in his investigation of Mr. Anderson's management of the league's affairs. The books, it was reported, showed contributions of more than $1,000,000 to the league from 1917 to 1921, the period in which O. Bertsall Phillips was the principal solicitor of subscriptions.

Phillips alleged that commissions he received on some of these subscriptions were split "fifty-fifty" with Mr. Anderson. The names of all the subscribers to the league during that period are contained in the books, it was said, and it was estimated that Phillips obtained $600,000 for the league.

U. S. Cruiser Arrives at Canton as Battle Impends

CANTON, Feb. 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—With 40,000 troops under Gen. Hsu Tsung-Chi marching on Canton to reclaim it for Sun Yat-Sun and a sanguinary battle imminent, foreign warships, including the American cruiser Helena, anchored in the river today to protect the interests of their nationals.

PAY ROLL THIEVES GET $1,700; AUTO BANDITS ACTIVE

Trio Holds Up Woman in Movie Style.

Another pay roll holdup was added yesterday to the long list when two men robbed Harry Overman, 45 years old, 1842 Humboldt boulevard, paymaster of Sternstein Bros., tailors, 1034 South Leavitt street, of $1,700.

The paymaster was returning from the Liberty Trust and Savings bank, Roosevelt road and Kedzie avenue, whe ntwo shabbily dressed men followed him into the Sternstein building. Armed with revolvers, they seized him in the first floor hallway, hit him on the head, threw him to the ground, and, snatching the canvas bag, fled from the building.

Stage Robbery a la Movies.

An automobile robbery in the style of the movies was staged early yesterday at Kedzie and Foster avenues. A car containing three men drew up behind that of Mrs. Frank C. Dean, 4850 North Leavitt street, and, as she started to increase speed, one of the men jumped from the car to her running board and forced her to stop.

The thieves took her pocketbook, containing $21, and a diamond ring valued at $600, after which they drove away with both cars. Mrs. Dean's automobile was found abandoned later at Ashland and Sunnyside avenues.

August Hill, 1316 Madison street, also was robbed of his automobile. As he was putting it in his garage shortly before midnight, three men covered him with revolvers. They robbed him of $50 and a gold watch, afterwards driving away in the automobile.

Shot Resisting Bandits.

Henry Kiessling, 71 years old, proprietor of the Kriessling Cigar company, was shot in the shoulder early yesterday when resisting two Negroes who attempted to rob his store at 538 Pershing road. The Negroes fled without any loot.

Following a woman decoy into the home of Mrs. Frank Ozeriomski, 1644 West North avenue, on Friday night, an armed man robbed her of $255, she told police. Mrs. Ozeriomski alleged that she struggled with the robbers, but had fainted after a handkerchief had been tied over her mouth. According to police, there was no sign of disorder in the house.

A fight between roommates over financial matters led to the stabbing early yesterday of James Donnelly, 28 years old, 1101 West Madison street. James Dalley, 31 years old, was arrested.

2 Negroes Lynched After Member of Posse Is Shot

Millegeville, Ga., Feb. 3.—Two Negroes were lynched near the line dividing Hancock and Baldwin counties today, following their shooting of Lindsay B. Gilmore, a member of a posse that was pursuing the Negroes, after their alleged robberies during the night.

FIGHTERS OF OLD IRISH ARMY NOW WORK FOR PEACE

Hold Big Meeting in Dublin Today.

DUBLIN, Feb. 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—Another movement for peace is taking shape with the arrival here from all parts of Ireland of delegates to tomorrow's meeting of members of the old Irish Republican party.

These members, who have remained neutral in the conflict between the Free Staters and irregulars, recently reorganized. They are said to number 5,000 and at least 200 of their representatives are expected to attend the conference here. All these men may be said to be republican in sentiment, but all have declined to join either the irregulars or the Free State army.

The meeting will be held behind closed doors. No basis of peace is yet apparent and the leaders of the opposing sides are repeating their old arguments. Eamon de Valera still claims that the republic is the only lawful government and says he is confident that it can function despite the Free State.

Tells on De Valera.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

DUBLIN, Feb. 3.—Revealing the Sinn Fein deliberations before the negotiations of the English treaty, Kevin O'Higgins, minister of home affars, stated today that Eamon de Valera had dictated the following oath:

"I, Eamon de Valera, swear to bear true allegiance to the constitution of Ireland and the treaty of the association of Ireland with the British commonwealth of nations and to recognize the king of Great Britain as the head of the associated states."

This oath formed a part of Mr. de Valera's document two. According to Mr. O'Higgins, Mr. de Valera urged that the Irish legislature vote an annual contribution to the king's personal revenue. Mr. de Valera argued that the British require such an outward sign of recognition of the king.

JUSTICE BLAMES ROTTEN POLITICS ON GOOD CITIZEN

"The curse of our country is that too many citizens are more concerned with their privileges and immunities than with their politics," Chief Justice Floyd E. Thompson of the Supreme court of Illinois yesterday told members of the German club at the Hotel Morrison.

Justice Thompson, who was introduced by Toastmaster Otto F. Reich as "the youngest chief justice in the United States," sounded a warning against the perils of federal governmental aggression and of unrestricted immigration.

"A man or woman who is not interested in politics is not a good American," he said. "Politics is rotten not so much because of the bad men who are in it as because of the good men who are out of it."

WOMAN BELIEVED DOPE RING HEAD IS HELD IN $1,500

In his war on Chicago's drug traffic, United States Commissioner James R. Glass yesterday held to the federal grand jury in bonds of $1,500, Mrs. Nellie Groesinger, arrested Friday in an attempt to smuggle more than $100 worth of morphine in to her husband, Robert Groesinger, federal prisoner at the county jail.

The case of her accomplice, Walter Jones, alias Harry Larkins, vaudeville dancer, of 835 North Clark street, was continued for thirty days to permit his taking the drug cure at the county hospital. Jones collapsed yesterday as a result of being deprived of dope.

Mrs. Groesinger, who recently purchased a $10,000 building at 638 Oakwood boulevard, is thought by federal authorities to be ringleader of a large "dope" ring in the city.

10 RUBLES MEANS 100 TIMES THAT SUM IN RUSSIA

Chicago Lawyer Tells of Jumbled Finance.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

"Ten thousand times ten thousand" is the national financial anthem of the modern Russian ruble, according to Preston Kumler, well known Chicago attorney, who returned from a year's work with the American Relief administration in Russia.

PRESTON KUMLER.

"The ten thousand times ten thousand ruble note," said Mr. Kumler, "is not uncommon. But last summer the arithmetic of money became so complicated that the government issued new notes, with the last three zeroes lopped off. The lowest denomination note now is the 10,000 ruble, but it reads '10.'"

Reads Wrong Side First.

As a result of this simplification of printing the denominations, the attorney says that everybody reads the wrong side of the money first, or, he explains, "there is a note on the reverse side of the bill, stating that it is new money, and worth one hundred times more than it's printed value."

Of Russian women, the returned traveller says, "The prettiest Russian women were found outside of Russia, especially in Constantinople. The reason for this is the tragedy of starvation. In Russia everybody is hungry, if not actually starving. And not even a beautiful woman can be pretty when she is hungry."

In describing the work of the American Relief administration, an organization of 200 workers under the direction of Col. William N. Haskell, Mr. Kumler emphasized that it was run as an efficient business, and not a vague, sentimental undertaking. The association, which started out to feed 1,000,000 starving children, was feeding, last August, 3,500,000 children and 6,000,000 adults.

Soviet Bosses Praised.

Characterizing the "big bosses of the soviet government" as "real thoroughbreds," the American relief worker pointed out that it was not easy for a soviet boss to take orders from an outsider.

"They not only took our orders," he stated, "but furnished us travel by train, boat and animal; they equipped our food kitchens; they financed the employment of subordinate officials to aid our supervisors, and they cooperated with us politically and financially."

It is because of the American relief workers' insistence that railroads be run for their food trains, Mr. Kumler believes, that Russia owes the present functioning of its rail systems.

Rail Traffic Good.

"Before the Americans came," he declared, "there weren't very many people in Russia who had the money or the desire to go anywhere. Neither was there any great demand for freight trains. Therefore, there was no effort to get the trains running.

"With the necessity of getting our food to outlying famine zones came the operation of trains. And now transportation in Russia is better, I believe, than in this country."

There is still distress in Russia, Mr. Kumler stated, but it has been considerably modified by the work of the A. R. A., and by the harvests. But the need of feeding children, he stated, still exists.

400 Gallon Still Owner Held to U. S. Grand Jury

Robert Mink, arrested a week ago in a raid on 1966 Evergreen avenue, when a 400 gallon still was found, was held to the federal grand jury yesterday in bonds of $1,500 on a charge of violating the prohibition act.

TWO MORE RICH AMERICANS ASK PARIS DIVORCES

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS, Feb. 3.—The annual crop of Riviera divorces is beginning to bear fruit, and the foreign colony is astonished to learn that separations will be followed by suits in the cases of Sam Goldenburg, a New York millionaire, and Dr. Julius Rudisch.

Mr. Goldenburg, a semi-invalid, who has lived in Monte Carlo for several years, has come to Paris to commence a divorce action. It is reported that he intends to marry a young divorcée whom he met in the gaming rooms. Mrs. Goldenburg, it is stated, will marry the Duc Choiseul, who has one of the oldest titles in France.

Mr. Rudisch, who is 75, a former director of the Mount Sinai hospital in New York and family physician of the Vanderbilts, left his wife, aged 45, who formerly was Florence Mary Parker, the daughter of a New York stock exchange broker, on Nov. 13.

HOME ENJOYMENT.

This is the season when a well appointed home holds its greatest charm. Slush, mud, and faded turf enhance by contrast the fascination of an easy chair and a fire lit hearth.

It is a good omen for the future of the United States that people are realizing more and more the value of their homes—beginning to see that big dividends in health, happiness, and contentment may be derived from them when both attractive and comfortable.

There is no greater factor for clear thinking and right living than such homes.

MADDEN URGES TAKING FORD'S SHOALS OFFER

Thinks It Best "Business Proposition."

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Acceptance of Henry Ford's Muscle Shoals offer as "a business proposition" was urged in the house today by Representative Madden [Rep., Ill.], chairman of the house appropriations committee.

Mr. Madden said he was carrying out a plan the late Representative Mann had embarked upon prior to his death, having been interested in the project by Frank L. Mann, his brother, who urged development of Muscle Shoals. Interest in the matter was disclaimed by the appropriations chairman "except to see that we decide upon that course which will be of the greatest benefit to the country as a whole."

Summarizes Cost to Date.

The investment in Muscle Shoals by the government to June 30, 1922, was given by Mr. Madden as follows:

Construction cost—Nitrate plant No. 1, $12,887,941; No. 2 (including $1,302,962 on account of Waco quarry), $67,555,355; Gorgas-Warrior plant and transmission line, $4,979,782; dam No. 2 (Wilson dam), including commitments under contracts, $16,281,760. Total, $101,704,838.

Maintenance cost (including experimental operations)—Dam No. 2, $277,577; nitrate plant No. 1, $907,866; No. 2, $3,613,771, or $4,521,737 for both; research laboratory, $833,558; total maintenance, $5,632,872.

Total construction and maintenance, $107,337,710.

Estimate of Future Cost.

Mr. Madden said to make a going plant at Muscle Shoals, it would be necessary to appropriate the following:

1. Auxiliary or reserve water supply to stabilize the flow of the Tennessee river, $20,000,000.

2. Remodeling nitrate plant No. 1, $4,000,000.

3. Remodeling nitrate plant No. 2, $10,000,000.

4. Phosphoric acid plant, $15,000,000; operating fund, $10,000,000.

"These total $59,000,000," Madden said. "Add to that $26,000,000 to complete the Wilson dam and $107,000,000 already invested, and our total outlay will have amounted to $191,000,000. In other words, we will have to sink another $84,000,000 before we can function on an economical basis, excluding, of course, any return on the investment.

"We owe it to the nation to see the thing through. The farmer needs nitrates. My own conviction is that we should accept the Ford offer."

Letter to Employer Leads to Discovery of Suicide

A letter to his employer, telling him that it was the writer's last day on earth, led to discovery yesterday of the body of William T. Campbell, 62 years old, 1851 North Harding avenue, in a gas-filled room at his home. The letter was received yesterday morning by W. J. Templeton, secretary and treasurer of the Pioneer Electric company, 1123 South Wabash avenue. Mr. Templeton immediately notified police.

According to Mr. Templeton, separation from his wife and son, who lived at 1534 North Keystone avenue, was the reason for his act.

RUSSIA REACHES FOR MORE

The Russians are in Mongolia. They are occupying the country by armed force, reports from the far east say. The Chinese, who nominally own the country, have requested the Reds to get out, but the Russians decline to do that. They say that they fear that the Japanese would come in if the land were unprotected. The Chinese resent this, but China is too weak and divided to oust them. Mongolia is said to have vast natural resources, and not to be the barren desert that most people think it is.

GOV. BLAINE AND SIMMONS TRADE UGLY PHRASES

Manufacturer Bidden to Go Elsewhere.

Madison, Wis., Feb. 3.—No effort will be made by Gov. J. J. Blaine to keep the Simmons company of Kenosha in Wisconsin, according to a statement issued by him today regarding the decision by that company, if the tax program now before the legislature is passed, to move from Wisconsin.

The governor said the Simmons company was bluffing, and added that "if other states' tax programs be more desirable to the personal prejudices of Mr. Simmons and his company, in perfect candor I suggest that he go thither."

"It may be interesting to the people of the state to know that Mr. Simmons' company will be required to pay, in round numbers, $145,000 additional income taxes which the Simmons company has covered up," the statement said, and asked if "this does not explain the reason why that corporation is opposed to the repeal of the secrecy clause."

"Mr. Simmons' wail is an ancient cry," the governor continued. "We have heard that same sort of bluffing in Wisconsin for the last twenty-five years."

Simmons Makes Vigorous Reply.

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 3.—Z. G. Simmons, president of the Simmons company of Kenosha, made a caustic reply today to Gov. Blaine's statement regarding the announcement that the executive offices of the Simmons company are being moved to New York. Mr. Simmons declared that in his previous statement he made no mention whatever of taxes.

"As for the statement of Gov. Blaine that the Simmons company 'covered up' $145,000 taxes, all I wish to say is that this statement is a deliberate falsehood.

"The facts are as I have said. Wisconsin is not fair to industry, and the following will be a typical proof of it: We made our return, using the percentages of depreciation as the United States government has allowed us for the last six years and which we have found through experience to be just, but Wisconsin, knowing more about our particular industry, said our depreciation charges were too high, and consequently set their own percentages, which piled up through six years of returns an important part of the $145,000 of taxes. He does not state that the personal property offset wipes out over $100,000 of this sum.

"Politicians in Power."

"He does say, however, we covered up—inferring that we are deliberate tax dodgers.

"Citizens of Wisconsin, this is an accurate picture of your governor, and is what I meant when I said 'unscrupulous politicians are in power in Wisconsin'."

Mr. Simmons said that the Simmons company never objected to the repeal of the secrecy clause of the state income law, but that he personally was opposed to such action because he did not believe his personal affairs were the general public's business.

UNCLE SAM LOST $1,800,000,000 AS R. R. OPERATOR

Carriers' Claims Adjusted, Davis Says.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—Losses sustained by the government from war-time operation of railroads and its aftermath of earnings guarantees and damage settlements will total approximately $1,800,000,000, according to data made available today for the first time in a report by James C. Davis, former director general of railroads, transmitted to congress by President Harding. Not only does the amount come within congressional appropriations already made, but there will also be a return to the treasury, of about $400,000,000 in cash and railroad securities.

Mr. Davis' estimates are based on the showing actually made in liquidation of accounts between the government and corporate owners of 80 per cent of the railroad mileage which the government took over.

U. S. Losses Nearly Two Billions.

Accounting in connection with the government operation has gone through three phases, and involves the interstate commerce commission as well as the railroad administration. Losses in direct operation of the roads and in the later settlement of capital investment and other claims, as now practically completed by Mr. Davis, are shown to reach a total of $1,250,000,000. To this is added a sum of between $525,000,000 and $600,000,000, which has been, or will be, paid by the commission to short line railroads and to class one carriers. This last amount includes payment under the guarantee given the roads by congress of earnings during the six months of 1920 just after the government relinquished the properties.

Scaling Down of Claims.

A remarkable scaling down in claims originally made by the roads against the government is shown by Mr. Davis' report, which marks the beginning of the end of the entire venture. To date the roads have demanded $952,642,068 on grounds of undermaintenance, damages, loss of inventory, and for other reasons. Up to Dec. 31 final adjustment had been made with corporations which sought $731,921,814, of that total the government having put out a net amount of only $171,815,541. Mr. Davis expects the balance of unadjusted claims amounting to $220,720,253, to be closed out by October without any additional expenditure.

FARMERS CARRY BOARD SEAT FIGHT TO LEGISLATURE

Tax on All Grain Deals Also Sought.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Organized farming interests of Illinois are aiming at three objectives in the present session of the legislature—a coöperative marketing measure of state-wide scope, a voice in the Chicago Board of Trade, and good roads.

A flank movement against the Board of Trade is seen in two measures. One is to create a seat on the board for a representative of the proposed Coöperative Marketing association. This will come in a bill sponsored by the State Agricultural association, which was refused membership on the board. The second is a bill which will be introduced by Senator Harold C. Kessinger [Rep., Kane], placing a tax of one-eighth of a cent a bushel on all future trading on the board.

Explains Marketing Bill.

The coöperative marketing measure is expected to be made an agricultural committee bill in both houses. Senator Simon E. Lantz [Rep., Woodford], who fathered a bill, which was defeated two years ago, prohibiting trading in futures, is chairman of the senate agriculture committee. He said:

"This new market law which the farmers want will permit them to sell their products in large units. It is in line with the provisions of the Republican national platform, and President Harding has expressed himself in favor of such organizations. There is no law at present in this state which sets forth clearly what the farmers are permitted to do in the way of pooling and selling their products.

"The farmers are not asking any exemption from any law. The kind of a marketing law that they want and which will be presented by the committee is already in force in ten or twelve states. It would establish a selling agency which should tend to stabilize the market. They merely want to market their products to the best advantage. The bill would provide a seat for the association on the Chicago Board of Trade."

Await Court Ruling.

The question of trading in futures is now before the United States Supreme court. If this question is thrown back to the states for legislation a new form of Lantz bill may be expected this session. Senator Kessinger explained his bill as follows:

"The bill which I will introduce places a tax of one-eighth of a cent a bushel on all future trading on the Chicago Board of Trade and will be introduced purely as a revenue measure. The figures gathered by the federal trade commission showed that fifty-six out of every fifty-seven transactions were purely speculative; that only one bushel out of every fifty-seven bushels was a bushel of real grain, this grade of business paying a commission of an average of one-eighth of a cent a bushel for handling.

"A great many teachers of the state, as well as farmers, join with the Prairie Farmer and other farm papers in support of a plan to put a similar tax equal to the commission collected on every bushel of futures.

See $20,000,000 Revenue.

"It is estimated that a tax of one-eighth of a cent per bushel will raise a fund of $20,000,000 a year for the schools of Illinois. This would take a great load off the owners of tangible property, especially from the owners of farm lands, and it would be put upon the grain speculators, and yet be so small in comparison with the total value of the speculative business that it would hardly be noticed."

As to roads, the farmers want all the roads they can get, but preferably the so-called "farm to market" roads. Almost every day delegations from the country descend upon the state capitol with demands for some new road or completion of a route already begun. Gov. Small is encouraging this and is planning a new road map to present with his $100,000,000 bond issue bill. The citizens appeal to their representatives. The representatives know they cannot get much unless they "go along" with the administration. This situation constitutes the governor's hold on the legislature at present.

There is little doubt that there will be a bond issue referendum adopted sufficient to complete the system already mapped, the building of 1,047 new road miles. This will take about $30,000,000 and cannot be completed, it is said, until 1925.

Opponents of the $100,000,000 bond issue are arguing that nothing more than the $30,000,000 will be needed until the next session.

U. S. FARM LOANS SOON TO SPROUT IN NEW FIELDS

Enactment of Lenroot Bill Sows Seed.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Enactment into law of the Lenroot rural credits bill, as passed by the senate yesterday and now pending before the house committee on banking and currency, will mean an expansion of the activities of the present farm loan system into a new field.

The bill does not interfere in any way with the farm mortgage business of the present twelve federal land banks or the sixty-seven joint stock land banks, but will establish as an adjunct to the twelve federal land banks new farm credit agencies dealing in so-called personal credits. Loans, discounts, and debentures of the new agencies, which are designated as farm credits departments of the land banks, will be based on warehouse receipts, live stock, or agricultural security other than farm land.

The loans of the present land banks and the joint stock land banks are based on land mortgages and are designed to help tenant farmers purchase their farms. The new agencies are intended to aid in financing the production and marketing of crops and the fattening and marketing of live stock.

Given Increased Power.

The federal farm loan board, which will have supervision of the entire system, will become an even more important factor in the financial affairs of the country.

The present twelve federal land banks are coöperative institutions, the borrowers having gradually acquired stock originally subscribed by the government. The original stock of each bank was $750,000. The present capitalization of the twelve banks is $36,997,950, of which only about $3,000,000 is still held by the government. Under the Lenroot bill the government will subscribe an initial capital of $5,000,000 for a new farm credits department in each of the twelve banks. The total government capital for the twelve may run to $120,000,000.

The joint stock land banks are privately financed and managed, but with the same tax exemption privileges for their bonds enjoyed by the federal land banks. The sixty-seven joint stock land banks are scattered among thirty-three states. They must have a minimum capital of $250,000.

Land Banks' Status on Dec. 31.

The twelve federal land banks on Dec. 31 had outstanding land mortgage loans aggregating $639,486,434 and outstanding bonds authorized and issued amounting to $642,708,375. The joint stock land banks on the same date had outstanding land mortgage loans aggregating $218,775,291 and bonds aggregating $212,980,100. Their capital stock totaled $24,870,731.

This was the announcement of Judge A. B. Anderson today. Sixty-six of the defendants pleaded not guilty when arraigned yesterday. One, Mike Drakulich of Indiana Harbor, pleaded guilty. Eight have not been arrested.

They came—they saw—they were pleased with the New Ontra Cafeteria

Last Sunday there was a gala event on the North Shore. Thousands of people, young and old—whole families in some instances—attended the formal opening of the New Ontra on Wilson Avenue.

It was made unmistakably plain to Miss Dutton that Chicago's great uptown center appreciates and whole-heartedly welcomes the same identical cafeteria operation which has won the favor of so many thousands of downtown Chicago's best informed people.

Ontra patrons are of a class who get the most out of life—they make sensible use of the purchasing power of the money they spend. When you come to breakfast, luncheon or dinner today, whether downtown or uptown, note the plain evidences that Ontra patrons are, for the most part, people who intelligently plan their affairs.

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION TIGHTENS NET AMATEURISM

ENTRY LIST FOR SINGLES TOURNEY IS CUT IN HALF

Dwight F. Davis Elected to Presidency.

NATIONAL NET DATES

THE following places and dates were assigned for national tennis championship events at the annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis association here today:

Women's covered court, singles and doubles, to the Longwood Cricket club, Boston, March 12 to 17.

Women's singles and doubles to the Women's singles and doubles, to the West Side Tennis club, Forest Hills, Aug. 13-18.

Men's singles and doubles and veterans' singles, Germantown Cricket club, Philadelphia, Sept. 7 to 17.

Girls' singles and doubles, Philadelphia Cricket club, Sept. 10 to 15.

Men's doubles, mixed doubles, veterans' doubles, father and son doubles, junior singles and doubles, boys' singles and doubles, to the Longwood Cricket club, Boston, Aug. 20 to 25.

Davis cup challenge round, West Side Tennis club, Forest Hills, N. Y., early in September.

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Making the rules governing amateurism more stringent, halving the entry list for the men's national singles tournament, passing upon the West Side Tennis club's plans to erect a "national" tennis stadium and adopting a schedule of national championships, were a few of the more important matters that engaged the delegates to the annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis association this afternoon and evening at the Waldorf-Astoria.

DWIGHT F. DAVIS. [Keystone View.]

There was a large attendance of delegates and complete harmony prevailed with regard to all the leading topics of discussion. The meeting elected Dwight F. Davis of St. Louis, donor of the Davis cup, as successor to Julian S. Myrick in the presidency of the association.

Other New Officers.

Other officers elected were:

Vice president—George W. Wightman, Boston.

Secretary—Paul Williams, Utica, N. Y.

Treasurer—Louis B. Dailey, East Orange, N. J.

Delegates at large—R. N. Williams, Philadelphia; Jones W. Mersereau, New York; Samuel H. Collom, Philadelphia.

Sectional delegates—E. M. Garnett, Salt Lake City; Walter A. Goss, Portland, Ore.; B. M. Grant, Atlanta, Ga.

The full ticket of the nominating committee went through without argument. The nominating committee for 1924 will be composed of L. H. Waidner of Chicago, chairman; Joseph W. Wear, Philadelphia, and J. C. Aucinclos, New York.

Announcement was made of the appointment of the western sectional delegate as follows: James C. Stewart of Chicago.

Atlantic Delegate Named.

The middle Atlantic section, which had not been represented by an active section, will have Nathan H. Bundy of Norfolk, Va., as its delegate at large. This section contains twenty clubs from Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, and the District of Columbia.

The clay court championship was awarded, as usual, to the Western association and probably will be played at Indianapolis, where it was held last summer. St. Louis, through the Missouri Valley Sectional association, was a candidate for this event.

Reducing the entry list for the national men's singles from 128 to sixty-four players, "in order to insure a tournament of real championship caliber," was the principal action affecting playing of the game. The association also voted to limit "seeded" players in this tournament to sixteen—eight Americans and eight foreigners.

The rule will not be made so hard and fast, however, as to hold the figure to sixty-four, provided there are additional players who have demonstrated their right to recognition. The matter of judgment will be allowed to enter the tournament committee's decision.

Gets Davis' Challenge Round.

The association ratified the action of the executive committee in awarding to the West Side Tennis club at Forest Hills, Long Island, one of the principal tournaments for each of the next ten years for which the club will erect a concrete stadium seating 13,000 persons which can be enlarged, temporarily or permanently, to care for 21,000.

The club was awarded the Davis cup challenge round for this year and the national men's singles for the five years beginning in 1924. For the following four years the club will have the option of the Davis cup challenge round or the national men's singles.

The cost of erecting the stadium, $350,000, will be met by the sale of 1,500 seats at the principal tournaments for the ten year period, at $100 each.

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune.

The Question.

What basketball team do you pick to win the Western conference championship this winter?

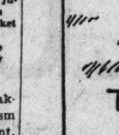
Where Asked.

Of University of Chicago students, Bartlett gymnasium.

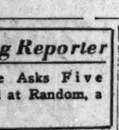
The Answers.

Walter Stevens, 6359 South Hermitage avenue — The Iowa team. I saw them play at Chicago. What I noticed above all was the size of their team. Each player was about the same height and same weight, and they are all of the basketball type—the tall and rangy type of players. Their team is well balanced, and they work as a unit. No individual stars, but any man could be called a star.

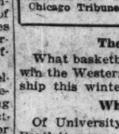
R. B. MacFarlane, 5747 University avenue—I think Michigan will win the tournament. They have a very strong team, and have already hit their slump, which probably every team has to do. Their star man, Early, has been out, and with him back in the lineup they will recover from their slump and will come through a winner. Iowa is a strong team, but they haven't had their slump yet.



George Lyndon, 5747 University avenue—My choice for the championship team is Iowa. They are a fast, aggressive basketball team. Analyzing the points of the various teams, I believe Iowa has the largest number of strong ones in her favor. I am looking forward for them to beat Wisconsin in the final.



Alex Jones, 1427 East 71st place—I pick Wisconsin, because of the superior guards on their team. They use the Meanwell system, and that's a pretty good system. Not having lost a game, they stand a pretty good chance. In the game against Chicago, Williams surprised the crowd by taking the ball from the opponents' basket, dribbling the length of the floor, and shooting a basket.



Blair Roderick Laughlin, 5754 Woodlawn avenue—I pick Iowa. They have good basket shooters. They are clever players, and they are fast. They have the skill and the fight that will bring them up from behind any time they get caught—should they get caught.

JOIE RAY HANGS UP NEW RECORD IN HUNTER MILE

Boston, Mass., Feb. 3.—Joie Ray, Illinois Athletic club champion runner, tonight won the Hunter mile race, feature event of the annual Boston A. A. games, by outdistancing Ray Buker of the home club and breaking the tape in 4:19 for a new record in the event. Uncorking a burst of speed on the eighth lap, Ray ripped past his opponent for a thirty-five yard margin.

J. W. Driscoll of the Boston A. A. took possession of the A. Paul Keith Memorial cup by winning the opening 660 yard feature event from I. S. C. Cook of Syracuse in 1:25 2-5. J. B. Demming of Newark, who led most of the way, was reduced to third place by the end of the race.

Ray Watson Beaten.

Ed Knourek of the Illinois A. C., scratch man in the pole vault, bowed to Skiles of Dartmouth, who mounted to 12 feet 3 inches. Skiles was given a six inch handicap, which the westerner could not overcome. Ray Watson, also of the Illinois A. C. squad, running from scratch, lost the 1,000 yard handicap run to Nolan of Fordham by but a few yards.

John L. Murphy of Portland, Ore., former Notre Dame star, won the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 4¼ inches. Flahive of Boston college, with a handicap of 1¼ inches, was second, and Brown of Dartmouth, scratch, third, with a jump of 6 feet 2¼ inches. Murphy failed at 6 feet 6 inches in a try for a new indoor record.

McCready Beats Alword.

Don McCready, Massachusetts Agricultural college runner, defeated H. M. Alword of Yale in the 1,000 yard run by finishing in 2:21⅘. McCready was forced to overcome a twenty-six yard handicap given Alword, but fouled the distance ten yards ahead of his opponent. George Nolan of Fordham, with a twenty yard handicap, placed third.

Carl Christiurnson, Swedish national champion, twice tied the indoor mark of six seconds for the forty-five yards high hurdles. The Swedish star, competing unattached, won both trials and semi-final heats in this time, at which seven shared the record previously. In the final heat Christiurnson won, but in slower time, 6 2-10 seconds, limping slightly. Summaries:

40 yard dash—Won by Murchison, Newark A. C.; Bowman, Syracuse, second; Carroll, Holy Cross, third. Time, :04 7-10.

45 yard high hurdles—Won by Christurnson, Sweden, unattached; Sullivan, Boston A. A., second; Elliott, Exeter, third. Time, :06 2-10.

One mile run—Won by Francis, Boston university, 30 yards; Fricker, unattached, 50 yards, second; Mahoney, Boston college, 15 yards, third.

One mile walk [handicap]—Won by Pearman, New York A. C. [5 seconds]; Thiant, Morningside A. C. [scratch], second; Wilson, Boston A. A. [25 seconds], third. Time, 6:47 1-5.

600 yard run—Won by Driscoll, Boston A. A.; Cook, Syracuse, second; Demming, Newark A. C., third. Time, 1:25 2-5.

Pole vault [handicap]—Won by Skiles, Dartmouth [6 inches]; Knourek, Illinois A. C. [scratch], second; Davis, Harvard [2 inches], third. Height, 12 feet 9 inches.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

AUTO SHOW A SUCCESS.

FROM a sales viewpoint, the auto show which ended last night was a success—the greatest ever held, according to many dealers. Despite the tremendous output of 1922, the market is far from the oft-discussed "saturation" point if the show may be accepted as a reliable criterion.

Commenting on sales, a Chicago representative of a popular make selling around the $1,500 mark, told The Wake: "Our retail sales, this is sales to other than dealers, was just eight times what it was for the show of 1922. Perhaps that is above the average, for we think our car is gaining favor, but it is indicative of the trend. Other representatives tell me of large increases in actual sales.

"What surprised me even more was that 80 per cent of these were "no trade" sales—that is, we did not have to accept old cars as partial payment. That indicates the buyers were people who had not owned a car before. It is, of course, more satisfactory to us to make an outright sale than to take over an old car."

All of which prompted a third party to the conversation to inquire quizzically, "where do the people get it?"

SEEING The Auto Show.

Every year we always go
Over to the auto show,
There to see the fancy styls,
Maybe sit in one awhile.
Pa, he likes the one in blue,
Ma, she likes another hue.
Family disagrees with those,
Ought to get a car that's closed.
"What about our car?" asks Pa.
Salesman coughs and then says, "Ah,
At least one hundred dollars."
That makes pa turn up his collars,
Put his hat upon his dome,
Then we all start back for home.
Every year we always go
Down to SEE the auto show.

WAKE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

Dear Wake: With the advent of February the Commuter takes renewed interest in life. The new seed catalog has made its appearance and in its study the mind sees the garden complete—the planting in April and May, then on through the months of fruits, vegetables, and flowers. An open winter only makes the individual more restless to begin.

In the chicken coop a Plymouth Rock has sensed the approach of spring—she sits on a nest over-night and dreams of a three weeks' vigil with fluffy little chicks as a reward for watchful waiting, but with the cold morning air comes realization and for the day's work she is content to let a large brown egg tell of her interest in life.

The Commuter is a creature of habit. He rides a certain train to his work and a certain train home—an extra minute in the morning means another strip of bacon or another wheat cake, so he longs for spring and freedom from a heavy overcoat on the daily run for his favorite train, to ride which, even for only twenty-eight days, involves $7.70 for a February Glencoe ticket.

BENTON SOUGHT BY GIANTS PRIOR TO REDS' OFFER

New York, Feb. 3.—[United Press.]—No offer of $50,000 [as reported] was made to the St. Paul association club last summer by the New York Giants for Pitcher Rube Benton, according to a cable received from John J. McGraw at the Giant offices.

McGraw claims that when the Giants were badly in need of pitching in the middle of the 1922 pennant race he asked Mike Kelly, manager of St. Paul, to set a price on Benton, but that Kelly refused to do so, and negotiations were dropped.

HENRY GLIDERS WIN CITY-WIDE SKATE TOURNEY

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Henry playground skaters, developed by John Mock, yesterday won the city-wide skating tournament held at Garfield park by scoring 12 points. Waters playground, where Walter Sonnenleiter is director, was second with 8 points, and Ryerson third with 7 points.

O'NEIL FARRELL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

The finals were held in the bitter cold and on steel blue ice. In fact, the skating surface was so hard that many of the contestants whose skates had not been sharpened were at a disadvantage. Others who had been more thoughtful had their blades sharpened in the morning, with the result they held the corners and made much better showings.

Second in Relays.

In addition to winning the meet, Henry skaters finished second in both relays, which did not count in the point column. The playground's victory was brought about by Willard Taylor, who captured first place in the 220 yard race for boys under 15 years, and Melvin Larson, who won the half mile for boys under 19.

Cornelius Ewart of Robey, who is considered one of the leading skaters in the playground system, won the open championship mile, while O'Neil Farrell of Ryerson captured the quarter mile for racers under 17 years and skated on the winning relay team.

Miss Cox Defeated.

In the girls' races, defeat of Evelyn Cox of Waters playground by Helen Kauffman of the same playground was the big surprise. In this race, open to girls over 15 years, Miss Kauffman crossed the line an easy winner and will be a factor in races to be held during the remainder of this year and next year. Bernice Byrne of Brentano took the 220 yard event for girls under 15 years in handy fashion.

Before the races E. C. Delaporte, who has charge of athletic activities in the public school athletic league, announced a team of Chicago schoolboy skaters will be taken to Milwaukee for an intercity meet on Feb. 17. Delaporte also is negotiating with Cleveland for a similar meet.

Small Crowd Braves Weather.

Owing to the cold weather, only a small crowd turned out to see the meet, which was well handled by a corps of competent officials. Summaries:

WITH BIG BOUT DEAD, GIBBONS IS CHOICE TO OPPOSE DEMPSEY

NEW YORK, Feb. 3.—[United Press.]—With a "big bout" stopped from all ends and the middle, a "litle bout" is now in order for Jack Dempsey, and it is already being planned.

In announcing officially that the New York boxing commission would not stand for a Dempsey-Wills or a Dempsey-Willard bout or any other big championship bout, Chairman Muldoon said his opposition was based on the money involved and the over-importance attached to the proceedings.

Dempsey is going to meet some one this summer, that is a certainty, and with some such official sentiment against another "battle of the century," he will go through what can be considered an ordinary defense of his title.

Several prospects are in sight for this "little bout," but Tom Gibbons is the outstanding one, and he will be selected if he wins from Floyd Johnson when they meet in Madison Square garden on March 19.

WILLS GETS BOUT IF I PROMOTE MYSELF: KEARNS

BY HENRY F. FARRELL.

New York, Feb. 3.—[United Press.]—"Jack Dempsey will fight Harry Wills for the world's championship this summer. The public wants the bout, the press wants it, we want it, and it will be held if I have to promote it myself."

This from Jack Kearns, who handles the business affairs for Dempsey.

Kearns said he did not want to appears as if he were acting in defiance of authorities, but said he figured he had not been given a fair deal and that he couldn't get justice for his fighter in New York or New Jersey.

Take Bout Elsewhere.

"There are other places," he declared. "We can't get as much money if we do not stage the bout in the center of a big population, but under the conditions we can't get any money in New York or New Jersey," Kearns said.

The champion's manager went on to say that he had been forced by the boxing commission to accept the challenge of Harry Wills under a threat of suspension.

"Then we waited all summer for a promoter to make an offer. Plenty of offers were made, but they were made by irresponsibles seeking publicity. We were ordered back here to get ready, and the only things we have heard are: Willard is too old, Gibbons is too light, Johnson is too green, Wills is too black—nothing but 'toos.'"

"Commercialism" Peeves Kearns.

Kearns was particularly peeved about the edict that Dempsey could not fight any one because of "too much commercialism."

"They cannot accuse us of commercialism when we haven't asked for a thing and we haven't made any kind of a demand for money. I think it is only fair that a man should be entitled to a share of what he attracts. Dempsey wants to work on a percentage basis with the promoters. He not only wants to, but he is going to work on a share of the receipts. He will not accept any kind of a guarantee.

"They have made me million dollar offers, but the doors were open for the reporters to hear it, and the men who talked of millions didn't have a hundred in their pockets or at their command.

How Much Does Jack Want?

"Bennie Leonard, I am told, gets 50 per cent of the receipts when he defends a lightweight championship. I am not saying how much Dempsey thinks his services are worth. Maybe less than 50 per cent. It all depends on the size of the arena selected.

"Supposing the Dempsey and Wills show did draw another $1,000,000 gate. The attendance should be just as big as his last appearance. The Dempsey-Carpentier fight was a romance; the Dempsey-Wills affair will be a contest."

Kearns said there were several places where they could stage the bout but he mentioned only Tia Juana, Mexico., where James Coffroth is operating a race track.

TEX' EFFORT TO GET WILLARD GO BRINGS CRISIS

Politicians Help to Muddy Pugilistic Waters.

JACK SPURNS $50,000

JERSEY CITY, N. J., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, was in this city yesterday to hold a conference with Enoch Holmes, local promoter. Holmes informed Kearns that he is willing to post a $50,000 forfeit to bind a contest in which the heavyweight titleholder would be a principal. The figures Holmes is reported to have named were said to be insufficient to interest Kearns.

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

Boxing in New York and New Jersey hangs by a thread, with two active factions swinging hatchets at each other and liable to destroy the game they live upon.

TOM O'ROURKE. [P. & A. Photo.]

Tex Rickard's insistence upon forcing a match between Jess Willard and Jack Dempsey brought about the crisis, but it was brewing for months, and the attempt to foist that match upon the public directly brought about the situation, which perhaps none desired, but all expected.

There is a faction in New York City, politically and financially powerful, which is determined to prevent Harry Wills from fighting Dempsey. This faction has forced the presure so hard upon William Muldoon, chairman of the New York state athletic commission, that he is practically compelled to forbid any match including Wills.

Walker Gives Warning.

Yet at Albany Gov. Al Smith and Senator Jimmy Walker, who is leader of the New York legislature and in command of patronage, declare that they, as Democrats, cannot distinguish between white and black men, and Walker, who has been struggling to prevent any outbreak between the factions and to save boxing, has declared that if Wills is forbidden to fight it will mean the death of boxing in New York.

Just as strongly, the New York City element declares, that if Wills is matched against Dempsey they will kill boxing.

Tex Rickard, after paying $1,000 for the privilege of looking over the situation regarding a match for Dempsey, backed out and threw up both hands. He discovered that he could not stage a Willard match either in New York or New Jersey, and he knew before starting that to touch a Wills match meant to invite an attack by the anti-Wills political power of New York City.

No Chance for O'Rourke.

Kearns, Friday night, also threw up both hands. He said that it was all off unless Walker could save the day. He said there was no chance for Tom O'Rourke to stage any matches at the Polo grounds. He said that O'Rourke had the financial backing [O'Rourke has said that Charles A. Stoneham is his backer], but that the New York commission never would give O'Rourke a license to put on a Dempsey-Beckett, or a Dempsey-Wills match.

While O'Rourke has made what seems like a legitimate bid, and has offered to put up a forfeit of $50,000 as a guarantee that he can go through with the program he has proposed, his bids are not taken seriously. O'Rourke has not the consent of the commission and, unless pressure is brought to bear so strongly as to overcome that of the New York political financial powers, it will not be.

This muddle, stirred up by the attempt to get Dempsey into the ring, is mostly political—but there are complications which lead into various channels.

Dempsey Signs, But—

Months ago, Muldoon, chairman of the athletic commission, ordered Dempsey to sign for a fight with Harry Wills and threatened to declare the heavyweight title vacated unless he did. Kearns and Dempsey signed. Immediately they were told that they must lay off until after election. They were told that an attempt to stage a championship fight between white and black would be disastrous to the political fortunes of the Republican party.

Then they came back to sign—and were met again with objections to such a match, complicated by a storm of protest against permitting Willard to fight Dempsey.

The situation is too complicated for an outsider to understand clearly. There is an insistent demand in boxing circles for a fight between Dempsey and Wills. Kearns is willing, Dempsey is anxious to fight, half a dozen promoters are eager to stake it, yet they dodge as soon as they face the facts, which are, that some power will not permit it.

Just what this power is, no outsider has been able to find out. With the governor and the leader of the legislature favoring it, the word is sent out that it will not be allowed.

The promoters are afraid to attempt it in New Jersey.

Rickard spent a week and a thousand dollars and surrendered. He still argues that the Willard match would have been a good one—which leaves him and Willard the only two holding that idea.

"You may roast all you please," he said after giving up, "but that match would have drawn a tremendous crowd."

Muldoon Fixture Till 1924?

There are serious complications in the situation. Muldoon, as chairman of the athletic commission, has some sort of a promise that he can remain during this year. Meantime he continues as czar of boxing and wrestling. Gov. Smith has refused to listen to the demands that Muldoon be thrown out and a Democrat named to replace him.

The foes of Tex Rickard, who now are in political ascendency, have been trying to force Muldoon out, in order to name a man who will be against Rickard. They have advanced the name of Tex O'Rourke, now head of the still surviving International Sporting club, which is seeking to hold fights in Madison Square Garden, as chairman.

The active enemies of Rickard are demanding that the so-called "trust" be smashed and Rickard driven out, but most of them want to form the same sort of a trust, with their own friends running it.

The organization of managers and lovers of boxing is striving to secure a commission which will be fair to all and controlled by none—not that they love Rickard but because they are afraid that the entire boxing game will be wrecked if the factional fights continue.

Test Bill in March.

Senator Walker said last week that he intended to take up the amending of the boxing bill in a fortnight, get it into committee, and that the test would come some time during March. He feared then that the attempt to promote fights at the present time might kill boxing, and warned the managers that the situation is dangerous.

Now that the Wills affair is strongly forbidden by Muldoon (the same who ordered it made), the situation has been carried to a climax weeks before the more cautious of the managers wanted it mentioned. In fact, they did not want the thing stirred up until the new commissions in New York and New Jersey were chosen, and the New York law amended. But the fat is in the fire now.

Dempsey, who has been disgusted with all the wrangling and sore because he threw up a big movie offer to try to arrange fights, says he is about done with the boxing game and ready to earn a living at acting. Kearns said that he was "going to work" and would book Dempsey for theatrical engagements unless Senator Walker came to the rescue and straightened out the nasty political tangle in New York.

Jess Passes Up $25,000.

Willard, who had been promised a match by Rickard, is going on the road, sore and disappointed. He refused $25,000 to box Floyd Johnson—and perhaps regrets it. Johnson thinks not.

Meantime there is another complication in the situation which is between the Madison Square Garden crowd and the promoters who seek to use the ball parks.

That situation will interest the baseball fans, and perhaps throw some light on the methods of the boxing ring in New York.

"CZAR" MULDOON ADAMANT

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Chairman William Muldoon of the State Athletic commission, is not in the least apprehensive over the threat of Senator James J. Walker, father of the boxing law in this state, to work for the repeal of the law if he is convinced that a world's heavyweight championship bout between Jack Dempsey and Harry Wills, colored challenger, is prohibited in this state.

"I think Senator Walker acted hastily in committing himself to the extent he is reported to have done," said Chairman Muldoon. "Of course, I can appreciate Senator Walker's position. He is a state senator, a politician, and possibly he felt constrained to declare his attitude. Anybody can appreciate that. That's as far as I want to go on Senator Walker's reported statement.

Muldoon Justifies Act.

"From my own point of view," continued Chairman Muldoon, "I am satisfied I will have the support of every right thinking citizen in my attitude. There has been no snap judgment in this particular situation. Those responsible for the action of the commission were permitted to run their full course. When I thought it time to call a halt I did so, in a manner which I determined, after long deliberation and consideration of the situation from all sides, was the only way in which to check the condition which threatened the sport.

"I have no prejudice against Wills as a boxer or a man. My knowledge of Wills is that he is an upright, clean living citizen, a credit to athletics. I am not prejudiced against any creed or color. The world is my country and to do good is my religion. In the present situation I am convinced I am doing good—that I am working for the best interests of boxing, as I intend to do as long as I hold this office."

Wills Gets Back Forfeit.

Chairman Muldoon announced that so far as the state athletic commission is concerned the Dempsey-Wills world's heavyweight championship situation is a closed incident. At this morning's meeting Chairman Muldoon ordered returned to Wills the latter's forfeit of $3,500, posted some time ago with the board, together with a challenge to Dempsey for a title bout.

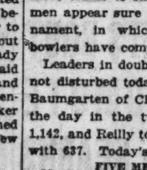
FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

by A. R. METCALFE.

PLACING CARDS FROM BIDDING EASY.

PLACING cards from the bidding is comparatively simple. Placing cards from the failure of one or more players to bid is much more involved, but counting the number of cards in the various suits on account of a player's failure to bid is very subtle reasoning indeed. The deal which follows exemplifies this in a remarkable manner.

THE HANDS.



Score, 0—0.

South dealt and passed. West bid one no trump, which closed the bidding. North had the original lead.

West secured ten tricks.

The Declarer's Play.

After the second trick the declarer could positively mark the ace of diamonds in the north hand. South played the king of hearts and ace of spades on the first two tricks and had he held in addition the ace of diamonds would have bid no trump instead of passing.

The declarer decided to finesse the spade suit toward north on account of the heart situation.

At trick 5 west continued the club suit, not expecting to catch the queen, but with the intention of allowing north to win with that card and lead whatever he pleased. This failing, it was necessary to lead the diamond and win with the king in the dummy, then finesse the spade suit through the south hand and win a very easy game.

It was easy at this stage to place the jack of spades in the south hand on account of the discards.

The Play by North.

North was given an opportunity in this deal for wonderful reasoning, but failed completely to rise to the occasion. At trick 7 he only knew that south must hold the queen of diamonds or the declarer would have developed that suit earlier; he expected west to finesse the ten of diamonds, in which case south would win with the queen.

North should have reasoned as follows: After the second trick the deuce of hearts could be placed in the south hand, the nine of that suit in the declarer's hand, while the six, the only other missing card, was uncertain.

North clearly reasoned, however, that the six was probably in the declarer's hand, as with only three of the suit west would probably have played the jack from dummy at trick one and would also have been apt to hold back his ace until the third round. Therefore north properly switched, although a diamond play at this juncture might have shown better judgment.

When it developed that south held but two clubs and when at trick 7 south discarded the trey of diamonds north should have been able to count his partner's hand exactly. There was no longer room for doubt as to the heart suit, as south would have discarded a heart for his partner's information had there been two remaining in his hand.

It was also evident that south must still have an honor in the spade suit, as otherwise the declarer would have continued that suit. North therefore could tell that his partner held originally exactly two clubs and three hearts. This left eight cards which were diamonds and spades.

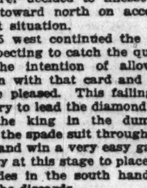
South must have held four diamonds originally, as had he held five spades, including the ace and another honor, with the fair strength which he had already developed in the other suits, he would have bid one spade originally instead of passing. Thus north should have been able to mark the ten of diamonds as a singleton in the west hand because east would not bid one spade.

The result of this reasoning would have been the play of the ace of diamonds by north, followed by two rounds of hearts, compelling the declarer to lead the spade suit from his own hand up to south, thereby saving the game.

Refusing to win is often the best method of winning. It is quite necessary in auction to learn when to throw away cards that would win tricks in order to avoid being forced to lead some other suit at a disadvantage.

In the deal which follows, the play by the declarer is of the first order, but one of his adversaries failed to rise to the occasion.

THE HANDS.



Score, 0—0.

North dealt and bid one heart, east two clubs, south three hearts, west three no trump, north and east passed, south doubled, and the bidding closed. North had the initial lead.

West secured nine tricks.

It was apparent to the declarer as soon as he saw the dummy that his ninth trick must be secured with the ten of hearts. This meant, of course, that hearts must be led by north and that south must not be permitted to win a trick during the deal.

After the second trick it was easy to count south with at least five diamonds, as, otherwise, that player would have held six or more spades and probably bid that suit.

The declarer, therefore, led the ace of diamonds at trick 7 in order to rob north of any card of exit in that suit. His only problem after that was to thrust the lead upon north with a spade, as he knew that there were still four hearts in the north hand.

The scheme worked perfectly because north could not play up to the situation. The king of spades should have been thrown on the ace at trick 8 to enable north to avoid the lead. This play would have made it impossible for the declarer to win another trick.

RICKEY SIGNS TO PILOT CARDS FOR FIVE YEARS

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 3.—[By the Associated Press.]—Branch Rickey, manager of the St. Louis Nationals since 1919, has signed a contract to manage the club for the next five years, it was announced tonight by Sam Breadon, president of the club. The announcement stated Rickey would be the "highest salaried leader in the National league with one exception." This phase of the announcement was not amplified.

Mr. Breadon said the contract would have been for more than five years if Rickey desired. "I have never found a man who puts his whole heart and soul in his work as does Rickey," Mr. Breadon asserted.

LUTSCH TIES LEADER IN PIN TOURNAMENT

Billy Lutsch, from the Bryn Mawr alleys, rolled into a tie for first place in the singles of the Windy City bowling tournament at Crouse's alleys last night. He spilled 692 pins, which is the same figure with which Edward Peterson of Kenosha has been reigning supreme since the first week of the competition.

Lutsch had scores of 221, 215 and 256. He had a dandy chance to take the lead, but fell down in his last game. After making seven straight strikes, he needed eight pins on his last ball, but his best effort was a seven count for a tie.

None of the other leaders was threatened. In the main event J. Bartome & Co. had the top mark of 2,901, which is about sixteenth high to date. E. Ranck and J. Welch did the best work in the doubles, getting 1,227, which will be high enough to get a return.

Joe Sychawski tried to follow in the pace set by Lutsch in the singles, but dropped out at 658.

OLD TEAMMATES URGE MAGEE FOR UMPIRE'S BERTH

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—If John Heydler, boss of the National league, is waiting to get more names to a petition to appoint Sherry Magee to his staff of umpires, it is thought many thousands will be subscribed cheerfully. Bill McKechnie, manager of the Pirates, is among those boosting Magee for a job with the indicator. It is further understood that others among the old Philadelphia slugger's influential baseball friends are plugging his claims.

McGraw Promises Fans a 'Well Known' Hurler

New York, Feb. 3.—Announcement by the New York Giants that "another well known pitcher" will be with the team when it starts south has revived reports that negotiations are being carried on for Lee Meadows of the Phils, Burleigh Grimes of the Robins, or Jess Haines of the Cards.

DIXON HIGH, 17; MENDOTA, 10.

WHY PAY BENTLEY FOR DOING HIM A FAVOR? ORIOLES' OWNER ASKS

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 3.—Jack Bentley, the pitcher-first baseman sold by the Baltimore club to the New York Giants for $65,000, will not be successful in his efforts to get part of the sale price from the Orioles, according to Owner Jack Dunn here today. He issued this statement:

"The Baltimore club will not give a bonus to any players sold. It is paying more money in salaries than any minor league club in the country. In fact, it is paying in salaries more money than is taken in at the gate.

"I did not want to sell Bentley. He demanded to be sold. Therefore, why should we reward him for fulfilling his demand?"

CUT IN PRICES AT CUBS PARK IS ANNOUNCED

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

Despite an expenditure in excess of $300,000 for enlargement of their park, Cub admission prices will be shaved slightly next season, according to announcement yesterday by William Veeck, club president. The reduction will be brought about by the club's absorbing the war tax, the same as Charles Comiskey, the White Sox boss, has done for several seasons.

Under the scale in effect at the north side park since war taxes were imposed, the box patrons paid $1.65, the general admission fan $1.10, and the bleacherites 55 cents. In the future the fans will pay $1.50, $1, and 50 cents, respectively. This means that the club's share from each of the different classes of admission will be $1.35, 90 cents, and 45 cents, respectively.

Due to Increased Capacity.

The decision to relieve the fans of the tax burden was reached as the result of the increased capacity at Cub park. The old park accommodated approximately 17,500. On many days thousands were turned away and there were thousands of others who wouldn't even go to the park, taking it for granted there would be no seats available. With a 21,000 capacity, exclusive of standing room on the field, these conditions will be overcome and increased patronage will mean greater revenue.

Taking off the tax may not appear as much of a concession for the average fan, but in the aggregate it means a big item to the club. Granted that the Cub park attracts 500,000 admissions next season, the tax would amount to approximately $50,000. The chances are, however, that the attendance will exceed 750,000, making the tax above $75,000.

Sox Fans Still Have Edge.

Even under the new Cub scale, the Sox park patrons still will have a slight edge on their north side rivals. The general admission and bleacher prices will be the same, but south side box patrons have paid only $1.25 for many seasons.

Whenever baseball prices are mentioned the average fan naturally wonders whether the scale ever will be lowered to that of prewar days. "Them days are gone forever." Transportation, hotels, salaries, in fact everything entering into the running of a club, are higher. In the old days the bleacher fan paid two bits. Now the club that pays the war tax gets 40 cents and the net general admission increase is 15 cents.

DENIES WET BRIBE

RAYMOND CANNON.

Raymond Cannon, Milwaukee attorney and organizer of the Professional Baseball Players' union, yesterday was indicted on a charge of having given a district attorney a case of champagne "with intent to bribe." Cannon, who also is Jack Dempsey's attorney, while in Chicago last night denied the charge

PLAYERS' UNION CHIEF INDICTED IN BOOZE BRIBE

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Raymond J. Cannon, local attorney and organizer of the Professional Baseball Players' union, appeared as his own counsel in Municipal court here today and entered a plea of not guilty to a grand jury indictment charging bribery. The charge brought against him alleges that he gave W. C. Zabel, former district attorney of Milwaukee county, a case of champagne valued at $100, "with intent to bribe."

When arrested in his offices an hour after the return of the true bill, Mr. Cannon laughingly termed it "a joke indictment," and the result of an effort of a clique of lawyers to "frame" him. His plea for immediate trial and reduction of bond from $2,000 to $350 will be considered Monday at a special conference with the prosecutors, Judge A. C. Backus announced.

Zabel Withholds Comment.

W. C. Zabel, former district attorney whose name is mentioned in the language of the indictment, offered no comment. Judge Backus today announced that he will refuse to sit in on the case.

Cannon just recently was honored with a banquet by the bar association upon having won his hundredth consecutive case in Milwaukee court. He is remembered as Champion Jack Dempsey's adviser, who rid him of his legal difficulties with "John the Barber" Reissler and also drew up Dempsey's end of the contracts for the Willard and Carpentier championship fights.

Cannon Here, Unworried.

Ray Cannon, the Milwaukee attorney, was in Chicago last night in connection with affairs of the new Players' union. The fact that he had been indicted in Milwaukee on a charge of sending a case of champaign to the district attorney's home, is not giving him any worry. At the proper time Cannon said, he will show he had no connection with the affair.

Melvin Larson, a member of the winning Henry playground team, was the class of the field in the half mile for boys under 19 years. Larson took the lead early in the race and never was in danger of defeat. He is considered among the promising skaters of the playground system. Larson is shown leading his field.

Helen Kauffman (left) of Waters playground sprung a surprise in the quarter mile for girls over 15 years by defeating Evelyn Cox (right) of the same playground. Miss Kauffman skated a strong race and finished with plenty of reserve. Josephine Weiss (center) of Harrison park was second and Miss Cox third.

Bernice Byrne (left) of Brentano playground won the 220 yard race for girls under 15 years by leading the field most of the way. She skated the turns like a veteran and crossed the line with a comfortable lead over Catherine O'Brien (center) of Avondale, who was second. Laura Bishop (right) of Belding was third.

OFFICIALS' FEET FROZEN AT SKATE DERBY IN MOLINE

Moline, Ill., Feb. 2.—[Special.]—Moline's first ice skating carnival was held this afternoon while hundreds of spectators shivered in below zero temperature. Officials received frozen feet as reimbursement for their services and band instruments froze.

Performances of Fern Daebellichn, 15 years old, and Myrtle Oberg in the older girls' races featured, these two girls winning the events they entered with ease. Harold Feers won the mile Derby, the feature race.

The event was financed by the Moline Dispatch, directed by the community service, with the aid of various sportsmen and city officials, and was patterned after THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE Silver Skates Derby. A hastily constructed track, handicapped by weather conditions prevented good time.

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Outplayed 11 to 4 in the first half, Iowa staged a second half rally in the game with Chicago here tonight, overcame the visitors' seven point lead at three quarters time, and came out 20 to 12 victors over the Maroons. It was the sixth straight conference triumph for the Hawkeyes and gave them a two game lead over Wisconsin, the other undefeated Big Ten team.

Coach Barry of the Hawkeyes, attempted to play the game without Laude, who has been ill and out from practice for the last three days. In the second half Laude was sent into the game and in a quick flurry of points Iowa was even.

The locals began this spurt on a foul on Dickman, following which two free throws were made by Funk, a basket by Janes and another by Burgitt, putting the Hawkeyes even. The Hawks continued their spurt and meanwhile held Chicago to one lone free throw, Barnes missing six chances in this half.

Funk, with twelve free throws out of a possible sixteen, was the star for Iowa, while Dickson featured for the visitors.

The game was a battle of guards with Chicago holding the advantage until the Iowa team work was strengthened by the entry of Laude. Rough play sent two Chicagoans to the showers—Weiss and Barnes. Lineup:

HARRY LIEN LEAPS TO VICTORY IN BADGER SKI CLUB'S TOURNEY

MADISON, Wis., Feb. 3.—Harry Lien of the Norge Ski club of Chicago carried off the honors in the ski tournament held here today by the University of Wisconsin Ski club. Lien scored 217 points. Carl Nilsen of the same club was second with 212 points and Henrik Lundh of the Grand Beach, Mich., Ski club was third with 207½ points.

Other Chicagoans who scored points were Sven Welhaven, 203½; Areid Baske, 203, and Arne Sletner, 199½.

The skiers who competed today were scheduled to take part in a tourney at Eau Claire, Wis., tomorrow, but the event was called off because the temperature there is 35 degrees below zero. Today's event afforded the contestants an opportunity to get in form for the national tourney at Minneapolis next Saturday and Sunday.

300 ENTERED IN ALVERNO A. A. ICE CONTESTS TODAY

With ideal weather conditions for their sport, nearly 300 skaters will compete in the annual Derby of the Alverno A. A. at Humboldt park today. The first event will start promptly at 1 o'clock and an interesting program has been arranged by President Everett and other club officials.

Unlike former races held this year, when championship class skaters blocked the prize winning efforts of "comers," those who have been playing second fiddle to the stars will have an opportunity to break into the limelight today, owing to the fact that the pick of the local racers are in the east. This alone should render the competition more interesting.

Among the well known racers who will take part are Gus and Johnny Fetz of the Opal A. A., Larry Quirk of Austin Columbia A. A., and Sigurd Larsen and Lars Lundgoot of Norwegian-American A. A. In addition, the stars of the playgrounds, such as Cornelius Ewart of Robey, Leon Emmert of Swift, Melvin Larson and Willard Taylor of Henry, and O'Neil Farrell of Ryerson, will compete in the class events.

Ruth Muhlmeier of the Opal A. A., Evelyn Cox of Waters, and Laura Bishop of Belding are among some of the well known skaters who will compete in the girls' event. An open relay race will close the program.

KASKEY WINNER CANADIAN SENIOR SKATING TITLE

LUCKY BINGHAMTON

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Feb. 3.—Rapidly falling temperature tonight promised ideal [illegible] for the national ice skating championship races today at Endicott. The races were transferred from Chicago when warm weather prevented opening of the meet in that city.

Three races comprise the program tomorrow afternoon—the 220 yard, three quarter mile and one mile events. On Monday the concluding contests will be run off, probably at night.

The Chicago program has been transferred to Endicott almost intact—events, officials, entrants, and medals. Prominent speed and fancy ice skaters from the United States and Canada were arriving in numbers tonight.

Montreal, Que., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—H. Kaskey of Chicago easily won the Canadian championship in the senior class here this afternoon. He piled up enough points last night and in his two wins today to make it possible for him to remain out of the two mile event, when he was advised to do so by his doctor. Bill Smith of the M. A. A. A. won the junior championship for boys under 18.

The ice was in perfect condition. At 1:30 sharp the speed marvels faced the barrier for the first heat and with the crack of the pistol the seven starters made their getaway. Miss Gladys Robinson of Toronto gave a great exhibition, winning the 880 yard women's event handily.

Big Field in 440.

The first race of the afternoon was the 440 yards senior. On account of the large number of entries the event had to be divided into five heats. A slight snowfall commenced as the skaters went onto the ice.

Several scratches took place in the trial heats, the most notable being Charles Jewtraw, the Lake Placid speed artist. There were very few upsets in form and the men to qualify in the heats were all in the "dogs."

Kaskey in Good Start.

Kaskey got away to a flying start and left the field well behind in the first lap. Charlie Gorman of St. John got away to a poor start and trailed the field around. He sprinted and came third. Kaskey showed wonderful speed. The results were:

440 yard senior—Won by Harry Kaskey, Chicago; W. M. Murphy, New York, second; C. Gorman, St. John, N. B., third. Time, :31 1-5.

One mile, junior, boys under 18—Won by Smith, N. A. W. A.; Darrah, second, Lake Placid.

Three quarter mile, seniors—Won by Harry Kaskey, Chicago; C. Gorman, second; Joe Moore, New York, third. Time, 2:14 1-5.

440 yard, girls—Won by Miss Robinson; Miss MacRea, second; Miss Steeves, third.

440 yards, junior boys under 16—Won by Logan, St. John, N. B.; Bloomfield, Montreal, second; Stainsby, Winnipeg, third. Time :41 4-5.

Two mile, senior—Won by Ed Reed, Chicago; V. Bialas, Saranac Lake, second; Joe Moore, New York, third. Time 6:07 3-5.

Notre Dame Hockeyists Beat Culver Cadets, 2-1

Culver, Ind., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The Notre Dame hockey team defeated Culver Military academy this afternoon, 2 to 1. McSorley and Gorman scored for Notre Dame, and Hand for Culver.

HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL.

Fort Dodge, Ia., Feb. 3.—The Mason City junior college basketball team won from the Fort Dodge junior college here last night, 21 to 19.

A TRAGEDY OF THE NORTHLAND.

PART 3.

SYNOPSIS of the preceding two installments: V. S., a trapper, comes along to Dry Bay, Alaska, an isolated section of the coastal country which lies on the route of steamers between Juneau and Yakutat bay. This region, which is set in the great ice field known as the Malaspino glacier, is a wonderful game country, as here is found excellent bear and goat shooting as well as an abundance of smaller mammals whose pelts are worth considerable in the fur market. V. S., his food supply running low, obliged to live on almost a straight meat diet, wearing clothes made from the skins of animals, weak and ill from lack of nourishing food, makes a break to get out of this country and reach the coast, but finding the trail impassable, is compelled to return to his cabin. Here we find him on April 1. Looking at his diary [found after his death], from that date until the last entry on the 20th, we find these records:

The Diary.

April 1—Got back to the house with what I could carry. Wolverines been there, eating my skins, robes and moccasins, old meat and also my goat skin door. They tried to run me [out of the cabin] last night, came through the stovepipe hole showing fight. Heavy fall of snow. Canoe and some traps down the river about five miles close to Indian grave mark. Camp about half ways.

April 3—Still snowing. Cooking my last grub. No salt. No tea.

April 4—Shot one goat, using all but three of my shells. Can't see the sight of my gun.

April 7—Wolverines working on camp below, carrying away my things. Ate part of my bearskin pants. Packed the old 30.30 out into the brush. Eyes are getting worse again, don't even stand the snow.

April 10—Wolverines at my bedding again, also eating one snowshoe. Getting shaky in the legs. A five mile walk a big day's work.

April 12—Saw a fox track today. Birds are coming north. Fine weather.

The next entry in the diary is a warning of what is coming. Although V. S. has been in desperate straits all winter, although his food has been scarce and the winter hard, he has been able to keep going through it all. But the next entry in his diary shows how weak his body has become as a result of this fight. Remember, he has been living without salt or tea.

April 15—The no salt diet is hitting me pretty hard. My eyes are getting worse. In the bunk most of the time.

April 17—Rain yesterday and today. V. S. writes nothing about his condition from the 17th to the 19th, but apparently he has been growing weaker and weaker, because on the 20th of April, with spring at hand, with birds coming from the southland and heralding the approach of long hours of sunshine, of new life in the northland, V. S., game to the last and conscious of his fate and what he was doing, makes this last entry in the diary.

April 20—Finest weather continues again. Cooking my last grub. Got to stay in the bunk most of the time. My legs won't carry me very far. My eyes useless for hunting, the rest of my body also useless. I believe my time has come. My belongings, everything I own, I give to J. P—— of Dry Bay, and if he is not alive, to Paul S——.

MAKING WEIGHT BAR TO TITLE FOR BUD ANDERSON

This is the seventh article on great boxers who failed to win the title in their divisions and the reasons why.

BY SIDNEY SUTHERLAND.

Twenty thousand fight fans beneath a frying sun mopped their faces and necks, trying to shield their eyes under newspaper visors thrust into their straw hats. Two things comforted them on this torrid Fourth of July afternoon in 1913—white-coated boys with baskets of iced beer and the approach down opposite aisles of Leach Cross and Bud Anderson.

Since its favorite boxer was in San Francisco fighting Champion Willie Ritchie, Los Angeles was content with the second best card of the year, a twenty round contest between New York's master lightweight and the Vancouver, Wash., fighter whose knockout of thirty opponents in forty-seven starts included such men as Sammy Trott, George Memsic, "Knockout" Brown, and Joe Mandot.

Anderson Physically Perfect.

Accompanied by their seconds, the men entered the ring. The wily Leath proceeded to his corner, nodding to acquaintances at ringside. Bud doffed his light bathrobe and stood in the glaring sunshine, a statue of physical beauty. The eyes of knowing fans traveled from his great shoulders down his powerful arms and rested admiringly on his huge hands, so massively knuckled in tape bandages that they resembled sixteen pound sledgehammers. Probably no boxer of recent times had a greater pair of fighting weapons.

The gong sent them away. It was the eastern veteran's brain against the westerner's brawn; and for eleven rounds they fought it out along those lines.

From the start it was apparent that Leach's campaign consisted of efforts to avoid Bud's piledriver right by slicing him to pieces. Long slashing lefts and knifelike, glancing right chops were repeated round after round, until the crowd realized that only a knockout would save Anderson from blindness and defeat.

Out in Twelfth.

"He'll never land it!" cried exultant backers of the Hebrew.

"He'll sink the ship yet!" responded partisans of the knockout artist.

And in the twelfth it came. Breaking from a clinch, Bud connected with his meat ax right drive. Leach's head snapped back, his body arching as his heels left the canvas, and he shot backward twelve feet across the ring and on to the ropes.

"There he goes!" the thousands screamed, jerked to their feet.

Bud paused only to draw his forearm and glove up across his blood-drenched eyes, and then leaped to the kill.

Leach had bounded off the ropes, stumbled to his knees, taken a count of five, and arisen, a pitiful sight. Bent almost double, his mouth wide open, his hands dangling at his knees, he was tottering to and fro.

Bud Falls for Trick.

And here came Anderson, youthfully eager to put all the strength of his great torso into a blow that would avenge the eleven rounds of punishment he had suffered. Leaning forward, his jaw thrust out, his right poised, he raced across to the reeling man.

And suddenly a sharp cry arose from Anderson's friends clutching the edge of the platform and looking up into Leach's hidden face.

"Stay back, Bud! Stay back! For God's sake, keep away!"

Too late. As fast as a striking rattlesnake, and with all the leverage of his straightening body, Leach whipped a right uppercut from his knee to the point of the chin four feet away.

There was a snap, as of a crackling tree limb, and the crowd groaned as Bud's head was knocked back between his shoulder blades. Then, carried by his own momentum, he pitched forward on his face, his lower left jawbone splintered in twain.

Carried from Ring.

A large, purpling protuberance under his left cheekbone—Bud's drive had hit a trifle high—and his black eyes sparkling with amusement over the death trap he had baited with feigned distress, Leach leaned against the ropes and watched Bud's seconds carry him to the surgeons in his dressing room.

It may be recalled that in a previous article it was asserted that one of the requisites in championship makeup was "ability to make the weight easily." The lack of this ushered Anderson into oblivion. In an era when the welterweight division was conspicuous because of its mediocrity, and too light to fight as a middleweight, Bud was forced to make poundage for the lightweights, always a populous, popular, and profitable division.

Making Weight Hurt Bud.

His difficulty will be realized when it is known that between bouts Bud weighed above 150, and it was young, solid meat that he could not afford to "dry out" to 135 pounds. This strain eventually affected his morale, as well as his strength, and after Cross repeated the knockout six months later in seven rounds Anderson seemed to become disheartened. He passed out of the picture shortly thereafter.

Today, his ring earnings gone, he is living on what meager produce a tiny truck farm on the outskirts of Vancouver, Wash., brings him, with little to cheer his existence save memories of a day when he was one of the greatest fighters this country ever developed.

(The next article will tell the story of Harlem Tommy Murphy.)

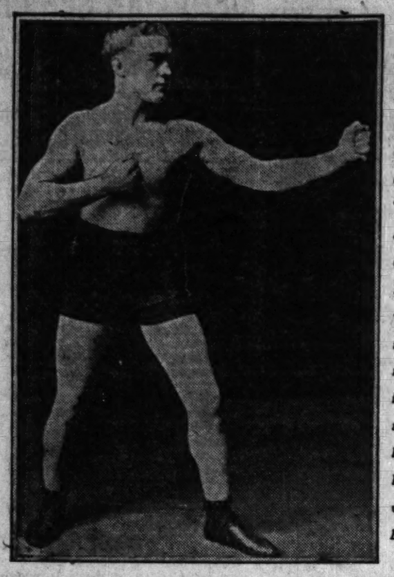
Arkansas Senate Passes Boxing Bill

Little Rock, Ark., Feb. 3.—A bill to legalize boxing and sparring exhibitions was passed by the Arkansas senate today, 19 to 6, but with the understanding that the measure would be recalled for reconsideration Monday. The house has not as yet gone on record with regard to such legislation.

Clinton and Sterling Split Volleyball Honors

Sterling, Ill., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The Clinton and Sterling Y. M. C. A. volley ball teams divided honors here, the Clinton firsts winning three out of five and the Clinton seconds losing three of five in the state volley ball play.

DRIED HIMSELF OUT OF TITLE



With no welterweights to fight and too light for the middleweight division, Bud Anderson had to "dry out" from a natural weight of 150 pounds to 135 to meet lightweights. The strain was too much, and he faded out of the race long before his time. But how he could hit with those huge hands of his!

DAVENPORT FIGHT IS SNAPPY, WITH REFEREE THE CHIEF SUFFERER

DAVENPORT, Ia., Feb. 3.—Although both Jimmy Delaney, St. Paul light heavyweight, and Ted Jamieson of Milwaukee today were exhibiting bruises and cut optics as a result of their smashing ten round battle before 2,200 fans here last night, the referee, Paddy Sullivan, old time New York lightweight, bore the worst mark of conflict.

Sullivan received his wound, a deep cut over the right eye, when, a moment after the final bell, he stepped between the combatants to prevent them from continuing the struggle beyond the scheduled limit. A solid left swing aimed at Jamieson by Delaney was ducked by the Milwaukeean and stopped by the referee, who for a moment was on the verge of attempting to retaliate, not realizing that the happening was an accident.

A full realization of the situation came to him just as police climbed into the ring and quieted the aroused ringsiders.

Argentine Girl Fresh at Finish of 21 Hour Swim

BUENOS AIRES, Agrentina, Feb. 3.—Lillian Harrison, 19 year old Argentine swimmer, today completed a twenty-one hour swim down the river Parana from Miarate to Buenos Aires. When she abandoned the water at the instance of officials of the Argentine Swimming federation, who controlled the performance, she appeared to be still fresh.

TEX IS HUNTING PURCHASER FOR "THIRTY ACRES"

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Tex Rickard may sell Boyle's Thirty Acres, in Jersey City, the site of the Dempsey-Carpentier battle, to a syndicate of New Jersey sporting men. Reports have been circulated for some time that Rickard was eager to get rid of the big arena, now that the Velodrome in this city is available for bouts. As Boyle's Thirty Acres is only suitable for big fights, and as there are few of them in view, the spacious arena is regarded by many as being a "white elephant."

$7 LIMIT SET ON BOXING PRICES BY NEW YORK BILL

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—A bill to limit the admission charge to professional boxing bouts under the amended Walker law in this state to $7 will be introduced in the assembly at Albany Monday by Assemblyman Joseph V. McKee of the Bronx. McKee today made public the provision of his bill which, if adopted, would eliminate the $25 maximum admission charge now permitted under the law.

KENNY FOULS BOY M'CORMICK

MANCHESTER, England, Feb. 3.—"Wild Burt" Kenny, American heavyweight, was disqualified for butting in the fourth round of his bout with Boy McCormick, former light heavyweight champion of England, here last night.

P. MITCHELL MEETS TILLMAN.

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 3.—Pinkey Mitchell, Milwaukee, today was matched to meet Johnny Tillman, St. Paul, in a ten round no-decision bout in the Milwaukee Auditorium on Feb. 13. Both fighters have agreed to weigh in at 140 pounds.

FREEDMAN GETS CHANCE TO SHOW TITULAR MERITS

TRIBUNE DECISIONS

Decisions of Tribune boxing representatives are:

At Manchester, England—Wild Burt Kenny fouled Boy McCormick [4].

At Boston—Dave Shade beat Eddie Shevlin [10].

Whether Sailor Freedman, the aggressive west side boxer, is a suitable opponent for Mickey Walker, welterweight champion, will be determined to some degree of certainty tomorrow night, when Freedman will exchange punches for ten rounds or less with Joe Jawson of Milwaukee at East Chicago.

Since he took Freedman under his managerial wing, Dick Curley has been seeking a match with the welterweight king. In fact, a match between the boxers is pending for Milwaukee, while Omaha promoters are angling for a bout. Curley admits Freedman has grown out of the junior lightweight class, but can make 135 pounds for Leonard any time the lightweight champion agrees to a fight.

Jawson Crowd Confident.

On the other hand, George Ryan, who looks after the interests of Jawson, asserts Joe will upset the aspirations of Freedman. According to Manager Ryan, the local fans think Jawson is a setup for Sailor, and that the bout will not go the limit. Ryan is willing to wager that his man will be in there fighting when the bell rings for the end of the tenth round, and that Freedman will know he has been in a fight.

Both boxers wound up training at the Arcade yesterday. They mixed with their sparring partners before a large crowd and each was satisfied with his condition. Each will do a little gymnasium work today and then rest for the battle.

Gory-Rocco Scrap Attractive.

To fans living in South Chicago, Hammond, Whiting and Gary, the ten round bout between Jimmy Gory of South Chicago and Patsy Rocco of East Chicago, is far more attractive. This pair of willing welterweights met a few weeks ago in East Chicago, and Gory had a slight shade. They went at top speed for ten rounds and put up one of the best slugging matches seen around Chicago this winter.

Jim Kilty and Joe Wagner, heavyweights, are expected to make things interesting in their six round bout, while Freddie Wilder and Eddie Ready should give a pleasing exhibition in one of the four rounders. Rocco Castle and Kewpie Trembly will open the show in a four round bout.

Plans for Fans' Comfort.

Promoter Oswego wants the fans to understand that three doors will be available and that ticket holders will be admitted to the auditorium without delay. A special train will leave the Randolph street terminal of the Illinois Central at 6:50 o'clock tomorrow evening. Tickets are on sale at the usual places.

Charlie White, local lightweight, matched to meet Rocky Kansas in New York Friday night, put in a strenuous day at Ferretti's. Charlie boxed six rounds and went through an hour's gymnasium work. He will depart on Tuesday for the east.

Sammy Mandell and his manager, Eddie Long, returned from Minneapolis, where Mandell won the decision over Stewart McLean last Thursday. According to Manager Long, the fighter did not injure his right hand, and will start training tomorrow for his ten round bout with Frankie Gracia on the Commodore, Friday night.

Eddie Anderson of Moline, who will trade punches with Harold Smith of the stockyards before a suburban club on Feb. 12, will resume training at the Arcade tomorrow. Smith is hard at work at Ferretti's.

Pal Moore is slated to start training tomorrow for his ten round fracas with Bud Taylor at Indianapolis on Feb. 13. It will be the fourth meeting of the pair and Promoter Steve Harder says the bout is attracting more interest in the Hoosier capitol than any match of recent years.

Howard Carr, owner of the Arcade gymnasium, was host to the jurors serving in Judge Lindley's court in the federal building. There were fourteen in the party in charge of Frank J. Otto, deputy U. S. marshal, and the boxers showed to good advantage. As the jurors filed out they shook hands with Carr and thanked him for an enjoyable afternoon.

Joe Frisco of New York will arrive in Chicago this week to meet any of the local boys of his weight. He will be under management of John McMahon. Johnny Williams, also of New York, will come west later to seek matches with Charlie White and Sailor Freedman. Both boys have been under the management of Joe Sullivan.

Joe Burman and Midget Smith are going to have another scrap. These clever tantams were matched yesterday to appear before a north side suburban club on the night of Feb. 21. The show will be run under the auspices of the Harold Taylor post of the American legion. Burman and Smith always put up a corking battle. They have had four ring engagements, each winning two. A strong bill of preliminaries will be arranged.

ITALIANS RALLY AROUND CALZA AS BOUT NEARS

George Calza, undefeated Italian heavyweight champion who is considered by many to be the best foreign wrestler brought to this country since the days of George Hackenschmidt, and Tom Draak, claimant of the championship of Holland, will take holds in the main bout of Doc Krone's wrestling show at Ashland Boulevard auditorium tomorrow night.

It is the first time since the days of Leo Pardello that Italians have had a championship contender. Pardello was a great favorite with his countrymen but never quite good enough to hold his own with the champion or title contenders. Leo, however, was a real trial horse and any wrestler who defeated him was considered a worthy opponent for the reigning champion.

Calza has great possibilities. He is master of nearly every hold. He has strength, youth and endurance, and with a little more experience should be a serious contender for the title now held by Ed "Strangler" Lewis. In fact, his friends want him to seek a match with the champion, providing he wins from Draak tomorrow night.

Although the Calza-Draak match is billed as the feature, the struggle between Jack Linow, the pink whiskered Russian Lion, and Joe Stecher is attracting a lot of interest. Joe has agreed not to pull Jack's whiskers, but nothing was said about the body scissors, Stecher's favorite hold.

In the other bout Charley Cutler, known as the trial horse of the wrestling game, will take on Carl Zoll of Wisconsin. Cutler in answer to comeback questions, claims he has never been away and can beat a majority of the heavyweight clamoring for a shot at the championship.

All matches will be to a finish, best two in tree falls. Emil Thiry will be referee and tickets can be secured at 129 North Dearborn street. Popular prices of $1, $2, and $3 will prevail.

GIRL QUINTETS TO MEET HERE IN C.A.A.U. TOURNEY

With entries now pouring in to Harry Berz, chairman of the registration committee of the Central A. A. U., the central states basketball championships, which will be held at the Broadway armory April 4 to 14, under the auspices of the 202d artillery, seem destined to bring together some of the best cage talent, both men and women, in Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Minnesota.

Competition in the 135 pound men's division is scheduled for April 4 to 7, and the women's and men's unlimited championships will be decided between April 11 and 14, according to announcement yesterday. Stress this year is being placed on the women's games by the A. A. U., and, according to officials, the girls, playing under boys' rules, will feature the meet.

Proceeds of the tournament will be used by the 202d artillery in the furtherance of amateur athletics, especially among women.

ALFRED GOULLET.

LEONARD OFFERS WHITE, TENDLER TITULAR BOUTS

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Benny Leonard, world's lightweight champion, will be seen in two bouts next summer in defense of his title, if present plans materialize. Billy Gibson, manager of Leonard, now has under consideration propositions for bouts with Lew Tendler, Philadelphia lightweight, and Charlie White, Chicago veteran. Promoter Tex Rickard is eager to conduct these two title struggles at either the Velodrome, the new Yankee stadium, where Rickard plans to conduct open air bouts of importance, or at his arena in Jersey City.

Anonymous Donor Gives Yale New Sports Field

New Haven, Conn., Feb. 3.—The gift to Yale of a tract of 750 acres of natural woodland, a quarter of a mile west of the Yale bowl, was announced by George Parmly Day, treasurer of Yale university and of the Yale Athletic association. The property will be developed for athletic purposes. The name of the donor has not been announced.

GOULLET'S ENTRY COMPLETES LIST FOR 6 DAY RACE

Alfred Goullet, greatest six day racer of all time, will start in the long bike contest at the Coliseum next Saturday night. The entry of Goullet was received by Manager Paddy Harmon yesterday and practically completes the field for the coming contest. Goullet won the last race here and also won the last New York six day race. He has been on the winning team in nearly fifteen six day races in the United States, Europe, and Australia.

The former Australian is the greatest favorite that has ever appeared on a bike track in Chicago. It was feared for a time that he would not be in the coming race because of a very attractive offer which was made to him to get him to compete in the six day race in Paris, an event which Goullet has twice won. He was finally persuaded to pass up Paris for Chicago, largely for the reason that he likes this city.

Elks to Honor Goullet.

Goullet has been racing in the United States for the last ten years, coming here from Australia. He took out his first naturalization papers as soon as possible after his arrival and lost no time in becoming a full fledged American citizen. He served with the navy during the war. He is a prominent Elk, and William J. Sinek, exalted ruler of the Chicago lodge, is arranging a big reception for him.

So far no partner has been selected for Goullet. Manager Harmon is a little backward about selecting teams as the result of the refusal of Willie Cobern to ride with Dave Lands and the refusal of both Alfred Grenda and Reggie McNamara to ride with each other. Harmon is now busy trying to get McNamara and Grenda straightened out while indications are that Lands will not be found in the field when it faces the starter.

Local Men Bitter Rivals.

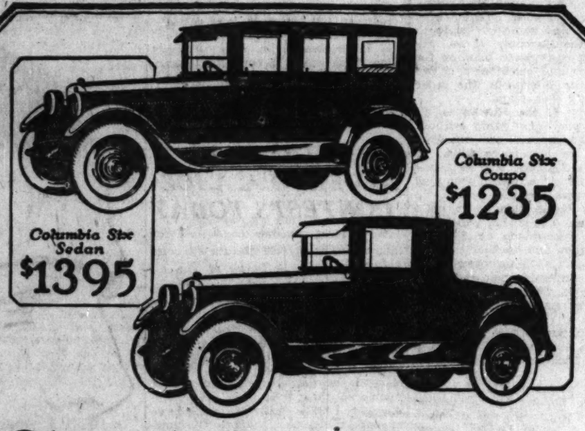
Additional trouble is resulting from Harmon's effort to get "Hy" Kockler and Carl Stockholm, the two Chicago pedalers to team up. Neither wants to go into a combination with the other, the differences dating back to their amateur days when both rode under the colors of the Alverno A. C. The rapidity with which Stockholm has been coming to the front as a speedster is also said to have embittered Kockler, who held the local cycle racing crown for many years.

SHEVLIN LOSES TO DAVE SHADE

Boston, Mass., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Dave Shade won a hard fought victory over Eddie Shevlin of this city, at the Arena club here tonight before more than 10,000 fans, thus evening up Shevlin's win of a few months ago. It is understood the winner will get a bout with Champion Micky Walker for his efforts.

Michigan Aggies Defeat Chicago "Y" Wrestlers

Lansing, Mich., Feb. 3.—The Chicago Y. M. C. A. college wrestling team was defeated by Michigan Agricultural college in an interesting team match, 18 to 13.



Closed Car Comfort
Open Car Prices

In the new Sedan and Coupe, Columbia has produced two enclosed cars that are really practical all-purpose automobiles—built for year-round service on country roads as well as on city pavements, for business as well as pleasure.

Both cars are strongly made to withstand the shocks of rough roads and long use. The bodies are built from specially seasoned wood and sheet steel, with all-metal backs. Inside and out these cars are beautifully and durably finished.

Both have a fifty horsepower, sturdy, well-balanced six-cylinder motor that assures quick acceleration and swift travel without strain on any mechanical unit.

Both are mounted on the Columbia all-feature chassis—built from specialized units, each an accepted standard of quality and value.

The springs are made extra strong to cushion and carry the weight of the enclosed bodies, providing uninterrupted riding comfort.

Yet both the Sedan and Coupe are sufficiently light and their weight so well distributed that their operating cost is little if any higher than that of the average six-cylinder open car.

Every essential feature of construction and equipment that makes for practical closed car comfort is built into these Columbias, without the novelties and luxuries that add so much to closed car cost.

For this reason Columbia is able to offer the final practical advantage of low price—prices no higher than those of most six-cylinder open models.

REISELT MOVES UP IN 3 CUSHION CHAMPIONSHIP

Double victories over Heal and Gilpatrick last week put Otto Reiselt of Philadelphia one game behind Tiff Denton of Kansas City, and John Layton of St. Louis in the national championship Interstate Three Cushion league race, leaving Bob Cannefax in fourth position, two games behind the Quaker City player.

Two hundred and twelve of the 364 games scheduled have been played, and it looks like a close race up to the wire. So fast is the pace that the winner probably will have to average between 55 and 60 innings for each game. Ten of the men have scored games with an average of more than one point per inning, and ten have made double figure runs.

Pierre Maupone, the Chicago representative, will travel this week, having a hard trip ahead, as tomorrow he plays Wakefield at Milwaukee, Wednesday he meets Denton at Kansas City and Thursday Layton at St. Louis. Standing to Feb. 3:

CHICAGO CUE LEAGUE

BY JOE DAVIS.

The team of Kenney and Reid, formerly of the Leland, but now of the Kieckhefer Recreation room, is the topliner in the remarkably close race in the Chicago Billiard league. Kenney has gone on the road for a few weeks. Reid, who took his place, won his game last week, this victory putting the side ahead of Bert Tredick, the previous leader. Augie Kieckhefer, who received his heaviest defeat of the tournament at the hands of Towle on Friday night, fell into third place. Jess Jacobs, who has been climbing steadily for a month, now is in fourth place. Grauman and Towle each won two games last week.

FIGHT FOR LEAD IN K. C. BASKET LEAGUE TODAY

Leaders in both north and south sections in the Knights of Columbus Basket Ball league will be called upon to defend their positions against second place teams this afternoon when Columbus meets De Soto at Broadway armory, and Dowling faces Calumet at 8th regiment armory.

De Soto's only defeat of the season was inflicted by Columbus in the opening game, but the De Soto quintet since has been greatly strengthened and hopes to knot up the count in the north section. A win for Calumet likewise would cause a tie in south section standings. Other games scheduled for today are:

NORTH SECTION.

Marquette vs. Lafayette.
Ashers vs. Brownson.
University vs. Hennepin.

SOUTH SECTION.

La Rabida vs. Loyola-Hyde Park.
Keri vs. Englewood.
Auburn Park vs. Perez.

OLNEY PREP FIVE LOSES ONLY ONE GAME IN SIXTEEN

Olney, Ill., Feb. 3.—Olney High school's basketball squad is believed to have established a record this season that will stand comparison with any team in the southern half of the state. Under Coach Charles Van Cleve the boys have played sixteen games and lost only one, and that early in December to the last year state champions on their home floor.

The Olney team has scored 493 points to 216 for its opponents. The team is evenly balanced and the scoring well distributed. Eugene Ausbrook, running guard, is the high scorer, having registered 49 field goals in fourteen games.

TWO TOUGH FOES FOR "Y" COLLEGE

Two strong quintets will be met by the Y. M. C. A. college basketball team this week. Cornell college of Mount Vernon, Ia., coming here tomorrow and Armour post, American Legion, playing at the "Y" college Thursday. Cornell defeated Dubuque last Friday and last night was nosed out by Beloit college by one point. The Armour post five beat the "Y" college earlier in the season and the association collegians are out to even maters. The "Y" college is located at 5315 Drexel avenue.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 3.—Two of the many noted hydroplane racers which will participate in the Mardi Gras carnival speed boat races here beginning Feb. 15 will be seen in trial spins on Lake Ponchartrain tomorrow.

One of the boats is Miss Chicago, single engine hydroplane champion of the world, owned by Sheldon Clark, commodore of the Chicago Yacht club. The other is Baby Volo, a new speed marvel, owned by Horace E. Dodge Jr., Detroit automobile manufacturer. This boat was completed the last part of the 1922 racing season and, it is stated, will be a strong contender for Miss Chicago's title.

Irving Park Club Wins Indoor Rifle Tourney Championship

Irving Park Rifle club won the ninth and final match in the Chicago Rifle association's indoor city championship tournament and at the same time captured the team title with an aggregate score of 8,969 out of a possible 9,000 points for the nine weeks of shooting. Chicago Rifle club placed second for the series with fourteen points less and Commonwealth Edison Rifle club was third with 8,939.

This is the third time within the last five years that the Irving Parkers have captured the city honors and it is likewise their third successful attempt at a leg on THE TRIBUNE trophy. By the rules of competition they secured permanent ownership of the trophy by this year's win. The cup has been declared by the shooters one of the finest prizes ever offered for competition in the shooting game. The only other club to win a leg is the Chicago Rifle club, which took city honors four years ago.

Hanke Individual Champion.

Individual champion of the city is Albert C. Hanke of the Irving Park team, who defeated his team mate, and previous city champion, T. G. Lively, by one point in the closest and most hotly contested series in the history of local shooting. A. J. Huebner of the Centennial club, nationally known for his prowess at the offhand style of shooting, took third place, nosing out L. M. Felt with an equal aggregate because of a higher score in the eighth match.

Felt, who was this year's winner of the Leech cup at the national matches, was accorded great credit for his performance in this match by his brother shooters due to this being his first attempt at the small bore game. Another man given considerable praise was Dr. C. W. Hamel, who shot through eight of the nine matches with the loss of but one point.

Riot Fights Ahead.

Many of the local teams are entered in the national indoor matches starting this week, and another hot fight is promised among the individual shooters. Another big shooting event for local marksmen is the Grand Western indoor rifle tournament to be held in March at one of the local armories.

Team scores for the concluding week of the city championship TRIBUNE trophy shoot were:

	Final week.	Aggregate.
Irving Park Rifle club	999	8,969
Chicago Rifle club	996	8,955
Commonwealth-Ed. Rifle club	994	8,939
Centennial Rifle club	989	8,939

Roper Signs to Stay at Princeton for Two Years

HOOSIER SQUAD OUTSPLASHED BY SINAI SWIMMERS

Sinai Social center tacked another defeat on the invading Fort Wayne "Y" swimmers at the south side natatorium last night by ploughing through for a 54 to 14 victory. A. Nanowitz won individual honors with 12 points, and was closely pressed by Russell Ward, Hyde Park high mainstay, with 11 markers. In the half mile special race for women, Miss June Epperson shattered the Sinai tank record by turning the distance in 14:56 2-5.

SPARTA-UNION TO TACKLE KENOSHA MACWHYTES HERE

The MacWhyte soccer team of Kenosha, leading in Wisconsin, will meet the Sparta-Union team at 27th street and Kostner avenue, this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The Badger players have several former Coal City stars in their lineup.

In the national championship series the MacWhytes were eliminated by the Bricklayers, 1 goal to 0, so it looks as if Manager Krejcha of Sparta-Union, has picked a tough opponent for his boys. Rubin, star forward of the home team, who has been ill, will be back in the lineup and this will strengthen the Chicago attack a lot. Lineup:

SPARTA-UNION.		MAC WHYTES.
Teichman	Goal	Wythe
Turek	R F B.	J. Patterson
Stejskal	L F B.	Sheridan
Simandl	R H B.	A. Reeves

Referee—A. McKenzie.

Two other games are carded for local fields today. Olympia meeting the Swedish Americans at 26th street and Kostner avenue, and the Thistles playing North Shore at Cicero avenue and Roosevelt road.

Carl Johnson has signed two new players for the Swedish Americans. All games start at 2:30 o'clock.

SCULLINS PLAY PENNSY WINNER IN SOCCER RACE

The Scullin Steel company's soccer team of St. Louis, which holds the national championship, will meet the winner of the game between the Arden, Pa., and Jeanette, Pa., teams, which play today in the Western Pennsylvania semi-final. It is expected the Scullins will defeat the winner of this match and then tackle the winner of the eastern division for the championship.

St. Louis, in its desire to land the final match, which will be played early in the spring, made the national cup committee a guarantee of $12,000 for the privilege of staging it. As the rules of the competition stipulate that the finals shall alternate yearly between the east and west, the committee was forced to decline the offer, as the final was played last year at St. Louis.

This year it will be staged either at the Polo grounds, New York, or the International league baseball park, Harrison, N. J. The Football Federation of Buenos Aires has made an attractive offer to the Bethlehem Steel football team to play a series of games in the Argentine.

The Bethlehem team at present is tied with Fall River for first place in the American Soccer league.

THE SILENT DRAMA.

Where the lights are low at the movie show
And your sweetie is at your left,
And you're coolly parked in an upfront row,
And you've clinched her hand in a deft
And loving grip, and you've settled back
The mystery play to scan,
And the woman behind you starts her clack,
O Man!

"At Dawn—"; "Meanwhile"; "But a Siren's Smile—"
The woman behind reads out,
Explaining the picture in expert style
And leaving no room for doubt.
["Poison next scene!"] her whispered roar;
["She switches the glasses!"]—not
A chance does she give you to puzzle o'er
The plot.

It makes you ill when you scent a thrill
To have it all shot up
By learning the hero arrives to spill
The villain's fatal cup;
You've brought your eyes and those of your hon'
To see things develop, but
The woman behind you spoils your fun—
The nut!

When the lights are low at the movie show
And your looloo is at your left,
And you're coolly parked in an upfront row,
And you've clinched her hand in a deft
And loving grip, and you settle back
For an evening of delight,
And the woman behind you starts her clack,
Good Night!

WOMEN GOLFERS ELECT; PLAN FOR STATE EXPANSION

The Woman's Public Parks association of Illinois held its annual election yesterday at the Y. W. C. A. and reelected all the officers, with the exception of Mrs. Grace Leiferman, who declined renomination.

Mrs. C. Ray Hartman, president, urged activity and cohesion among the members, and a strong effort to interest other cities throughout the state. A committee was appointed to visit Illinois cities where municipal courses are located, and Mrs. Hartman expects to do considerable missionary work along these lines in the near future.

It was also proposed that intercity and interstate matches be held, and an effort will be made to hold a state-wide championship tournament this year. The officers are as follows:

President—Mrs. C. Ray Hartman, Jackson park.
Vice president—Mrs. F. C. Sampson, Lincoln park.
Secretary—Mrs. B. C. Alcombrack, Garfield park.
Treasurer—Mrs. Mary Brown, Marquette park.

Dixmoor Getting Ready.

Tom Walsh, manager of the new Dixmoor club, passed around score cards for that new course yesterday, and announced that work had started on the clubhouse and the quarters for the daily fee players. The opening has been set for Memorial Day. The yardage of the course is as follows:

Out—459, 394, 232, 420, 364, 324, 160, 360, 469—3,182.
In—175, 424, 310, 514, 332, 145, 344, 390, 450—3,064.
Grand total, 6,246.

The second hole has been named in honor of the late Capt. Anson, the seventh after Bill Jackson, the architect, and the tenth after Chick Evans. Par for the course is 36—36—72.

War at Olympia Club.

The rival factions in the Olympia Fields Country club, one of which favors the erection of a $650,000 clubhouse and attendant improvements which will necessitate an outlay of nearly $1,000,000, and the other, which favors a less costly clubhouse, are doing much intensive campaigning. Meetings are being held weekly, at which members are being posted on the ideas of both parties.

The opponents of the greater plan, who are known as the "round table," asked the board of governors to postpone the date of the general membership meeting set for Feb. 21 so as to allow more time for "digesting" the two propositions. The governors have set the date for March 7 at the South Shore Country club.

C. D. G. A. Prexies to Meet.

Presidents of the member clubs of the Chicago District Golf association will meet with the executive committee at the Chicago Athletic association on Tuesday night. Chairman Robert A. Gardner of the tournament committee will announce the location of the amateur championship, team championship, caddy tournament, and the club relations day tournament. It is planned to hold the amateur championship and the club relations day tournament at north side clubs; the team events on the west side, and the caddy tournament on the south side.

Morris Woolf, treasurer of the Chicago District Golf association, left last week for a five weeks' vacation in southern California.

Janesville, Wis., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—The high school basketball team of Evansville, Wis., claims a high scoring record for Badger institutions this season with 284 points to their opponents' 77, in six games. BURNETT VICTOR IN FINAL FOR THE RIALTO TROPHY

BY JOE DAVIS.

Scoring four aces in the first nine holes, F. P. Burnett, unattached, established a lead of 4 up over Bill Jackson of Olympia Fields, and keeping ahead the rest of the route, won the final match for the Rialto trophy at the Henrici indoor school yesterday, 5 and 3. This initial burst of speed won the match, as the Olympia veteran did not get going until the last nine holes, and then it was too late.

The match attracted a gallery of 250. George Hackl Jr., was official scorer. Cards:

Burnett—Out ...	2	1	3	1	1	2	2	1	5—15
Jackson—Out...	3	2	2	2	2	2	2	1	5—19
Burnett—In	1	2	2	1	2	2	2	2	5—19—34

Jackson—In	2	2	3	1	1	2	1	1	5—16—34

Tom Walsh of Dixmoor and John McKinlay of Beverly defeated George Hackl Jr. of Lincoln Park, and W. C. Jackson, 1 up in a 27 hole match. Hackl, who never had played the course, putted well. The winners had a best ball of 24 for 18 holes.

The chilling atmosphere drove many golfers into the indoor school, and the Boston Store, Hub, Fair and MacDonald's, as well as Henrici's, were crowded to capacity yesterday.

Yachts to Race Across Pacific Ocean Next July

Santa Barbara, Cal., Feb. 3.—The board of directors of the Santa Barbara Yacht club has set the date of the trans-Pacific yacht race for July 20, it was announced today. The date was chosen, it was said, because of the favorable trade winds on the Pacific during the latter part of July.

INDOOR DUFFER NOW CAN BLAME HIS WOES ON INDOOR CADDIES

CHICAGO has presented the golf world with another novelty, the indoor caddie. The hitherto unknown specimen of the genus "bag toter" made his appearance yesterday at Bob MacDonald's school in the Leiter building, carrying the playing "tools" for a foursome composed of Lincoln Park players. He was christened "Todd" by the golfers, and knew his business. Bob had 150 players at the course yesterday, and fears he will have to limit the caddy supply, in case it should threaten to become fashionable.

CRITICS WATCH CHICAGO YOUTH AT LAWRENCE

Appleton, Wis., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Edward Kotal, a Chicago boy, has come to the front as one of the most promising athletes of the Midwest Collegiate conference during his initial year with Lawrence college here. Under "Cub" Buck, Kotal developed a generalship which made him the choice of practically all critics as the most valuable quarter back in the Midwest conference. In the fall of 1921 he earned his numeral as quarter back on the University of Illinois All-Fresh team.

Kotal also has become a basketball regular, proving a valuable forward. He attended Bloom High school, Chicago Heights, and during his prep school career won letters in football, basketball, baseball, and track.

MOTORDOM

High Water Mark Is Gift of New Year to Auto Men

Detroit Factories Report Results of First Month.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—With January operations in the various automobile plants at an end come the refreshing statements that, although official figures are not yet available, it was the greatest first month from a production standpoint in the entire history of the industry. The usual lull in January failed to materialize. With the three big automobile shows off the boards, the first quarter of the present year gives promise of exceeding the output mark of a year ago, and of establishing a high record for the period.

A substantial gain is also expected in the second quarter of the year. Production for that period a year ago totaled 893,674 cars. June was the big month of that period, with an output of 343,927 cars.

Beyond the first half of the year manufacturers are making no predictions, basing their expectations on the actual number of orders on hand or in sight. The promise of exceptional activities before the arrival of the third quarter is borne out by the volume of business already negotiated by part makers. A leading feature will be a keener competition than ever before on the part of manufacturers. This competition, it is thought, will not be confined to any one price class. Money is plentiful. The farmer is buying, and not confining himself to the low priced production. Increased operations are anticipated in all branches of the industry, inclusive of trucks and tires.

During the Detroit show retail automobile sales in the motor city were on the high tide. The Ford Motor company is gradually working up to the 4,000 per day schedule which is to be the production basis of the year. January output was around 110,000, while the February schedule calls for a figure approximating 147,000.

One single order received last week by the Maxwell-Chalmers company was indicative of the unusually healthy condition of the industry at this season of the year. This order called for a shipment of 734 cars, costing around the one million dollar mark. The shipment will require about 144 freight cars, or approximately five train loads. Up to date this is the record order for the present year.

Another single achievement was accomplished when the Chevrolet Motor company broke all records for a daily shipment with a total of 2,158 complete automobiles from the United States assembly plants only.

The Packard Motor Car company is now working practically at capacity and concentrating production on the single six with a result that original plans for the manufacture of 10,000 cars this year have been canceled in favor of an output of 20,000 for the same period.

Fourteen months ago the Gray Motor corporation consisted of some good backing, headed by Frank L. Klingensmith, and a blue print. This year's schedule is placed at 50,000 cars, and at present the company is on a 200 a day basis.

President H. M. Jewett of the Paige-Detroit reports that during the last seven months 20,000 cars were sent out from these two plants, and the 1923 schedule calls for a production of 50,000.

ASSEMBLING MAGNETOS.

In assembling magnetos, horns, speedometers, and similar parts difficulty is frequently experienced in starting the various small screws that are too short to be put in by hand. This operation may easily be accomplished by holding the screw between the legs of a small pair of straight calipers, compasses, or by slipping it in the slit of an ordinary steel pin. The screw can then be turned by means of a small screwdriver. Nuts located in an inaccessible position can be replaced by the same means.

GRANDFATHERS OF MOTORDOM

Wonder how the forbears of 12,000,000 motor vehicles feel safely tucked away in their quiet niches in the national museum in Washington? Both of these patriarchs appeared in the early '90s. Above is the ancient built by George Belden, and below is the ten mile an hour speed king developed by R. E. Olds in Lansing.

EUROPE BIDS FOR AUTOMOBILE TRADE OF SCANDINAVIA

"American automobile manufacturer's will have to look out for their market in Scandinavia and north Europe," says Axel Alderman, special commissioner of the international automobile exhibition in Gothenburg, Sweden, May 9 to July 9, 1923. The show is part of the Gothenburg jubilee exposition, which is planned to be the greatest fair ever held in Scandinavia.

"There is a big market in Sweden for medium and low priced American cars," Mr. Ackerman says. "They are generally preferred to the heavy European types. During the latter part of 1922, however, the European makers have pushed their cars systematically, and are gaining in favor because their new cars are better suited to the Swedish roads than formerly.

"In Sweden low gasoline consumption is of great importance, and many of the leading European manufacturers have come far in this respect.

OIL FILTER.

As a means of separating dirt, metal, and dust from used oil the filter, which may be made in the following manner, will be found very efficient: Fasten a piece of muslin or cotton cloth to a metal or wooden ring large enough to fit over the top of a can, drum, or other vessel. The cloth should be left a little slack, and into the shallow bag so formed a quantity of sawdust is placed. The oil to be filtered is poured through and leaves its foreign matter behind in the sawdust.

Speeders Pay Up.

The traffic court of Manhattan averaged 199 cases a day for the 251 court days last year, according to the annual report of Edward F. Fraher, acting clerk of the court. There were 13,046 arraignments for speeding among the 50,137 cases. First offenders among speeders numbered 11,939.

There were 390 arraignments for reckless driving, 16 for leaving the scene of an accident, and 153 for driving while intoxicated.

Violators of ordinances, principally speeders, paid $395,143.

Ask Auto Makers to Aid Plan for Touring Service

IN passenger automobiles now in the hands of private owners, America possesses a new unit to its transportation system of inestimable proportions, according to Perry S. Williams, manager of the Minneapolis Journal travel and resort bureau.

"It is estimated by the close of this year," said Mr. Williams, "that automobiles in private possession will have a passenger transportation possibility of almost half the population of the country. No city or district will enjoy the development to which it naturally would be entitled if it does not see to it that proper highway approaches and proper internal highway systems are constructed.

"Although the passenger automobiles privately owned today possess a huge carrying capacity, especially when compared with that of the railroads, few cities have seen the possibilities in properly developing the highway situation by which they would profit and in furnishing to the automobile traveler an equivalent for the union station, the passenger information service, the dining car and the sleeper.

"The automotive industry is one of the most important elements in the future greatness of America."

Williams is in charge of the Associated Advertising clubs' plan for building up the national service to the motorists, with all efforts along this line coördinated and working as a single machine. He was in Chicago to confer with leading automotive manufacturers on this plan and to visit the National Automobile show.

THE feminine figure seen on every Rolls-Royce radiator portrays an artist's impression of the Rolls-Royce. Created by a celebrated sculptor, Mr. Charles Sykes, its every line expresses the harmony of grace and power and beauty. It is a typical and fitting emblem, recognized wherever seen. . . . But even this interpretation of Rolls-Royce qualities is superficial. The real evidence of its greatness is demonstrated in a type of service that is unknown to any but a Rolls-Royce owner; in an economy of operation that is the proof of perfect building; in a length of life that is without precedent. . . . The man who drives his Rolls-Royce for ten years thinks that its full perfection has been revealed to him. Ten years later, with the same car, he still may derive new meaning from the phrase, "the perfect instrument for locomotion."

Buy Your New Car on Oakland's

"Mileage Basis" Plan

Have you learned about Oakland's new "Mileage Basis" Plan for 1923?

How this Plan provides a new, definite and logical way to gauge motor car value; how trouble-free miles are now made the standard of measurement?

Think what it means to have main crankshaft bearings and connecting rod bearings function properly for at least 40,000 miles without attention, to have valves which will run perfectly for 15,000 miles without grinding, to have a 15,000 mile guarantee against "oil pumping", to get 20 to 25 miles on a gallon of fuel and 15,000 to 25,000 miles on tires!

These actual mileage figures are offered as a definite proof of the high quality built into the Oakland Six. They are dependable and conservative figures—figures based on accurate knowledge, such as you would expect from Oakland—a permanent division of General Motors.

Before you buy a car, at any price, you should examine the 1923 Oakland Six—the car which has made possible this most remarkable "Mileage Basis" Plan.

Automobile bodies, like houses, may be either strong, sturdy and durable, or light, flimsy and weak.

Like houses, good bodies are expensive, and makeshifts are cheap. Prices influence sales of automobiles, as they do of houses, but highest quality and lowest price are possible in neither.

There is no substitute for quality.

To cheapen quality of materials, construction and finish is not Studebaker policy. A makeshift product is fatal to permanent success. Studebaker bodies are built to withstand for many years the exposure and use to which an automobile is subjected.

Better bodies are not built by any manufacturer nor borne by any chassis. Studebaker's reputation is at stake in body building.

Studebaker body plants at South Bend, Indiana, alone contain 2,700,000 square feet of floor space, represent the investment of $7,000,000, employ 5,000 people, and are the largest body plants owned and operated by any individual manufacturer in the industry. They are, we believe, as experienced and as competent to build good bodies at minimum costs as any plants in existence.

Buyers of Studebaker cars get the benefit of this investment, experience and economy.

The broad principle upon which Studebaker business has prospered for seventy-one years, and upon which it is now conducted, insures satisfaction to everybody who deals with the House of Studebaker

REO

The Gold Standard of Values

THE trends of automobile designing, as revealed by exhibits at the Show, are tributes to Reo's progressiveness!

For Reo has advocated and used many of the practices which today are deciding factors in the buying of motor cars.

Cleaner instrument boards and more commodious front compartments are two of the trends. In Reos these features have always been conspicuous!

Body designing leans towards clean lines and slight curves; squareness and angularity are passe. Reo bodies never were square or angular!

Three years ago Reo adopted cord tires as standard equipment; today the practice is almost universal!

The trends of chassis construction, too, endorse the soundness of Reo engineering. Many practices which Reo pioneered are being adopted. Aluminum alloy pistons, ground cylinders, the inner-frame mounting of power units, the amidship location of transmission, brake cables in place of rods, dual foot control,—no room here to describe them all.

Reo is always in the forefront of development; but not until analysis and road tests have proved it right is any device adopted as standard equipment. Reo owners are never asked to undertake Reo's experiments!

That's why you can always depend upon Reo.

Upkeep of Roads Important Result of 1922 Campaign

MacDonald Report Gives Illinois $5,000,000 This Year.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

GREATER progress was made on the nation's highways during the year than in any similar period in the history of the country, and there is now apparent a real public appreciation of the importance of maintaining the roads that are built, Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the bureau of public roads, stated in his annual report to the secretary of agriculture.

"Industrial and financial conditions were better during the year," said Mr MacDonald, "and as a consequence remarkable progress has been made in highway construction under the states and counties as well as under the joint control of the government and states. Ten thousand miles have been added to the federal aid roads alone, and doubtless more than an equal mileage has been constructed without federal assistance. More significant, however, than the progress in the physical work of road construction, or any other accomplishments of the year, are two developments, the results of which are not immediately apparent and which cannot be measured in miles and dollars and cents, but which promise results for the future unequaled by any developments of the quarter century of highway activity.

"First of these is the passage of the federal highway act with its plan for a connected systems of roads for the whole nation; the second is the extraordinary activity in economic and physical research in connection with the financing, location, management, and design of the highways. For more than two decades there has been in progress a slow but certain development of high construction from a casual activity in the hands of unskilled local officials without plan or program, other than to maintain an established minimum of facility transportation, toward a reasoned industry in the hands of state and national officials, supplemented by intelligent local aid, the aim of which is to provide complete and economical highway transport service throughout the nation. In this development the adoption of the federal aid highway system provided for by the federal highway act and the significant researches of the past year constitute the greatest forward steps that have ever been made."

During the year 7,469 miles of road projects were completed and 17,978 miles were under construction, which were estimated as 50 per cent complete. Federal aid earned by the states on completed and uncompleted projects amounted to $194,560,135, of which $166,911,552 had actually been paid. The roads brought to completion averaged over 200 miles for each state. Texas had the largest completed mileage, 943, while Arkansas, Georgia, Iowa, Minnesota, and North Carolina each completed more than 500 miles; Montana and Wisconsin 400 miles, and Louisiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island made substantial increases. Texas received the largest payment of federal aid, amounting to $5,915,046, and earned nearly $2,500,000 more. Other large payments were made to Illinois, Iowa, Ohio, and Pennsylvania, each receiving from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 during the year.

The increasing number of accidents at highway grade crossings has become a matter of grave concern, says Chief MacDonald, and has led to the adoption of a policy looking to the elimination of such dangerous crossings wherever practicable on federal aid highways. The policy has met with generous support from the states.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." Frank Hines, 6836 Perry avenue, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Does the traffic congestion lessen your interest in automobiling?

Where Asked.

Tribune building lobby.

The Answers.

F. G. Offenlock, 11 West Superior street, lawyer—It does lessen my interest in it. The congestion has taken all the pleasure out of the game—that's my opinion of it. Chicago grew up with narrow streets and didn't figure on growth. The widening of Michigan avenue relieved the congestion considerably. I think widening of La Salle or Dearborn street, or both, would help a great deal. We have got to have more breath—no doubt about that.

W. J. Wolf Jr., 6009 Glenwood avenue, president Superior Oil company—No, not at all. It is a condition that is bound to exist in any rapidly growing city. The traffic is being handled by the traffic squad to the best of their ability.

William C. Schlaska, 6908 Cregier avenue, clerk — That depends upon whether I am in a hurry or not. Sometimes it makes it exciting if somebody tries to go in ahead of you and you try to keep them from doing it. That's about the only real fun I get out of a crowded street. When it is an awful jam and everybody is trying to get ahead of everybody else—well, that isn't just fun; it calls for insurance.

Michael Gallick, 4723 North Racine avenue, real estate—Well, I don't want a crowded street when I'm driving, that's one thing sure. It is dangerous, and it spoils the pleasure of driving. We need a subway. That would get the street cars out of the way. When Ogden avenue is opened up that will be another nice drive leading to Lincoln park. There are many narrow streets with wide sidewalk space that could be better utilized if the sidewalks were narrowed and the streets widened.

NO "GAS" STATIONS IN SWITZERLAND; POUR FROM BARREL

Gasoline filling stations are as yet unknown in Switzerland, says Consul General G. H. Murphy, although there are about 20,000 passenger cars registered. Gasoline distribution is made by garages, where it is taken from the barrels in which it is kept to the liter measure and into the tanks of the vehicles.

There would, however, be considerable missionary work to be done before automatic filling stations could be sold there.

American manufacturers should not expect Swiss firms to buy large stocks or to sign contracts at the outset because of keen competition in this market, which enables them to satisfy their needs at the lowest prices and the most convenient terms.

Farmers Aid Trade.

Six principal crops harvested by 6,000,000 farmers of the country are worth approximately $5,708,000,000 at current prices, according to figures released by the department of agriculture. The 1922 financial return to farmers for their products was greater than the previous year, the report shows, and will be reflected in greater prosperity for the whole country. Already sales of automobiles and tires to farmers show a healthy increase over 1921, according to Firestone sales statistics.

China Opens Roads.

Motor traffic in China has been opened on the Weihsien-Chefoo highway from Weihsien to Hwanghsien, a distance of 143 miles. The remainder of the road is expected to be opened within one or two months. The ministry of communications has granted monopoly rights to motor cars and a service of about twenty cars has been started, charging $8.80 per passenger for the seven hour trip.

HEAVY FIRE LOSS.

Automobile fire insurance companies last year paid out nearly $9,500,000 for motor cars destroyed by fire, most of them due to carelessness on the part of the owners.

Voorhis Leaves Industry.

Automobile industrial circles lost one of its pioneer builders yesterday with the announcement of the resignation of C. B. Voorhis as vice president and sales director for Nash Motors and his intention to withdraw entirely from active service in any branch of the industry. The former executive declared that personal business interests in another field will require all of his attention, although he still retains an interest in the Kenosha concern's activities.

WOMAN RUNS MOTOR DELIVERY.

Mrs. George Mullin of Marshalltown, Ia., young, pretty, and tailored in a nifty riding suit, can be seen any day riding her motorcycle with sidevan, delivering parcels about town. She enjoys the outdoor life and has built up a profitable business.

Good Roads Army Moves on Capital to Win "Plums"

BY E. E. PIERSON.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Illinois solons have never previously experienced such interest in improved roads as that demonstrated by the recent massmeetings and the delegations moving to Springfield in the hope of exerting sufficient influence to place their highway on the new state bond issue map.

The Wabash trail, extending from Litchfield to Decatur, is to be one of the favored roads. So Gov. Small assured a committee of 240 delegates who called at the executive office. There was some amusement when the governor asked the party where the road would run after reaching Decatur.

"To Chicago by way of Kankakee," was the response.

The executive admitted that Montgomery and Christian counties had been slighted in respect to hard roads, but promised the delegation that the Wabash trail would be given attention this year.

Another delegation to confer with members of the state highway department represented the old Kickapoo trail, between Mattoon and Decatur. The concrete surfacing of this road is desired by residents of Dalton City, Bethany, Sullivan, Allenville, Coles, and Mattoon. It extends southeast of Decatur and is an extension of the proposed diagonal road to connect Peoria and Decatur. The state highway department officials assured the delegation that diagonal routes would follow the north and south and east and west roads, first placed upon the map, and conceded that the Kickapoo trail had merit and would take care of a large volume of traffic.

The old T. D. S. trail, or, as it is also termed, the Terre Haute-Springfield route, which was traveled by Lincoln in ante-bellum days, was boosted by another committee from Paris, Redmon, Oakland, Hinesborough, Arcola, Arthur, Lovington, Lake City, and Mount Zion. It was pointed out that this trail, in connection with the Meridian highway, will give a short route to Springfield.

Massmeetings were held at Lincoln and Pekin in behalf of the diagonal hard road connecting Peoria and Decatur. Macon, Logan, Tazewell, and Peoria counties were represented.

An association was formed at this gathering, with W. L. Wasson of Lincoln as president, to do everything possible to secure the construction of this road.

The meeting at Pekin supported the Diagonal trail and also a proposed hard road from Pekin east to Bloomington, to connect with the "Illini boulevard" for Chicago.

Champaign county good roads boosters are conducting a vigorous campaign in behalf of the proposed bond issue of $2,500,000 for the construction of hard roads which will be voted upon Tuesday, Feb. 27.

AUTOISTS CAUGHT IN SNOW MAY MEET DOGS WITH FLASKS

BRUNSWICK, N. J.—Preparations are being made by Joseph Herr, proprietor of a hotel on the Lincoln highway, between Metuchen and New Brunswick, toward importing a number of St. Bernard dogs from Switzerland. These dogs, trained by Benedictine monks, are to be sent forth to succor snowbound mortorists trapped in drifts on the Lincoln highway this winter. Strapped to each dog's neck will be a flask that may contain anything from apricot brandy to creme de menthe.

Release Auto Emblems.

Emblems designed to be attached to automobiles to show membership in automobile clubs, associations, etc., are no longer subject to a federal excise tax, according to a ruling just made by the internal revenue bureau following the raising of the question of the justice of this tax by the legislative board of the National Motorists' association.

Under regulations adopted for the purpose of interpreting section 900 of the revenue acts of 1918 and 1921, the radiator emblem was held to fall with in the category of an automobile accessory or part. As such it was taxed 5 per cent. This tax represents a considerable sum in the aggregate, and in the case of some N. M. A. clubs as much as $1,200 per year.

The request which brought about the amendment to the regulations was submitted several weeks ago to Deputy Commissioner A. C. Holden, in charge of sales tax. It was supplemented by a brief which emphasized the points brought out in the oral argument as to why the emblem was improperly classified.

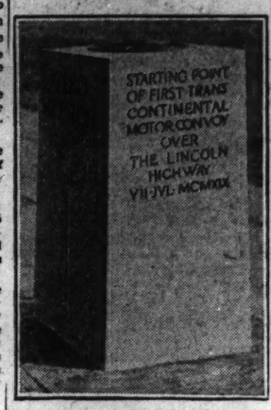
Several Wheels.

Eight million wheels, exclusive of spares and wheels for replacement purposes, were used in the manufacture of motor cars and trucks during 1922, according to statistics compiled by the Motor Wheel corporation, one of the largest builders of passenger car and truck wheels in the world. Placed in line, with rims touching, these wheels would extend 3,030 miles, or across the American continent from coast to coast.

LOOK IT OVER.

If you look under the hood of your car only when something goes wrong don't be surprised at the size of your repair bills.

HOME PLATE



This zero milestone marks the starting point in the reckoning of mileage of all United States national highways. It has been erected near the White House in Washington to show the point of departure of the first motor transcontinental convoy, started by the war department over the Lincoln highway.

FIVE BILLION GALLONS OF "GAS."

It is said at least 5,000,000,000 gallons of gasoline will be produced in the United States this year.

Bus Lines Increase.

The sale of motor busses in Great Britain is being pushed by bus manufacturers through Spain by the organization of motor bus lines in Madrid and other cities.

The company leading, reported to be extending their sales by this method is the Tillings-Stevens Motors, Ltd. They are selling bonds in the various cities of Spain and will extend their service to cover the total area of each city through municipal concessions.

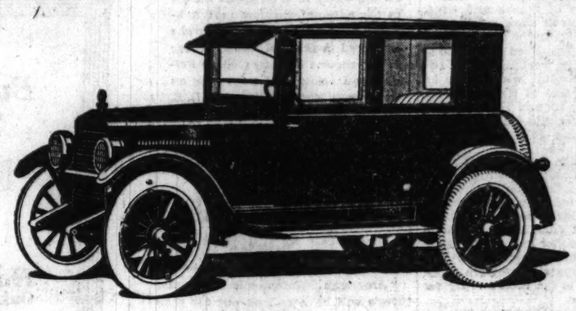
In Madrid already 107 busses have been put into regular operation. The projects are being financed by the sales of bonds locally, the board of directors of the company being made up of prominent British and Spanish financiers.

In Barcelona the company has organized with 10,000,000 pesetas, and will install 150 busses, covering all the routes of the city.

"It is to be regretted that American motor car manufacturers do not develop foreign markets for their product in a like manner with the assistance of American bankers," Commercial Attaché Charles H. Cunningham at Madrid, writes the department of commerce in reporting on the matter.

Tough on Ireland.

DUBLIN, Ireland, Jan. 27.—Irish automobile owners are having hard times. Travel is difficult and dangerous, many roads are impassable, and repeated holdups to examine permits discourage motoring. The tax for light cars works out at about 10 shillings a week, and under present conditions many drivers cannot get more than 100 miles a week out of their cars. If the tax is not paid there is the risk that the authorities may confiscate the car.



Did Closed Cars Cost Too Much?

Thousands thought so. And prior to the Coach, they stuck to open cars.

Yet everyone wants closed car advantages provided they can also have genuine chassis value. Essex provides all these advantages at little more than open car cost.

So a Great Welcome Awaited the Coach

Essex invented the Coach to meet this urgent demand of thousands. It gives every essential closed car comfort. It is solid, quiet, durable and attractive in looks. Yet of course its greatest value is in the famous Essex chassis which world experts have called the finest of its size built. It fully has confirmed that verdict by official proof.

It is easily turned and parked in small spaces. Little attention is needed to keep it in prime condition. All controls are easy to reach and operate. Clutch and brake pedals require but a touch. You will like the response of wheel and throttle and its economy in fuel, oil and tires.

The body is lastingly sturdy and comfortable. The chassis is so durable and capable that its performance is a never failing delight.

FARM AND GARDEN

Honey Bee Plays Double Role on Will County Farms

By Frank Ridgway.

FIFTY tiny seeds gave Edward A. Winkler of Joliet a start four years ago which has enabled him to spread clover and honey bees all over Will county, Ill. He started with this small thimble full of clover seed and a few colonies of bees. With a unique system of growing clover and pasturing bees his returns at the end of last season amounted to approximately $16,000 for the year.

E. A. WINKLER.

The fifty Hubam clover seed were given free as a sample to Mr. Winkler by the Iowa State college. He saved all the seed each year, and by 1921 was able to plant thirty-eight acres on the forty acre farm he had rented at $30 an acre. Realizing the value of this crop both as a seed and a honey producer, he used the best land he could rent. The seed at that time sold at $10 a pound. By the time the thirty-eight acres had been harvested the price had dropped from $10 to $2 a pound, making the seed production business much less attractive.

Coöperation Proves Successful.

"Early last winter I sold 1,000 pounds of seed at $2 a pound, but farmers were not buying freely. Before the selling season opened I decided to change my plans, believing I could make more money by working out a coöperative scheme with my neighbors. Last year I tried this plan with seventeen farmers and it proved successful. I furnished all the clover seed, half the lime, which cost $300, tested the soil free, and with my 500 colonies I supplied bees to fertilize the blossoms, and received one-half the seed," Mr. Winkler says.

Under this plan the seventeen farmers, sowing from 10 to 70 acres, grew 438 acres of Hubam clover in Will county last season. Two carloads of seed, valued at $7,000, were turned over to Mr. Winkler last fall as his share of the crop. The bees, performing a double service — pollinating the clover blossoms and gathering the nectar — yielded approximately 90,000 pounds of high grade honey. More than forty-three tons of surplus honey were extracted, which if sold at present car lot prices would bring approximately $9,000—a total of $16,000 worth of seed and honey harvested from the 438 acres of clover.

Guests for the Winter.

Mr. Winkler is wintering 512 colonies and expects to increase this to 800 to gather the big crop of nectar from the Hubam clover in Will county this season. He has about $5,000 invested in bees and equipment, including hives, winter packing cases, clover seed cleaner, and scarifier. All of the equipment is portable and can be moved on a truck within a few hours from one outer yard to another wherever there is nectar to be gathered. All of the operations are carried on within twenty miles of the Winkler home.

Farmers who coöperated in this plan last year have planted clover with their fall seeded grain or will seed it with spring grain crops. The clover acreage among the seventeen will be doubled this year. Others are growing the crop in that section, and it is estimated that there will be more than 4,000 acres of Hubam in Will county in 1923. With a favorable winter a big crop of blossoms is expected for the bees to feed on during the honey flow season.

Honey Bee Is Best.

"We are thoroughly convinced in our section that the honey bee is an essential factor in getting a good crop of clover seed," says Mr. Winkler. "Experts claim that 85 per cent of the fertilization of sweet clover is done by honey bees and the rest by sweet bees, ants, and similiar insects. Raising Hubam clover and running an apiary go hand in hand. I do not own an acre of farm land, but by getting this clover started I now have the privilege of pasturing my bees on other men's farms. This scheme is mutual; my bees fertilize the clover and I get a crop of honey for their work.

"In my section bees begin to feed on dandelion, golden willow, and fruit blossoms. This lasts for about three weeks; then there is a dearth of nectar for a couple of weeks. About the middle of June alsike clover blossoms are out and last until the first of July until about the middle of August. Hubam clover, an annual, starts to bloom about July 15, but under our plan we plant it with small grains and it is cut down in midsummer. It blooms again about the first of August, furnishing an abundance of nectar throughout September and October, lasting until it is nipped down by freezing. With favorable weather last fall I was able to find Hubam blossoms on Dec. 5. The bees feed late on the low blossoms that come out after heavy frosts."

Lacking that "twang" and greenish color, honey from Hubam clover is white, and ranks with white clover honey.

Will county farmers are using the straw for roughage. The live stock relish clover stems after they have been run through the clover huller and twisted and cut. The straw is also made into silage, while the roots loosen the ground and add fertility to the soil. Hubam is cut for hay, too.

Seed at Reasonable Price.

"I do not intend to stop until Hubam clover is grown on practically every farm in Will county," Mr. Winkler announces. "By growing this clover over a wide area, where bees will have plenty of blossoms, I expect to get from 500 to 600 pounds of honey to the colony. Last year the colonies that fed on Hubam produced an average of 260 pounds to the colony, while the colonies that did not have access to Hubam fields yielded only 155 pounds to the colony. By growing this crop on a large scale we have been able to organize the Will County Hubam Seed Producers' association. Through this organization we will be able to sell clean, certified, scarified seed to our neighbors at reasonable, uniform prices."

To make sure that all seeds grown under the coöperative plan are properly cleaned and scarified, Mr. Winkler loads his own cleaner in a truck and a scarifier in a trailer, and goes from farm to farm helping farmers to put their seed in ideal shape for sowing.

OUTFIT USED BY WILL COUNTY APIARIST TO PUT GOOD CLOVER SEED ON EVERY FARM—Edward A. Winkler, beekeeper of Joliet Ill., with a seed cleaner in a truck and a scarifier in a trailer. He drives from farm to farm with this rig to clean and scarify Hubam clover seed for his neighbors, who in turn grow clover for his honey bees. Through a coöperative scheme with farmers in his county last year Mr. Winkler received $7,000 worth of Hubam clover seed as his share and harvested a forty-three ton surplus honey crop valued at $9,000.

Held for Contact.

The industrial show for farmers will open at the state fair grounds, Indianapolis, on Feb. 19. The exposition is held under the direction of the Indiana state board of agriculture and supported by the Indiana Federation of Farmers' associations. There will be exhibits of all kinds of farm products. The aim is to bring producers of raw products and manufacturers of finished products into closer contact.

GARDEN NOTES

In a recent issue of American Forestry, H. E. Zimmerman answers the common question asked by flower growers, "What is the largest flower in the world?" He tells of a plant found on the island of Mindanao, one of the Philippine group, that grows 2,500 feet above sea level and produces a blossom larger than a carriage wheel. The blossom is three feet in diameter, weighs twenty-two pounds, and has five petals. Natives call it "Bolo," but the correct name is Rafflesia Schadenbergii.

Winter is a good time to move trees. Trees eight inches in diameter or less are easily transplanted. Manure thrown over hard frozen ground will make digging much easier. Always remove a ball of earth with the tree and avoid disturbing the roots as much as possible. In moving a tree eight inches in diameter a straight walled trench should be dug at least three feet from the trunk. With the ball of earth frozen hard, the tree is easily loaded on a stone boat and hauled in an upright position to the new location.

Ten pounds of crushed rock salt placed at the base of the common barberry bush shrub that aids in spreading wheat rust is an effective way to kill it, says J. H. Muncie, in charge of eradication work in Iowa. The salt works down to the roots and causes the plant to die.

Start pruning fruit trees while they are young and the trouble of cutting off large branches is avoided after the tree begins to bear.

Hot beds, cold frames, and window boxes should be ready for use within the next few days. Long before it is warm enough for seeds to sprout in the open garden they can be started under glass. Don't wait for all the frost to leave the ground; dig up the frozen chunks and thaw out enough soil for the hotbed and window boxes.

FARM AND GARDEN

Experts Advise War by Flames on Chinch Bug

WHOLESALE cremation of chinch bugs and a more extensive use of such crops as cotton and sunflower will be resorted to in southern Illinois this spring. Arrangements are being made by entomologists and crop experts at the university for the simultaneous burning of chinch bugs in all infested counties as conditions permit.

Dean Herbert W. Mumford of the college of agriculture will give the word "go" by radio to leaders in various counties. Every local detail will be carefully worked out so that all will be ready in advance to stick a match to grass and stubble in fields where the chinch bugs are quartered for the winter. This is according to announcement by officials in charge of the campaign, who are determined to wipe out the pest which has caused losses amounting to thousands of dollars annually.

Must Be Burned.

"Experimental work during the last eight years shows that 55 to 65 per cent of the bugs can be killed by burning them in their winter quarters," says State Entomologist Flint. "These tests also show that the burning can be done any time between the first of November and the middle of April, and to be effective it must be done over large areas."

The entomologist says that up to the present time the weather has not been favorable for burning, but probably there will be two or three periods of several days each before the bugs leave their winter homes, when effective burning can be done. Each farmer in the counties infested will inspect his land and find where the bugs are wintering along the hedges, fences and woodlands, especially along the south side of fence rows and timbered areas. He will be ready to burn off these places as soon as the weather is dry and the signal is flashed by the agricultural college head.

Hard on Corn.

Practically all of the counties will be organized within a few days, and farmers are urged to burn every bug and its hiding place wherever possible between now and spring. While leaders in this movement do not expect to kill all, it is believed that the bug population of Egypt will be reduced at least one-half.

According to Mr. Flint's survey made this season, chinch bugs are found in sufficient numbers to cause a loss of from five to ten bushels of corn to the acre in 1923 in the following counties if the spring weather is favorable for the pests to develop: Handcock, Adams, Pike, Calhoun, Jersey, Madison, Macoupin, Scott, Morgan, Brown, Schuyler, McLean, McDonough, Fulton, Cass, Greene, Sangamon, Menard, Mason, Peoria, Woodford, Tazewell, Logan, Christian, Montgomery, Shelby, Moultrie, Piatt, De Witt, Ford, Champaign, Douglas, Coles, Cumberland, Clark, Edgar, Vermilion, Macon, Livingston, Grundy, Iroquois, and Kankakee.

Cottonseed in Carloads.

Bankers in southern Illinois around Cairo are coöperating with farmers in getting cotton started. The latter expect to plant at least 1,000 acres of cotton this year. D. S. Lansden, a banker, has ordered cottonseed in carload lots and will sell it at cost to growers. Most Illinois farmers have heretofore considered cotton a crop to be grown only by plantation owners south of the Mason and Dixon line, but the chinch bug started Egyptian farmers in search of a crop that could be grown instead of corn, which is severely attacked by the bugs.

L. E. Rast, a southern planter, who hase visited Egypt and studied weather conditions, says the growing season in that section is about two weeks longer than it is in Missouri, where cotton has been successfully grown for years. He believes farmers around Cairo could plant cotton where they have been growing wheat, barely paying expenses, and get a return of $150 an acre.

Easy to Grow.

Mr. Rast says cotton is an easy crop to grow. No special machinery and implements are necessary; the plants grow rapidly, shading the ground enough to kill grass, and their deep roots help to stand dry weather better than corn does.

"The chances are that with such cooperation among growers of the fleecy staple in southern Illinois, and with no boll weevil to damage the crop," he adds, "even with their short season a profitable crop should be grown."

DAIRYMEN'S JOTTINGS

Dairymen in the Chicago territory are more and more interested in increasing the demand for butter and other dairy by-products, such as cheese and condensed milk. Hoard's Dairyman says that it will be possible within five years to double the present consumption of dairy products. By education sales of oleo have been reduced by 35 to 55 per cent and the consumption of butter much increased, according to this dairy magazine.

All phases of dairying will be discussed from a practical viewpoint by experts at the dairy short course to be held at the college of agriculture, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Feb. 5 to 17.

The Holstein association's testing plant at Dixon, Ill., has turned out another 1,000 pound cow. Sonoma Johanna Champion has just completed a 365 day record of 1,074.01 pounds of butter from 28,294.8, the second highest milk record in the state and the thirteenth thousand pound Holstein for Illinois. The record cow is owned by Sexhauer & Sons of Belvidere.

"How do you keep your milking machine clean?" is a common question among dairymen. Recent tests by government experts show that the best method—washing machines with hot water at a temperature of 160 to 170 degrees F.—is much better for sterilization than solutions such as chlorin or salt and chlorin.

POULTRY TIPS

Scratch and mash are both necessary winter foods. A good cold weather ration is made up as follows: Scratch feed—equal parts of cracked corn, wheat, and heavy oats. Mash feed—equal parts of wheat middlings, wheat bran, cornmeal, ground oats, tankage, or meat scraps. This simple ration will bring the birds through the winter in good shape for next season's work. Feed mostly oats and wheat in the morning and give the corn at night. Keep the mash before the birds at all times in a self-feeder, and encourage them to eat large quantities of it by cutting down on the morning feed.

If you have never operated an incubator before, fill up the machine with eggs and do your experimenting with this early setting. This allows time to take a few lessons, which is good insurance against losses. When it comes time to start the incubator for the regular spring hatch you will be able to avoid many costly mistakes.

The annual poultry show at Indianapolis, Ind., will open next Wednesday.

Under the old standards established for the Toulouse breed of geese the dewlap on ganders was recommended as a desirable characteristic, and today it is required by the new standard.

Do your baby chick shopping early this year and avoid the experience many had last year. If more than fifty or a hundred chicks are needed the safest plan is to place the order early. This gives hatcheries a chance to adjust operations according to the demand and, therefore, render better service.

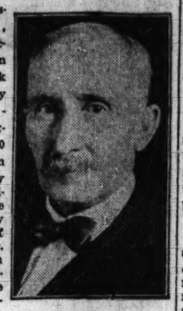
The only way to make sure that eggs will be kept at the proper temperature is to start the incubator far enough in advance to regulate the machine and have it registering at a uniform temperature before the eggs are put in.

Farmers in the west are finding it a good scheme to hold "rooster days" in the spring. Each farmer brings in his surplus stock to a central point and either trades with other farmers, thus renewing the blood in his flock, or sells the bird at auction. County agents and extension workers coöperate in carrying on this work. The birds are all classified into three groups—good utility stock, valuable for breeding purposes; fair utility stock with fair breeding qualities, and culls. The first two grades are sold as breeders, and the culls are sent to market. This plan not only furnishes a market to the farmer who has good breeding stock but serves as a means of building up the flocks throughout the community.

There is danger of poultrymen's throwing out pullets and many good layers when complete culling is made in winter. It takes a skilled hand to it, and for this reason the complete process is best done in the fall. Winter and spring culling to get good breeding stock is, of course, necessary, but it is not always advisable to sell the culls at this time of year. Even the cull layers will usually pay their way and return to fair profit from the first of the year until July.

Poultrymen who have bought new incubators this season should throw away the instruction book that came with the old one and follow the rules and regulations that come with the new machine.

Bank President New Head of I. A. A.



S. H. THOMPSON.

S. H. Thompson, newly elected farmer-banker president of the Illinois Agricultural association, has been active in farm bureau work for many years. Besides managing a 500 acre farm near Quincy he is president of the Broadway bank of Quincy. Mr. Thompson was president of the Adams county farm bureau until recently, when he gave up this office because of various other activities. His association and active support of the state farm bureau date back to its organization eight years ago. Last year he served as its vice president and chairman of the finance and legislative committees. He has been a member of the executive committee for about four years.

Beeman's Buzzings

Beekeepers' equipment will last several years longer if a coat of paint is applied at least every two or three years. Every beekeeper should know how many colonies he expects to handle next season, and prepare plenty of equipment to take care of surplus honey. Old timers are expecting a big crop this next season, because of the favorable winter for clover, and are repairing hives early.

Wallace Park, apiarist at the Iowa State college, says his experience in winter feeding of bees has proved to him that in general light colored honey is better for the colonies in cold weather than the dark grade. He considers it important that the honey be well ripened if it is to be fed to bees, and granulated honey is not good for winter feeding.

A cold snap is predicted for the middle of this month or a little later. Beemen should inspect all hives and add a little extra packing to carry the bees through this cold spell.

GOAT CORNER

Practical breeders do not consider it a wise practice to have does kid more than once a year. It is normal for does to produce one, two, and three kids and occasionally four at a kidding. Probably most of the herds kept around Chicago are averaging two, or slightly less, to the doe.

Goats that are infested with lice should be treated with a good stock dip. The goat is dipped the same as a sheep infested with the tick. If only one or two goats are to be treated they may be bathed with the stock dip.

"Buttons," rudimentary horns, should be removed with caustic potash or soda from kids when they are about four days old. Farmers practice this method of dehorning calves, and the same trick can be used safely in dehorning kids. It is best to do it before they are more than a week old. Vaseline rubbed around the button, but not on top, will prevent the caustic from injuring the skin around the horn.

Milk goats are being recognized by suburbanites as ideal pets for children, and to some extent they are taking the place of the dog, the child's traditional pet. The chief reason for this is that the dog does not pay his board bill, while the milk goat not only pays for its feed but returns an abundance of rich food.

Owners of milk goats are promoting the industry, attempting to improve the different breeds here in America, and collecting all the information they can concerning the pedigree of the best animals through their organization, the American Milk Goat Record association. Charles A. Stevens of Chicago is at the head of this organization and W. L. Te Walt of Vincennes, Ind., is its secretary. With his forty years of experience as a breeder of pure bred milk he is able to give expert advice to beginners.

East St. Louis Co-op Reviews Its First Year

Farmers who shipped to the East St. Louis market through the Producers' Coöperative Live Stock Commission association saved $43,398.51 during the first year's business, according to C. B. Denman, who is president of the farmer owned sales agency.

During the first year of the organization's activities, beginning Jan. 2, 1922, 6,600 carloads of live stock, or a half a million head, were sold at $9,500,000. In addition to sales the commission company bought without commission charge $410,000 worth of live stock for feeders in the territory surrounding St. Louis. The net savings represented 32 per cent of the gross commissions collected.

"We were subject to boycott, which was both expensive and embarrassing," adds the president. "This boycott was broken and we finally got so much business that buyers had to come to us to fill their orders. Our biggest asset rests in the membership of the producer members, who own and control the organization. We have obtained indorsement of several large cattle organizations, we have corrected some abuses, and will further succeed in a greater organization national in scope."

Course in Cheese Making.

Swiss cheesemakers of Wisconsin will meet at Madison tomorrow to attend a two weeks' dairy course which lasts until Feb. 17. This is the fourth annual session of the dairymen, who are given a practical and theoretical course in the making of Swiss cheese. Experienced cheesemakers are also given a chance to review the work and familiarize themselves with the latest developments in the industry. While most of the class work will be conducted in English, occasional talks will be given in German, and a native Swiss will be on hand to act as interpreter. Each day the students will actually do the work of cheese making with the equipment in the laboratories at the agricultural college.

More than a quarter million cars have been produced.

Hudson is the sixth largest producer of automobiles in the world.

Last year's production and sales—27,000 Hudson, 35,000 Essex cars. Sold in practically every country. Ninety-five per cent were sold by distributors who have had the line 3½ years or longer.

Hudson created the Coach, a closed car at an open car price. The Coach is the world's largest selling closed car above $1,000.

The Hudson Super-Six is one of the most famous cars. It established and holds speed and endurance records that have stood for years.

The Essex has been on the market four years. More than 75,000 are in service. European and American experts claim it to be the greatest chassis of its size that is built.

"Started With $80 and the Hudson"

H. S. Melton, Choate-Melton-Hudson Co. writes, "For the 7 years Hudson has built the Super-Six we have held our customers 100%. Not a Hudson or Essex has been sold through our competitors in exchange for any other cars. We started 8 years ago with $80 and the Hudson franchise. We Now Have the Biggest Auto Business in Western Kentucky"

This is but one example of many. Hudson and Essex dealers are the leaders in their respective communities. This opportunity is open for others, perhaps you.

Hudson comes in four models: Speedster $1425, 7-passenger Phaeton $1478, Coach $1525, Sedan $2095.

Essex comes in three models: Touring $1045, Cabriolet $1145, Coach $1145. Freight and tax extra.

Be an Automobile Dealer

No automobile experience and only small capital required. Opportunities in every community—villages, suburbs and cities.

Established dealers also wanted.

HUDSON and ESSEX
They Have Made Hundreds Rich

Determination, good character, intelligence and sales ability are most important qualities in making successful automobile dealers. The capital needed to start is not beyond such a man. He will receive careful guidance from experienced men in our organization if qualified in other respects.

Think of the fortunes made by automobile dealers. Hudson and Essex dealers are at the top in every community. Their prosperity is due to their energy and ability plus the opportunities that go with selling Hudson and Essex cars

Now we plan building 100,000 cars. With that number we can take care of more dealers. More men will be given opportunities to make money. Wouldn't you like to be one of them?

Hudson-Essex advertisements appear regularly in hundreds of newspapers, in farm papers, the leading magazines and trade publications.

Hudson and Essex cars call for little service attention. Thus our dealers save their profits. Customers help them to make additional sales.

Each Hudson and Essex model is saleable in any community. It has a price advantage all motordom acknowledges. Our dealers are not required to make costly effort to move unsaleable or slow selling cars. Dealers build up profitable repair service business.

You can succeed with Hudson and Essex if you have the qualities enumerated above. Write giving brief outline of business experience, capital you can command for store room, etc. If desired your inquiry will be treated in confidence. A Hudson-Essex man of experience will talk personally with you. Write today.

Plain Facts for Fair Minds

The literal truth is, that the Hupmobile is a fine car at a low price. You can establish that truth easily, and to your own satisfaction.

The facts are available to anyone. Any independent garage mechanic will tell you how soundly and wisely the Hupmobile is engineered; how finely it is built.

Any Hupmobile owner will tell you how amazingly little it costs for upkeep, and for operation; and how thoroughly reliable and consistent it is in service throughout the years.

Its comparative absence from the used-car columns will give you some idea of its high value when you re-sell it; and its price will convince you that it is one of the world's greatest motor car values when you buy it.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The optimism which the stock market has been showing in response to the unfavorable news items seemed to be wiped away yesterday and sales were bid up vigorously in response to hopes of further constructive developments in the domestic situation, which included advances in sugar and crude oil and the optimistic nature of the week's trade reviews. The decline of a wide list had been more than recovered by the end of the day, rails, steels, equipments, and specialties in which pools have been operations. There was a marked absence of pressure and realizing sales were comparatively easily absorbed.

Twenty railroad shares closed yesterday at their highest average this year and within 2 points of twenty standard industrials which is slightly below the year's high mark. Strength of the railroad securities was largely the result of preliminary reports of increased car loadings. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe, for example, reported earnings for January, 1923, 10 per cent, while substantial gains were reported by Illinois Central, an increase of 19 per cent, bringing the 1923 figures into high ground for that month; Chicago & Illinois, up 30.4 per cent; Chicago & Northwestern, up 32 per cent for January in five years; Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, up 31 per cent; and Rock Island and Pacific, up 13½ per cent.

Trading in oil, which has been comparatively light and usually within narrow limits, developed a sudden burst of activity, more than 30,000 shares changing hands, the closing price representing a net gain of 1⅝ points. Gains of 1 to 2½ points were scored by California Petroleum, Texas Pacific, Standard Oil of California, Pan American B and B, General Asphalt, and others.

Proposals to place the export trade of the United States with European countries on a more modified basis will be made to the International Chamber of Commerce, to meet in Paris, March 19 to 26, by delegates from the Illinois Manufacturers' association. Selection of immigrants for this country at ports of departure also will be brought up for discussion as will plans for the payment of allied debts to the United States.

A special meeting of stockholders of Shelly Oil company has been called to approve an increase in capitalization from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000 and a change in the par value of the shares from $10.00 to $25.00. A special meeting of directors of the Southern States Oil company has been called for the purpose of taking action regarding a free stock dividend for the current quarter.

The Chicago federal reserve bank reports the weekly movements of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending Jan. 31, by 265 banks in forty-five leading clearing house cities in the Seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $1,030,209,000, a decrease of 7.5 per cent, compared with a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by 236 banks in thirty-one clearing houses amounted to $1,014,082,000, an increase of 8.5 per cent, compared with the corresponding week of last year.

There were 437 commercial failures in the United States last week, according to reports to R. G. Dun & Co. This compares with 511 in the preceding week, and 689 during the corresponding week a year ago.

The annual statement of the United States Gypsum company, to be issued soon, will show around 60 per cent, or $12,000 a share, earned on the common stock, according to reports in La Salle street.

The American Railways company has declared a dividend of 1¾ per cent on the outstanding preferred stock, payable Feb. 20 in preferred stock to holders of record Feb. 13. All stock issued will be entitled to dividends from Feb. 15, next. The J. G. Brill company declared a dividend of $1.25 a share on common stock, payable March 1. This is the first distribution on the issue since September, 1008, when a payment of 50 cents a share was made. The dividend is payable to holders of record Feb. 21.

GRAIN MARKETS SHOW FIRMNESS TO CLOSE WEEK

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Grain prices held within comparatively narrow limits from the start, but despite week end evening up on the part of scattered longs toward the last the undertone was relatively firm and at the close wheat was unchanged to ¾c higher, corn unchanged to ¼c lower, the latter on September, oats unchanged to ¼c higher, and rye unchanged.

While practically all the news affecting wheat values the last week was of a distinctly bearish character, the market was little affected. Good buying developed on all the breaks and at the last not gains were 1@1¾c, as compared with the previous week. Corn was strong the greater part of the time and, with damage claims from Argentine, net gains were 1¾@2c. Oats were up ½@¾c, and rye ¾c. Provisions were unsettled, lard declining 15@20c and ribs 2½c.

Wheat Gets Support.

Wheat traders were disappointed over the failure to add the foreign grain credit bill to the Lenroot act when it was passed by the senate, and there was fair selling of May early, but on the breaks commission houses bought and offerings were readily absorbed. July showed more strength than the May, due to spreading operations and also on buying induced by a cold wave over the winter wheat belt, which caught the crop without snow protection.

Export demand for North American wheat showed no improvement, despite a strong upturn in foreign exchange. Liverpool closed unchanged on predictions of smaller North American clearances. A private cable estimated the Argentine surplus at 117,000,000 bu, or 31,000,000 bu under the recent official figures.

Corn Market Strong.

While corn values failed to get above the outside figures of the previous day, the undertone was very firm, and on the dips there was persistent buying by commission houses. Locals were mixed in their views, and there were numerous small breaks in sympathy with wheat. Country offerings remain light, and there was evidence of a fair export business at the seaboard. Conflicting reports were received regarding moisture in Argentina, and Buenos Ayres closed 1c higher to ½c lower.

Oats prices held within a range of about ¾c, with trade light. May was for sale around 45c, which checked the advance. The trade looks for the visible supply Monday to show relatively little change.

Trade in rye was not large and the market was influenced largely by the action of wheat. The two northwestern markets had 97 cars. Export demand was slow.

Provisions Act Heavy.

Strength in hogs and a slight improvement in the cash demand led to moderate buying of provisions early, but the finish was heavy, with a net loss of 5c on lard, while ribs were unchanged. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the winter season to date aggregates 2,345,000 against 1,729,000 last year. Prices follow:

CASH·GRAIN NEWS

No export business of consequence in grains was put through at the seaboard. Trade was confined almost entirely to corn, with sales of 100,000 bu.

Chicago cash handlers sold 10,000 bu wheat, 40,000 bu corn, and 35,000 bu oats to the domestic trade.

Offerings of choice wheat at Chicago were small. Arrivals of 30 cars were largely durum and mixed winter, and no sales were reported. No. 2 red was nominally 1.46@1.46 over and No. 2 hard ½c over to 2c under May. Outside markets were unchanged to 1c lower.

Demand for cash corn was fair and the basis on track here was little changed, with No. 2 grades 1@1¼c under, No. 3 grades 2½@3c under, and No. 4 grades 3½@4c under May. Receipts, 132 cars. Outside markets were ½c higher to ½c lower.

Receipts of 63 cars of oats at Chicago proved adequate for the demand and the basis was unchanged, with No. 2 white May ¾c under and No. 3 white ¾@1¼c under.

WORLD'S·GRAIN MARKET·NEWS

While May wheat showed a rather easy undertone yesterday there were indications of a change in sentiment in some quarters with a few pronounced bulls to be found after the close. The continued failure of the market to decline in the face of the bearish news is attracting increased attention, and with the crop scare period only a few weeks away there is a disposition to look for active buying on all declines. It was noted that United Kingdom cables were somewhat less pessimistic than of late, the strong foreign exchange presumably having some effect abroad as well as here, even though no export business in North American wheat was reported.

Other traders continue to look for a sharp break in wheat prices in the no distant future and say that until the market has had its break and discounted the present situation there is no use in taking the buying side.

Bullish sentiment in corn is increasing, and while there was considerable week end profit taking by smaller longs the leading operators were strongly of the opinion that all recessions in prices should be taken advantage of to make purchases. In some quarters surprise was expressed that outside business has not increased faster than it has in view of the domestic situation. According to the bulls the market will ultimately sell much higher regardless of the size of the new Argentine corn crop.

Should present cold weather continue for a few days some of the cash corn handlers say they would not be surprised to see increased receipts here, as soft country roads have prevented hauling in some sections of the central west. Car supply shows improvement in some sections, while in others elevators are holding so little grain that there is practically no demand for cars at the present time.

Primary arrivals of all grain the last week of 22,072,000 bu decreased 677,000 bu, as compared with the previous week, and 5,636,000 bu, or 20.1 per cent, as compared with last year, but as compared with the average of the last five years there was an increase of 2,952,000 bu, or 15.5 per cent. Receipts of corn of 7,712,000 bu were 8,710,000 bu less than last year, but with that exception were somewhat above the average.

Argentine exportable surplus of wheat for the 1922-'23 season is estimated at 117,300,000 bu in a special cable to the Modern Miller. This compares with the official November estimate of 148,000,000 bu. Some of the private guesses of late have been as high as 160,000,000 bu.

Organize Two New Banks for the Chicago District

Permission to organize the Ridgeway State bank at 3722 West Chicago avenue, with a capital stock of $100,000, and a surplus of $25,000, has been granted to Henry Schrik, John Schrik, William D. Martin, Marcus Weil, and Andrew L. Haileman. The bank will be opened for business on or before April 1.

An application for permission to organize a new bank in Park Ridge, Ill., under the name of the National Bank of Park Ridge, with a capital of $50,000, has been filed with the comptroller of the currency at Washington. The petitioner is H. L. Blim of Park Ridge. Mr. Blim, who is an attorney; Fred H. Esdohr, and William H. Malone, a state tax commissioner, are the principal organizers of the new bank. They expect it will open for business within sixty days at Center and Prospect avenues, Park Ridge. The stock will be sold at 125, providing a surplus of $12,500.

Prepare for the Peak Load

Why get Capital from the outside when you have ample capital inside which can be converted into cash—and all your own.

Business is coming back and the Spring of 1923 ought to mean increased business for wide-awake, pushing concerns who go after it with a vim—and are ready when it comes. There are indications of a big year.

In most lines both business and profits have been off and now that there is apparently an opportunity to get on the profit side it certainly behooves business concerns to have the first necessary requisite to take advantage of it — CASH WORKING CAPITAL.

Few business concerns can really afford to have at all times ample Cash Working Capital. If they have an abundant supply of capital all the time they have too much capital some of the time and the employment of unnecessary capital is a burden.

Our business is to help you finance from the INSIDE—to take your own idle assets in the shape of your Accounts and other Credits Receivable and turn them into cash, thus avoiding the necessity of getting Cash from the outside. Rely upon yourself.

YOUR MONEY Can Still Earn 7% If You Invest Now

Interest rates have declined to such an extent that in many quarters the highest yield that can be obtained on absolutely safe bonds is 6%.

7%

However, investors who act promptly can still secure Forman bonds yielding 7% combined with absolute safety. These bonds have been safeguarded by the same careful methods which have caused the name of this company to be associated, in banking circles, with the soundest investments and the most attractive yields; the same methods which have enabled us to maintain the unsurpassed records of "38 years without loss to a customer."

7%

All your present liquid capital and the bonds you may have which mature in the near future should be exchanged for Forman Bonds while 7% yields are still possible. When you consider that the difference of 1% between the yield of a 6% bond and a 7% bond really represents an increase in income of over 16%, you will realize that this increase in interest when reinvested several times will amount to a considerable sum. In fact, $1,000.00 invested at 7%, with interest re-invested will grow to $4,000.00 in 20 years and to $15,000.00 in 40 years. You will agree that it is a great injustice to yourself to be satisfied with 6% when a 7% bond is just as safe.

7%

Get this Guide for Investors FREE

Write today for our free booklet, "How to Select Safe Bonds." It explains how to select the bonds most suited to your needs. It shows why these high yield bonds are absolutely safe. But immediate action is imperative. If you do not delay you still have time to take advantage of this opportunity to secure 7% with absolute safety. Mail the coupon today.

Week's receipts of hogs were 15,500 larger than a year ago and 3,400 larger than the ten year average at 201,100. Estimated average weight for the week at 224 lbs was same as the previous week, 4 lbs heavier than a year ago, and 13 lbs above the ten year average.

Sheep outlet was generally steady, although prices averaged 10c below previous week at $7.50.

Fraudulent Oil Stock Promotions.

A glaring deception which has separated the public from about $200,000 has been perpetrated in the sale of oil stock by the General Lee Development interests, with headquarters at Fort Worth, Tex. In this promotion Charles Sherwin and Harry Schwars have made use of the time worn method of capitalizing on a family relationship. They have made a dupe of a poor old man, and, using his name as a fulcrum, have easily pried money from the pockets of hundreds of credulous investors.

During the course of its campaign against fraudulent oil stock promotions the national vigilance committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World has investigated this promotion and made a special report upon it. This report brings to light the following facts:

Sherwin and Schwars happened to come into contact with an alderly man whose father, it is said, was a nephew of Robert E. Lee, the Confederate general. His name was Robert A. Lee. He was 75 years old, and with dress and features resembling what one might expect in a veteran of the Confederacy. In their advertising he was referred to as Gen. Robert A. Lee, although he never was connected with the United States army or any other army. So far as has been ascertained, the most "General" Lee ever earned in the way of a salary was $90 a month as a janitor in Boise, Idaho. Some time subsequent to January, 1922, he was approached by Sherwin and Schwars with the proposal that if he would join them and permit the use of his name they would form a company to sell leases in the Mexia field. For this Lee was to receive $50 a month and one-tenth of the net profits.

Compare these facts with the representations made in the advertising:

"The Supreme Achievement of a Lifetime of Success."

"General Robert A. Lee, the Miracle Man of Geology, makes the outstanding announcement of his long and successful career."

"General Robert A. Lee has been a success all his life. A career as important in its sphere as those of his illustrious ancestry in other lines of human endeavor—politics, statesmanship, welfare, education, and religion. General Robert A. Lee's life is an inspiring series of events."

"An organization erected on the solid foundation that a lifetime's reputation has built up."

The Lee name, its family traditions, and the honor of its bearers are cleverly woven into the promotion literature. Under the caption, "The Honor of the Lees," the histories of distinguished members of the family are given, including Fitzhugh Lee, Richard Henry Lee, and Robert E. Lee, with the conclusion that "the oil promotion has been formed to achieve a lasting name and record—a name that will do honor to the Lees." Referring to the illustrious Confederate leader, the advertising says:

"I would rather lead you and a thousand others to financial independence than to have won Fredericksburg or Chancellorsville."

The literature even claims that all risk is eliminated and production actually guaranteed. It says:

"I shall drill ten wells for oil, and I guarantee to get production for my followers. I repeat this declaration solemnly and with all the feeling that I possess. The die is cast, and the race for wealth is on."

Lee appears to have told the truth when he said that he was paid $50 a month for the use of his name. There is every indication that he had little if any connection with the organization or business management of the company, although he was made the trustee of its interests. Nevertheless, this statement appears in the literature:

"When I organized the General Lee Development interests I did so only after I had outlined a campaign of development that would give my friends and followers the most brilliant chance for a fortune that any oil enterprise had ever offered."

According to his own statement, Lee did not own a share of stock in the company and did not actually prepare the advertising copy. He admitted that he no longer is receiving his salary of $50 a month and that he is being supported by relatives.

Gordon A. Campbell, who calls himself a petroleum technologist, also is featuring "General" Lee in attempting to sell allotments in the Old Settlers' Homestead, Ltd., of Fort Worth. In Campbell's direct mail literature are such statements as: "A $10 investment with me now should yield $10,000."

The public is urged to suspect all extravagant claims and to refuse to contribute to the support of fraudulent oil stock promoters.

RAILROAD NOTES

The traffic conditions on eastern lines were not much changed the last week, according to leading officials. Coal shipments are moderate. Steel and iron shipments are heavy. General merchandise shipments are generally running ahead of last year. Grain shipments to the seaboard are keeping up. Southern line officials report big movement of perishable products north and a moderate run of grain south, while the coal movement is about normal and steel and iron shipments running well above the totals of a year ago.

W. M. Cannon, president of the Louisiana and Northwest railroad, reports business in its territory showing decided improvement. Particularly does this apply to the farmers, as evidenced by an increase of 40 per cent in the movement of cotton over this road for the six months to Jan. 31 over the corresponding months of the previous season. Oil producers also are much encouraged by recent advances in crude prices.

Railroad freight rates on grains, grain products, and hay produced in Oklahoma and shipped in interstate commerce are too high in comparison with similar rates in other territories, an examiner assigned to investigate the complaint of the Oklahoma corporation commission reported to the interstate commerce commission. If the report is sustained by the commission, a reduction in Oklahoma rate schedules, ranging from 5 to 20 per cent will be ordered.

The Southern Pacific announces a reduction in carload freight rates from transcontinental freight bureau group D points and west, effective March 14. New rates are: Baking powder, $1.20; phosphate of lime, $1.20; musical instruments, $2.50; saleratus, $1.20; tin and tinplate, 75 cents; corn products, $1.10.

The Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway has placed orders with the American Locomotive works for ten freight locomotives for

The New York Times.

New York, Feb. 3.—[Special.]—Evidence of a pretty definite kind was presented in today's transactions of the extent to which speculation for the fall has been the dominant influence in the last fortnight's foreign exchange market.

The outstanding movement of the day was the rise in European rates, which carried up sterling 1¾ cents further, France nearly a third of a cent, and other exchanges sympathetically. At today's best figures both sterling and francs sold at the highest in two weeks, the franc having recovered nearly ¾ cent in three days, a percentage recovery of 12%. Even more impressive was the course of the franc and the pound sterling on the London and Paris markets.

French Bonds Also Rise.

Since there has been no radical change of any kind in the Franco-German imbroglio during the whole of this period, the conclusion is irresistible that at least the movement against French exchange last week was the work of wildly excited and highly irresponsible speculators.

The French "dollar bonds" on the New York market moved up about 1 per cent from Friday's closings; they ended the week 5¼ points above Tuesday's low point, and 3¼@4 points under the highest price of the year. Presumably speculation has cut some figure in that part of the market also. But it unfortunately seems to be true that many bona fide investors sold their bonds at a heavy sacrifice under the influence of unreasoning fright and an entire misconception, both of the French financial position and of the status of these "dollar loans."

Securities Markets Move Upward.

On the stock exchange the week ended with rising prices. The net changes for the week, however, presented curious irregularity, though with net advances predominating and some of them very considerable.

Even outside of the French and Belgian loans, today's bond market advanced. Bonds of foreign countries not involved in the Ruhr fracas made, in numerous cases, respectable advances; railway and company bonds went fractionally higher, and comparisons for the week as a whole show almost without exception net advances ranging from fractions to 2 or 3 per cent. Most of the Liberty bonds closed today ⅛@⅜ point above the previous Saturday. Their advance today was considerable, although irregular, the fourth 4¼'s scoring the rather unusual rise of more than ½ point.

Funding May Aid U. S. Bonds.

This was evidently a response to the provision in the debt commission's tentative arrangement on the British debt, that any United States bonds issued since we went to war may be used by England to meet the payments on her debt to this country. This interesting proviso, if approved by congress, would apparently mean that neither the Liberty nor the Victory bonds nor the treasury bonds of 1922 could thereafter fall much below par. It would also mean that the differences in prices of the various issues, based on longer or shorter maturities, would necessarily be narrowed.

A deficit of $5,730,110 in reserves of the New York clearing house banks is disclosed in the weekly statement of actual condition, made public today. This compares with a surplus of $14,626,520 last week. Loans are $12,132,000 higher than a week ago, and deposits show an increase of about $6,000,000. Government deposits are lower by about $8,000,000. Details of the statement, with comparisons, follow:

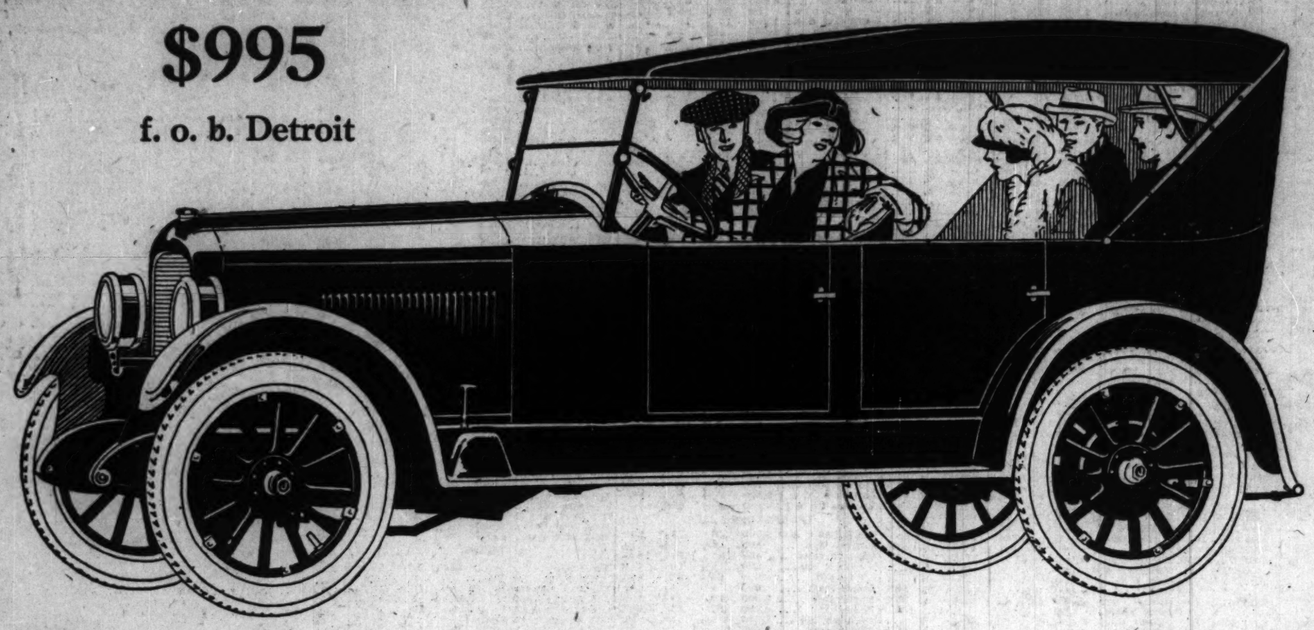
JEWETT SIX

$995

f. o. b. Detroit



The Quality in the Jewett Six!

IF you are acquainted with the Jewett, even by hearsay, you know it is superbly powered. No car of this size was ever before furnished with 50 horsepower. But do you realize that Jewett throughout is as conscientiously well built as it is high-powered?

The Jewett chassis was deliberately designed to be in every detail the finest of its size ever built. Jewett logically had to be sturdy to stand the performance its power makes possible. And it was purposely made sturdy to be a credit to Mr. H. M. Jewett, president of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company, which builds the Jewett.

You can judge a car's sturdiness of construction by its weight. The Jewett Touring Car weighs 2805 lbs. This is 200 lbs. more than any other car this size—200 lbs. more of strength and fine construction, which means enduring service to the Jewett owner. The Jewett has an exceptionally heavy frame, 6 inches deep—specially cross-braced. It is the stiffest, stoutest frame you can find in any car of this size. But Jewett Quality goes also into refinements.

Jewett axles are Paige Timken-built. The front axle has ball-bearing steering spindles. Thus Jewett steers with remarkable ease—and it is an ease which will endure. The Paige Timken rear axles of the Jewett have spiral bevel drive, and are built of extra tough steel so they can be light yet strong. This reduced weight below the springs is a feature in Jewett easy riding.

The clutch and transmission in the Jewett are revolutionary in the freedom from care they give the driver. Imagine, if you can, a car whose clutch can be "jumped" in as quickly as you can lift your foot—yet neither jerk the car nor stall the motor. Imagine gear shifting which requires no pause or thought. Move the lever as fast or slow as you please. There is no clash, and you never "miss." Small wonder Jewett is a car all women delight to drive.

The great power of the Jewett is transmitted to the rear axle through two universal joints of new-found efficiency. They are of the finest steel, built to be oiled, not greased. And so tightly is the oil sealed in that its renewal once a year is sufficient. With this little care these universals should be free from wear for many years. The back-lash of worn universal joints is something a Jewett owner need never know.

The splendid Jewett motor has more than power in it. It has smoothness and silence insured by a high-pressure oiling system. No other car in this class was ever given a motor so perfectly oiled. Every minute 3 gallons of oil are forced through all main and connecting rod bearings, and sprayed over the entire internal mechanism. Metal never meets metal in a Jewett motor bearing. Always a film of oil under pressure defeats friction and makes remote, indeed, the day when a Jewett motor will need overhauling.

Add to all the above, such features of basic worth as cord tires, built-in transmission lock, generous upholstery of honest leather, and snug-fitting, weather-tight curtains. Jewett Six gives you value for price not to be overlooked. Verify Jewett excellence in your own way—prove its quality by test—before you buy any car. That is the only consideration Jewett asks!

Bloused jacket and wrapped skirt of white kasha.

White chiffon with panels of filet lace.

GODETS TO SPARE.

By Mary Brush Williams.

(Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.)

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—"What are godets?" asked the girl from Providence, R. I.

"They are something the shape of a piece of pie set in your skirt upside down," the smart New York buyer answered her. "I saw three of them across the front of a skirt the other day, with the back left perfectly flat. And then there was another not sewed down exactly at the top, but left to flutter. And those two weren't so bad."

You can make your own deductions as to where the new movement stands thus far in public opinion. Whether it becomes a style only the future will bring forth. But Mr. Worth stands pat with the statement that the straight silhouette will never die. Still, only the other line is threatening. I saw a fan shaped godet at Jennie's in a gown of chiffon, where the new line took the form of a separate piece shirred flat at the top of the skirt in the front, and was allowed to flutter loosely as it spread like a panel downward toward the hem.

There was another detachable godet made like an apron that fitted round the belt line and rippled along the hem, and ran, you understand, only across the front. A pretty silhouette comes with godets by keeping them flat front and back, with ripples over the hips; that, I think, is the line that most of the big dressmakers are following.

But we shall have godets and to spare if the high couture have their say. Skirts with about a mile of fullness in them are sewed on to tight fitting basques, favored alike by Queen Victoria and Paul Poiret.

I have wondered so often how those two, so far apart in race and point of view and language, ever came together on a line in the mode. To be sure, it is a different looking line by the time Poiret gets through with it to the one which Victoria and her subjects wore. Still, it seems to me a strange line out of which to get inspiration.

There are a lot of hoops and bustles in the spring collections, but that is nothing to grow morose or alarmed over, because there always are.

Here is a model carrying the new flare and a lot of other things besides, including a watch fob. Do you suppose they will ever actually be the style again? They are sticking their heads into the jewelry shop windows and, as it were, putting in a sort of tentative bid for your countrymen to buy. I should not be surprised if they would find their way across the Atlantic presently, and really they make an amusing little decoration for a gown.

This dress is garnished at the low belt line with a black ribbon watchguard hung with a coral fob to match the earrings, the dress being yellow suede, made with a skirt straight in line, but ample in cut. Still, the jacket is the thing you are invited to note.

It should be mentioned that the costume is one plucked from off the Riviera, but if it will carry one through that climate it ought to get you through a promenade on the Lake Shore drive. For never have I been colder and never have I had a worse cold than on the Riviera, where the climate is intense.

This jacket, if you please, is sleeveless. It is of black suede, heavily bordered in thick, long haired black fur, which is also used as cuffs. One of the best dressed Parisiennes is standing for that costume. I hope you can glean some inspiration from it.

Here is one that seems practical and yet isn't. It could easily be made so—as well as less attractive—by changing the material of the blouse, which in the offering happens to be white satin. Not awfully serviceable for everyday wear in Chicago, especially as in the model it is sewed to the skirt. This lower part of the dress is of tete de negre satin, as are the cuffs and the binding round the boat shaped neck.

The whole point to the dress is the lovely blending of the ivory satin into the brown, the straight long line of the silhouette, and perhaps—even if we don't acknowledge it—the look of extravagance in jauntily making up wedding satin as an integral part of a daytime dress.

The way I should do it would be to sew blouse and skirt together less solidly than the Callot sisters have done in this model, so that I could rip the blouse away from its moorings to that skirt and have it cleaned. I marvel at the jaunty carelessness with which the French woman shoots her fine costumes off to the cleaner—and they never look the same when they come back.

The hat of this fetching getup is of maroon felt, with a close ribbon trimming going round it and spreading into a flat bow on the side. There is a delicate tulle veil.

The third offering has a typical Callot look to it. It, too, is a Riviera costume—of white kaska with a jacket bloused full. Three buttons hold the tight belt in place. The skirt folds like a peignoir and wraps the figure in that line I think will continue to share favor with all the godets that may blossom into life. The hat is of green felt with a lighter green cocarde on it—and that is about all.

The fourth dress is lovely in its clinging, drooping grace. It is an evening dress of white chiffon, with panels of filet lace, two of which fall to the floor. The woman wore beautiful pearls and bracelets, and she had on a chic black satin hat with a black lace veil draping it, and falling irregularly below its brim.

A FRIEND IN NEED
by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friend in need and the friend in deed may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy, and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me, and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper only.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Those who do not send parcels to the Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

KIDS THAT FEEL THE COLD.

TWO facts explain the mergency which confronts us this week. First, our requests for children's clothing are running higher than ever before. Behind this fact, and giving grim meaning to it, is the statement by doctors that influenza is on the increase.

It is hard to realize, I know, how grave the situation really is. Surprising though it may seem, I believe devotion to education runs higher among the poor than in families in easy circumstances. The mother of a family in comfortable circumstances thinks little of keeping the children out for a day or two from time to time.

Not so the less fortunate. They are grimly determined to give their children all the education possible; and the little ones trudge to school with holes in their shoes, with bodies wrapped heavily beneath shirts to make up for lack of overcoats, and the like. Sitting with wet feet and overheated bodies in the schoolroom, followed by return through the wet to cold and draughty houses, completes the story. The little victims are ready in wholesale number for the swoop of influenza and pneumonia.

Once under way in a community, these diseases must run their course, I suppose. However that may be, I know that if you have any children's clothing you don't need, now is the time of times to set it at work in the home of some poor family! Whole shoes and warm overcoats, given now, will avert disease and death with ten fold effectiveness, for this is the week of weeks when such things are needed. It's almost true that every warm outfit given now will avert a case of serious illness later. Won't you lend a hand? Any article of outgrown clothing will be gratefully received by some one.

Interested in Stamps.

"I am a country boy and a lover of stamps. We can't buy things of interest. I wonder if there is a reader who has a collection of stamps in which he has lost interest, and would be willing to give one who would care for and enjoy it. I'd gladly send postage, which is the least I could do.

"M. F."

We are glad to find space for your request, and hope you will be answered soon.

Pursued by Trouble.

"Will you please make an appeal for a young woman who has had five years of misery? She is my sister, 20 years old. She has had to be a mother to her dead step-mother's four children. She has worked hard all alone. Through an accident all died except a baby, whom she has cared for as her own. At present she is taking care of my brother, recently out of the navy, who has been ill. He is out of work, money, and clothes. Sister is ill, too, and needs clothes and shoes. She wears size 16—brother about 39.

"They are living in a summer cottage which does not give them much shelter for this weather.

"If some of your friends can give them clothes, they might be able to get to the city and would soon be well enough to get work. I know there is no coal whatever out there. I have done all I can for them, but I have my hands full with my own children. We will all be grateful for anything they get. MRS. G."

It does seem as though some people have far more trouble than their share. There should be some relief for your sister's burden soon.

Away from Everywhere.

"I lived in an isolated backwoods in Spottsylvania county, Va. I wonder if some one would send me two yards of any kind of flannel or cotton goods, a pair of woman's rubbers No. 6, a pair of man's storm rubbers No. 7, and boy's rubbers No. 4. This is a land of mud and sleet, and I'd be happy if some one would give my little boy a toy engine or some other plaything. He has to stay in a great deal because of bronchial trouble, and it gets terribly lonesome for him in our backwoods.

"M. L."

Wouldn't it be hard to imagine a case where happiness could be given more easily? Surely we can give rubbers and a toy engine, when they will mean so much to this struggling mother!

Home Is Damp.

"I live in a damp basement and have been laid up with rheumatism for some time. My husband has been out of work and is home at present. It seems just as we get a start something happens. We have three children and it takes a lot of clothes and food for them. I wonder if any of your readers have furniture, rugs, or clothing to give. If anyone has a trunk or suit case no longer needed I would be thankful for it. I wear coat size 38, shoes 3½ or 4 on E last or C.

"MRS. A. L."

Here are people who will be helped by almost any article you can give. Old rugs in particular would be a blessing to a person suffering with rheumatism in a basement home!

Doing Their Best.

"I am writing to ask you if any of your readers has old clothing to spare. My husband has been in a hospital for some time, and it takes nearly all we can scrape up to keep us going, without leaving a margin for clothes.

"Two of my girls go to high school. They are working their way through, and I hate to have to take them out of school because of lack of clothes when they are working so hard to get an education. I have four children—ages, 15, 17, 8, and 2—all girls. The two oldest and I need winter coats badly. The little folks need warm dresses and underclothing.

"I will gladly pay all charges on anything sent, if the sender so wishes, and perhaps I may have something some day to help some other struggling mother to make both ends meet.

"MRS. F. H. M."

Surely, when education for the girls may be at stake, we can clear away the clouds for this family—especially when so many of us must have old garments of the sort requested!

Live and Learn.

I have always had a strong aversion for coarse or uncouth language, and no patience with those, especially women, who resort to the use of slang and near profanity.

A few years ago I spent some time in a town in which the people were friendly and hospitable. I was active in the social life, especially the church and educational work.

While there I suffered a serious illness which confined me to my room several weeks. One evening while I was convalescing a number of friends came in to spend the evening. I was taken down stairs and made comfortable on a couch in the living room. The pastor of my church, the superintendent of schools, and other people of prominence were present. After awhile, some one suggested that the young people go to the kitchen to make candy. The older people withdrew to one side of the room and talked in subdued tones, allowing me to rest. Evidently I fell asleep and was aroused by the reentrance of the young people.

Whether it was some hitherto suppressed impulse of my subconscious mind, or the effects of the recent fever on my nerves and brain, I do not know, but I suddenly found myself sitting upright and saying in clear, forcible tones, "Now, what in the devil is making all of that noise?"

The young people laughed. The older people looked astonished. Realizing what I had said, I fell back on the couch and burst into tears.

Some one carried me up stairs and put me to bed. With the utmost consideration no one ever referred to the incident. Since that time I have had more sympathy for and been more tolerant of the occasional lapses of others.

A. R.

There Stood the Janitor.

I live in a rooming house and the other day when I heard what I thought was a scraping at the door, I went to open it. I was simply dressed in my kimono and boudoir cap and called in a coaxing voice, "Come in, Sweety; come in, Sweety." Sweety was the little dog that had a habit of coming upstairs with the landlady when she arranged and swept the rooms and he often came into my room in a friendly manner. However, that morning Sweety did not heed my calls, so I looked outside the door. There was the janitor, sweeping the halls. It was his broom hitting the door which made me think it was Sweety. I explained to him that the landlady's dog was called Sweety and that I hoped he did not think I was talking foolishness to him.

F. A.

By Proof Positive.

One Sunday evening we were visited by a young couple. They began complimenting me on my rosy cheeks, which, I claimed, were due to a long walk that I took every morning. Just then my young son came marching out of my bedroom, his cheeks smeared with rouge.

sitting down—well, it couldn't be done. I was the hit of the evening. The girls merrily paraded through the house with me, and finally out to the porch. Since I was unable to sit, they picked me up and laid me on the swing.

A few moments later one of them exclaimed, "There's a man coming up the walk!" and they fled precipitately.

I tried to rise; couldn't. In my haste I did, however, manage to fall off the swing just as the visitor reached the porch. Of course he had to pick me up and I found he was a person with whom I had only a slight acquaintance, but he was a friend of my husband, and I had to stand there stiffly and answer his questions. I could have died for shame, and finally, being unable to endure it longer before his astonished and amused eyes, I turned and walked stiffly, like a tin soldier, into the house.

CARELESS SHAMPOOING SPOILS THE HAIR

Soap should be used very carefully, if you want to keep your hair looking its best. Many soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much free alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and rusts it.

The best thing for steady use is Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo (which is pure and greaseless), and is better than anything else you can use.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water is sufficient to cleanse the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub the Mulsified in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dust, dirt, dandruff and excess oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any pharmacy. It is very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months. Be sure your druggist gives you Mulsified.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Dull hair on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to it. I'll add to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Wars may come and wars may go—on. Murders may come and murderers go—also free, especially the feminine manipulators of sawed off and fancy shotguns. The Ku Klux may occupy your headlines, but what are these details of parlor conversation compared with that greatest of all indoor sports, reducing?

'Tis well 'twere not thus in Shakespeare's day, or surely Lady Macbeth would have been held up on her midnight prowl by some unwitting lady in waiting to tell her she was going to reduce or had to reduce or was thinking about the mighty problem.

Even at a musical the other afternoon, before the last strains of the lovely Brahms symphony had died away, mine ears were assailed by: "Yes, Irene, I lost five pounds."

Well, it is with us, anyway. And who am I, who needs must watch her diet, too, and needs must bend and twist and salaam to the floor in daily meditation, not to rush right in where the male angels fear to tread, if their head be not light and gay as a colleen youth's, and raise my voice in unison with the assembled chorus?

So Easy to Forget.

It is some little time now, it seems to me, since we foregathered at our imaginary luncheon table with its menu of a butterless hard roll and a slim celery stalk to talk over fresh propaganda for the figure that defies time. I am worried lest during this lapse you have fallen into the lap of luxury and bondage.

My mail indicates that this is a subject that demands repetition to the point of boring to death those who have no interest in the subject—those who were ordained by nature to be the objects of inspiration for this perpetual warfare.

Exercise Alone Won't Do.

Without further asides, then, lest while we tarry the scales go up another notch or two:

I want today to stress particularly the point that not upon exercise alone may one hope within reasonable time to assume the shadow of her former self—this because of the growing tendency to bend and plunge and creak and ache to music, putting all one's faith in it. Not, dear sisters of the crowded sleeves, that this item of reform is not an excellent one. It is. Give power and a wider distribution to this most excellent propaganda.

But I speak because I get complaints daily from women who tell me they have been doing such and such exercises daily for months and see no appreciable reduction in waist or hip line, I would remind them that there is no cure attached to exercise which provides that food may be consumed at the old rate per day, when one is aiming at a symmetrical outline.

Diet All Important.

The main reliance in a reducing regime should be upon food regulation rather than upon exercise. Furthermore, it is advisable for those much overweight to reduce for a time by diet before attempting vigorous exercise, as there is danger to this class of overstraining a fat incumbered heart. It is well to change habits gradually.

It is unwise for the man or woman who has been taking no exercise to go in for a great deal of it suddenly. Understand, however, exercise bears an important relation to the weight of the body. People who are normally active approach more nearly the normal standards of weight. And exercise done daily for years would undoubtedly have saved many yards of goods. It is after one has cornered more than his share of the avoirdupois market that diet becomes all important.

Resolve to Do It Now.

Particularly at this time of year is the temptation to eat of rich and heavy foodstuffs upon us. There is no better time, however, than right now to get in training for the new spring outfit.

Unless you are much overweight, I advise you to keep on doing your exercises to music or to the tune of your own creaking bones. Do them daily and religiously, start in on them lightly, gradually increasing their repetitions. If you have none on hand, I shall be only too glad to contribute a most excellent set of twelve to be done daily. I have found them to be of tremendous value.

But keep your weather eye on food consumption, and reduce it. Just by way of a little experiment and initial training, suppose you agree to eat just half of everything you have been eating. Even this simple formula will surprise you at the end of a couple of weeks.

Ay, There's the Rub.

If your will power will stand for a little more rigidity, reduce to one-third the former quantity, and I'll wager you will be surprised to find what a comfortable allowance that one-third leaves.

In the matter of butter consumption, say, instead of a square or two at a meal, spread the bread so lightly that you can taste but not see it. Instead of three slices of toast, take one. Ask for no extra servings, under any condition. Register this in your mind for good measure: Bread is more responsible for obesity than any other single article of diet, because we do not limit the amount nor the butter spread thereon. We limit servings of vegetables and meat, but seldom bread.

Register, too, the foods which are fattening as against the wide indulgence allotted to those which are not. Avoid cream, candy, butter, sugar, mayonnaise and cream dressings, pork pies, pastries, cake, and cream soups. Eat plentifully of green vegetables, in salads at noon, say, and alone or in salads for dinner. There is an endless variety of desserts to be made from fresh and cooked fruits.

STRAIGHT FROM LONDON.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The fact that "Loyalties" is a play in which the action takes place in London, and in which the unusually large number of men in the cast are Englishmen who brought their wardrobes straight from the other side, is enough guarantee that the men's clothing in this play is worth our attention and consideration. For the high class English actor is a good dresser, and, as I have recently pointed out in this department that the English style in clothes is more and more becoming the choice of the American men off stage and on, on analysis of what is worn in "Loyalties," may serve perhaps as a forecast. At least, it should be interesting from the comparison standpoint.

As the cast includes three army officers—a general, a major, and a captain—a lord, a pair of solicitors, and a couple of plain gentlemen, and as the three acts include evening, afternoon, and morning scenes we have much to work from.

The first act finds us in an English country home in the evening. Winsor, the host of a house party, one of the plain gentlemen mentioned above, is on the point of going to bed, and so we are able to see not only his slightly form fitting dinner coat and his black silk waistcoat, but, when these are removed, a pair of wide black and white suspenders holding up high cut trousers, which are higher in back than front, but are not plaited. The trousers of the general and Capt. Dancy, who are also in this act, are plaited, doubtless, for they fall in much fuller lines from the waist. The three dinner coats are in all details of the most conservative type. There are no back vents, the lapels are peaked and faced with dull silk, with no edging around the collar. The three men wear stiff plain bosomed shirts, black vests, and bold wing collars.

We do not see the dinner coat of the other important character in the play, as his first entrance is after his evening bath. The general's fine, "Did you ever see such a dressing gown?" is a hint of what De Levis used as a bathrobe. It is a simple little thing of gold and black brocade, lined with purple silk.

The second act takes place in the afternoon at an exclusive men's card club, where women are not in evidence. There are at one time seven well dressed men on the stage. Of the seven men, six wear spats, and the seventh patent leather cloth top shoes. All wear stiff white collars, either wing or turn down. Four have sack suits, two of which are double breasted; two wear dark sack coats with checked trousers, and the remaining wears a sack coat with black and white striped trousers. All the coats are quite short, well rounded, and cut away at the bottom, and ventless. The trousers are extremely full.

We have, in all, four or five types of English dresser. The checked trouser combination is worn by the lord and the general. The lord wears a light tan vest with his oxford jacket and checked trousers, a wing collar, an ascot tie, and white spats. The general wears the same except that his waistcoat is the same material as the coat, and his spats are gray.

De Levis is in the short oxford jacket with the striped trousers. His waistcoat matches his coat, and he wears a white shirt, wing collar, bow tie, patent leather shoes, and tan spats. Capt. Dancy is one of those most interestingly dressed from a color standpoint. He is wearing a sack suit of light gray, single breasted, buttoning with three buttons. With it he has combined a light gray shirt, a stiff white turnover collar, and a red and blue striped four in hand cravat.

Winsor has a dark, double breasted sack suit, stiff white turndown collar, blue tie with white polka dots, and white spats. The other double breasted suit is worn by Colford, the only one not in spats. His suit is dark blue with a faint white stripe. Borring's suit is light brown, his shoes brown, and his spats tan.

The last scene of the second act gives us nothing new except De Levis in an ascot tie, instead of a bow, and white spats.

Act three is noteworthy less for interesting costumes than the insight it gives us into the clothes of one of the professions—namely: the law. We find a young clerk in striped trousers and dark sack coat. Both partners of the law firm, Graviter & Twisden, wear the conventional cutaway coat and striped trousers, which is the business suit of many Englishmen, while here it is the formal day attire of a minority.

The fact that the part of Twisden was taken by the same actor who played the lord in the checked trousers in the second act, and that Colford and Graviter, the other solicitor, were both played by one man, and Borring and the young clerk by another man, shows how carefully the actors dressed to type.

How Stuart's Calcium Wafers Work Out to the Skin and Clear it of Facial Blemishes

The manner in which Stuart's Calcium Wafers influence a beautiful complexion is one of nature's marvels. Their first action is to remove the sour fermentations that are apt to poison the blood and thus disfigure the skin. Then the calcium itself is a natural agency to skin health and is appropriated by the tissues for its own particular use in repair work. These effects are visibly noticeable to those troubled with a pimply skin, or one that is muddy or red or blotchy, scaly and rough and coarse. The Calcium Wafers induce a reaction to healthier tendencies and soon the pinkish complexion begins to assert itself, the blemishes fade away, the dimples seem animated and the entire appearance is one of vivacious beauty instead of unsightliness.

Get a 60 cent box of Stuart's Calcium Wafers at the nearest drug store and note the wonderful results. You will surely be delighted.

BRIGHT WOMEN want a bright paper. Better no breakfast than no TRIBUNE.

The Queerest Boss I Ever Had

There are good bosses and bad bosses, and then again there are bosses who are just queer. Will you ever be able to forget the queerest boss you ever had? The perplexities, and the frowns, and the smiles he caused you? Was it his attire that yielded the comedy? Some odd personal habit? Some eccentricity that revealed you to despair? Write out your story, using one side of the paper only and telling it as briefly as possible and send it to The Queerest Boss Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter published.

Penny Wise, Pound Foolish.

He was hopeless on the subject of postage stamps. He insisted that every stamp on every envelope be adjusted with a nicety which would place it parallel with the corners of the envelope and exactly one-quarter inch from the edge.

The first day I was in the office I was assigned the task of sending out circular letters just twenty-two minutes before quitting time. I started to break all speed laws in the matter of stamping and sealing the envelopes. Stamps were put on every which way. Suddenly, through the door marked "Private" bolted my new boss. When he saw the hastily stamped envelopes he turned white with pain and horror. Every one had to come off. Every envelope had to be readdressed. Until late that night he stood over me, ruler in hand, and measured and inspected every stamp I put on.

About a year later a mail campaign was put on, with a mailing list of 2,000. I thought that, with so huge a number of envelopes to handle, she surely would relent in his mania for propriety in stamping. But he proved more than ever. Three neophytes were added to the staff to do the work of mailing, and the entire morning of their first day was spent in his office receiving detailed instructions and demonstrations in the art of stamping.

That his notion complicated the work of handling and slowed up the entire campaign never seemed to enter his head. For weeks he stood over those mail clerks, making sure that they stamped the envelopes correctly, while he neglected highly important matters in the campaign, which resulted in the loss of several thousand dollars.

H. L.

Frugal to Excess.

The queerest boss I ever had was an economy fiend. One of his favorite pastimes was to come back to the office after hours and go through the waste basket to find out how much paper I wasted. He would figure the cost of this out to a fraction of a cent and the next morning show me the figures and tell me how extravagant I was. At one time he had me save all slips from the adding machine, paste them together, roll them up, and use the blank side in the machine. This was the limit, and I left.

L. S.

No Place for a Pen.

He was a lawyer who spent his spare time writing notes. He was compiling a book on a certain phase of the law, and his peculiarity consisted of wiping his pen on his hair at any interruption. I always thought how fortunate it was that he was not a blonde, so many times a day did I find him running his pen, thick with ink, through his hair. He also would wash his hands every few minutes. Even in the midst of an important conference he would leave his client, without any excuse, go to the wash stand, and painstakingly wash his hands.

L. A.

Couldn't Fool Him.

The queerest boss I ever had was the owner of a rapid delivery business. Before every trip he would turn the speedometer back to zero and measure the gas. When I came back he would read the speedometer and measure the gas again. If he thought I hadn't gone out of my way he was all right, but if he thought I had he would fly into a rage. He also timed me on my trips and no matter how fast I would go he always said he could have gone faster. He always told me to take short cuts if possible to save gas.

SEASONAL RECIPES.

SPECIAL February fixings in foods may be significant and many. Birthday cakes of no ordinary sort, fancies for Valentine's day and the historical vianda that go with Lenten observances, some gay and others quite somber or of chastened simplicity, are in order. The day before Ash Wednesday has been a day of great cutup, mardi gras, in many countries, and even in England far back there were kinds of celebration for young and old. For the young it was pancake or flapjack day.

Of some lines on February, these three tell a bit of what we celebrate:

St. Val with artful aid helps Cupid's game:
Fresh laurels wreathe two names of deathless fame.

The Day of Ashes brings the vernal fast.

Sandwiches, small cakes, cooked creams, garnishing vegetables—all these we cut or mold in the shape of hearts for Valentine day, to say nothing of the sugared somethings and the paper frivolities of the day. We used to say "sugared nothings," but now that we have calories we know that such an expression is so far from the truth, and so misleading to those who overindulge in these particular "nothings," that we must utter fair warning in mentioning them. The excuse "just for once" harbors many a pitfall. "Vernal" is the salad of the love apple (tomato) and the dainty cream soup.

Red, White and Blue.

In celebrating Lincoln's birthday we may appropriately hark back to pioneer menus, perhaps to hog and hominy—we can't exalt these in the cooking—and for Washington's birthday we may turn to colonial menus for a change. Since the cherry has lost its novelty and the hatchet idea has become rather a dull one.

The colonial colors of blue and buff, in appropriate uses, also furnish relief from the red. Always the red, white, and blue may be used, but let it not be wastefully. Many people admit that our national colors are often too cheaply and extravagantly used, and without any real feeling for their significance. So used they do not inspire salute, and rarely any reverence.

The Cake Called "Simnel."

The two birthdays we celebrate are two great patriotic holidays, but our country gets less attention in these, often, than it should have. Perhaps we cannot increase this attention by the foods we use, and then again we may. Suppose we take for our cake one as nearly like the old election cake as any we have, which was a famous but simple cake made of raised dough. We can make it pioneerlike or Lincolnlike with the garnishes we use for Feb. 12, and colonialike by those we use for Feb. 22.

And there is yet another use we may make of this cake. The Sunday of mid-Lent is called Mothering Sunday, and it was formerly the custom to present mothers with cakes on that day, the fourth Sunday in Lent. The cake was called a "simnel," and one of the explanations of its meaning is that it was the finest quality of white bread made in the middle ages. There are other explanations much more personal as well as various traditions of why it was presented. One author says:

"It was the custom of all young members of the family to visit the parents on this particular day, taking with them a present in the shape of a 'simnel' cake for the mother, which was supposed to be eaten while the whole family was present."

Poet Wrote of It.

From various accounts one might think the cakes so presented were called "simnel" because of this use and not because they were all made according to a certain recipe. The poet Herrick [1591-1674] wrote this stanza:

I'll to thee a simnel bring,
'Gainst thou go a-mothering:
So that when she blesses thee,
Half that blessing thou'lt give me.

For the benefit of the mother who has wanted her daughter, this one or two years, to make her a mothering Sunday cake, I would say I think it more than likely that "simnel" originally meant a cake [perhaps in the Scottish sense of any round baked piece of meal or flour] that was of wheat, since oat cakes and cakes of barley were common and every day, while those of wheat flour were exceptional, and fine, and only consumed daily by the rich or noble, therefore a special treat on great occasions for the less fortunate.

For Mid-Lent Sunday.

The International dictionary, in giving the origin of the word simnel, has two forms of an old French word meaning "cake or bread of wheat flour," and also the Latin word meaning the finest wheat flour, to which our modern word semolina is probably closely related. The first definition of simnel given is the obsolete one: "A kind of bread made of fine flour; a kind of biscuit or cracknel." The second meaning is given as English: "A kind of rich plum cake, especially for mid-Lent Sunday."

With reference to Lenten fare, there is the following statement from an authoritative English source: "All sorts of cakes—simnels, hot cross buns, and many others, were eaten during holy week, when herb puddings and porridge—probably in memory of the bitter herbs of the passover—were also used." This would suggest that simnel is a cake of the bread type—since it is grouped with hot cross buns.

In the same article it says: "In olden days peas and beans were eaten in large quantities during Lent. These were hallowed according to special formula at this season; the practice seems to have been derived from the ancient Roman one of offering beans to the spirits of the dead at the Lemuria, and as there seems to have been the custom of celebrating the funeral and passion of our Lord on this day, doubtless beans were connected in popular fancy with the souls of the dead. Doles of peas and beans were made for the poor at certain convents and abbeys at the beginning of Lent, and old cookery books contain many recipes for preparing 'carlings.'"

Carling, or Care Sunday, was the fifth in Lent, but it would seem as though anything eaten on that day was a carling, although parched peas, used greatly as a Lenten food, were especially eaten on that day. No period of the year built up so much food history—and it was not only a religious and social history that was made but a political as well, in some cases—as that of the Lenten fast.

Hominy Bread.

Hulled corn is colonial, and our cooked big hominy is much like it. Hominy is also pioneer food. The best recipe for hominy bread in my possession is this: One cup fine hominy, one tablespoon butter, two eggs, two tablespoons white corn meal, one and a half cups of boiling water, one cup of milk, one-half teaspoon salt. Put cup of hominy into double boiler with cup and a half of boiling water and cook for thirty minutes. When hot add tablespoon of butter, the two eggs beaten, the cup of milk, salt, and lastly the two tablespoons of white corn meal.

Mix well together and turn into a buttered earthen dish, a glass bread pan which can also be brought to the table is exceedingly good for this. Have a strong heat at the bottom of the oven, and not so much at the top so that this will rise well. Serve hot in dish in which it was baked and not necessarily with a spoon. Nice slices can be cut from it—thick ones—which are particularly good with a gravy.

The originator, or the one who adapted this recipe to a flouriess era, said it was better fried than mush. Perhaps you will think so. At any rate, it is something that may be made to seem both primitively simple and simply elegant.

Date Pastes and Jam.

Dates scalded, stoned, and mashed, may be used for sandwiches without any addition, but they may be thinned with a bit of sirup or some orange marmalade, or sprinkled with candied and dried orange peel broken fine. The little bit of orange seasoning improves the sandwiches. Or to make the dates go farther, wash and stone a cup of them—we usually push off as much of the skin as we can when it is loose—add a cup of cold water, put over fire, and when the water comes to the boiling point simmer the dates for a few minutes, and beat to evenness. A cup of sugar and the juice of a lemon may be added. This may be used in a fruit shortcake, or in biscuits broken open and buttered, thus making a sort of individual shortcake.

Maple Sugar Candy.

Candy making may be made a party affair, and maple candy making is a colonial party affair, with entirely up-to-date enjoyment possible. I have made maple candy in the woods, or was present when it was made, and know that to pick this delicious sweet up out of the cold snow is a rare experience. A recent writer says that maple candy, or "wax," may be made at any place in a cold snap when there is plenty of newly fallen snow, a can of pure maple syrup, and a knowledge of how they make maple candy and sugar off in the woods. As a matter of fact, woodsmen who gather sap and boil it down do not usually make maple candy, but know that when the syrup is almost ready to "sugar off" the form known as wax not only shows the stage of cooking but is a delicacy.

The writer in question tells how she put a quart of maple syrup to cook, knowing that she needed nothing but heat to produce candy. Then she pounded newly fallen snow into a compact mass for a yard square, and then, in her own words, she describes the fun: "A honey suckle vine that had trailed up the porch furnished the 'blower' or tester. A piece about eighteen inches long was clipped, and the tip curled until it formed an oval about one inch long and half an inch across. A piece of thread tied the vine, and assured me of an oval hole that would stay put. In the sugar woods, the tender sap laden maple or birch or beech twig would permit a knot to be tied in its tip.

"The little tester takes the place of that portion of a candy recipe which says 'drop in water and when it forms a hard ball.' As the boiling syrup thickens, the oval of the twig is inserted for an instant, raised to the lips, and a gust of air blown through the slight film stretching across the opening in the twig. When the candy is ready to be poured on the snow, a slight blow through the hole will throw an immense balloon shaped bubble. When this stage is reached, the candy should be taken immediately to the prepared snow bed and poured over the surface thinly. It hardens almost instantly, and in a moment may be lifted and broken into pieces of desired size by sharp blows with a knife or small hammer."

Prairie Corn Bread.

This recipe originated, probably, in Illinois, and was widely used in 1918: One-half cup corn meal, one-third cup boiling water, one and a half cups rye flour, three-fourths cup of milk, four teaspoons baking powder, one tablespoon shortening, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup chopped nuts. Put corn meal into a bowl, add salt, shortening, and boiling water. Mix well. Let stand twenty minutes. Then add rye flour mixed with baking powder, then the milk and nuts. Mix lightly, pour into a well greased pan, let stand in a warm place twenty minutes, and bake in a moderately hot oven. Do not cut until it is cold. This with a date paste makes an excellent afternoon or evening sandwich.

Raised Dough Cake.

One cup bread sponge, one-fourth cup butter, one cup sugar, two eggs, one cup flour, one-half teaspoon of soda dissolved in one tablespoon milk, one half cup raisins or other dried fruit, spices or not. Cream the butter and sugar and work these and all the other ingredients, except egg whites and flavors, into the sponge. The raisins and egg whites should be added last. The mixing and folding of materials should be exceptionally complete. Put batter into cake pan, and let rise about half an hour, or according to depth and size of cake. Brandy was formerly used in such cakes and a larger amount of fruit. For a birthday cake, Lincoln's, this could be baked in a round pan and iced. For a simnel I would suggest it should be baked in the ancient form—a round flat [more or less] loaf on a flat tin, like the primitive loaf baked on a hot flat iron—oven bottom or griddle.

"PIGTAILS"—By Mildred Burleigh.

How Did He Propose?

Do you remember—of course you do—how your husband proposed to you? When and how did it happen? Was he scared to death and weren't you on the verge of nervous prostration, too? Or, of course, you knew he was going to do it—or didn't you? Perhaps he isn't your husband, but one of the fellows you had to "turn down." How about that? Tell us about it! This goes double, for we want to hear from the men, too. A dollar for every letter printed. Address Proposal Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Out of Excuses.

He never did propose. He had been trying to make an engagement with me for six months, but at that time I was interested in another direction and couldn't see him. Finally, after running out of excuses, I consented to go with him to the theater.

When he was leaving he took my face between his hands and said, "You're going to marry me." And then, seeing I was about to speak, he added, "O, not right away, maybe, but eventually. You might as well begin thinking about it."

I said, "never," and laughed, but he won.

That was five years ago, and, strange to say, I have my own way in everything. R. W.

Wants a Monopoly.

For some time I rather thought the young man with whom I was keeping company was going to propose. However, although I liked him quite well, I wasn't ready to say I cared enough to marry him.

One evening we had been driving and he said something about making an engagement for another time. I told him I had a previous engagement for that evening. I told him when he protested that I liked him but I also liked to go to places with other men and didn't want one man to claim all of my time. I'll never forget what he said.

He put his arm around me and said, "My dear, I more than like you. I love you, and I want to be the only man in your life."

I thought then I didn't care, but soon found out that I did, and we were married in two months. That was five years ago, and we still more than like each other. F. S.

Doors Are Decorations for Any Room, if Treated in Artistic Way

Chintz hides badly proportioned panels.

By Anita de Campi.

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

DOORS and doorways offer diversity of treatments, and may be of great value to the decorative quality, as well as to the comfort and completion of a room. Every room, of course, has at least one doorway which, if properly handled, may add infinitely to the attractiveness of the room.

Unpaneled doors, in some instances, are more interesting than those which are paneled. The unbroken surface offers an opportunity for the employment of decorative ironwork. In an old Spanish house doors of this type, fitted with elaborate, hand wrought strap hinges and latches of iron, carry out the general character of the room. The walls are rough plastered, and the door frames are as unaccented and as simple as possible. There is a Pompeian red tiled floor, and the furniture is of the Spanish type.

Making the doors part of the paneling in a paneled room is generally desirable. In an oak paneled dining room the lines of the wall panels are followed so well that the doors, when closed, are almost imperceptible. This gives an interesting effect of secret passageways.

Unusually striking are the doors in an Italian living room. These have been covered, on the living room side, with tight stretched canvas, fastened around the edges with dull, brass headed tacks. An Italian renaissance design, in bright green, red, yellow, blue, and black, with dull gold, has been painted on the canvas, the effect produced being that of highly decorative and colorful wall panels.

Rather badly proportioned were the panels in the doors of an informal living room in a country house. This fault has been overcome, however, by clever treatment, as shown in today's illustration. The woodwork in the room and the borders of the two doors have been painted American flag blue. Decorative floral chints, in brick red, mauve, sage green, old gold, and ivory, with touches of blue matching the woodwork, printed on an ecru ground, has been stretched over wallboard and fastened flat to the doors, covering all but the framing edge of blue. The draw curtains at the windows are of heavy ecru linen. On the day bed is a boxed cover of deep blue denim and there are cushions of chints, matching that used on the doors, supplemented by a few in solid color.

Fresh and dainty is a little breakfast room which carries out a color scheme of lemon yellow, mauve, and turquoise. Woodwork, furniture, and doors are painted yellow. The edges of the door panels and furniture are accented by lines of turquise. On the backs of the chairs, corners of the plate glass covered table, and in the panels of the doors, motifs of flowers, in turquoise, mauve, and olive green, with touches of black and white, are enameled. Side light shields and casement window curtains are of mauve colored silk. The walls are light sand color, and a deep taupe rug covers the floor.

A pair of French doors, connecting a living room and inclosed porch, is interestingly draped. The doors, of which the woodwork is painted old ivory, are divided so that each one is three lights wide and six high. The two upper rows of lights are left uncurtained, but the lower are covered by silk madras, in dull green and gold, gathered on rods at the top and bottom of the space. Extending a little beyond the full width of the two doors is a simple shirred valance of gold colored taffeta. This tops side drapes of the same material, which reach to the floor. These draperies are on the living room side, so that they are not disturbed by the doors, which open out on to the sun porch.

At the end of a long hall in a New York home there is a doorway with an arched top. With the exception of the wide oak edge the entire door is made of heavy plate glass. A delicate iron grill, made to fit this space, is delightfully silhouetted. It portrays a fine tracery of oak leaves and cones, with the central object of interest a graceful bird whose feathers trail off into highly decorative scrolls.

Fitted with a pair of wrought iron gates is the wide arched opening between a dining and living room. These gates impart a quality of elegance hardly attainable by any other means.

Open doorways, wide or narrow, provide ample opportunities for experiment. In many instances their treatment may be purely decorative, but often it must afford privacy as well. The lines of some open archways are so graceful in themselves that it is best to leave them as they are, without hangings of any sort.

Where walls and carpets are unfigured incidents of pattern may be introduced into the room by means of a decorative screen placed before an open doorway. It is a good idea, in some instances, to have the screen adjusted to the door frame at one side with hinges and to have tiny casters on the lower edge to facilitate the screen's being moved back and forth readily. In a room in which the walls are sand color and the rug a deep, rich brown there is a canvas screen, painted in shades of green, with a copper leaf design. Copper color is repeated in the silk window curtains and lemon yellow lamp shades are used.

Between a reception hall and living room there are double portieres of velour. On the reception hall side they are sand color. Those facing the living room are deep mulberry. The rings by which they are fastened to a rod, so that they may draw together to shut off draughts from the front door, are completely concealed between the double French headings.

Door and window drapes are made to match in another living room. There are shaped lambrequins, both at the windows and at the doorway, and side drapes of black and gold brocade. These reach to the floor, hanging straight, and the gold colored curtains are sill length.

Panelled up the sides and across the top, at right angles to the walls which it joins, is a wide open, walnut doorway. The dull finished dark wood forms an excellent background for the copies of antique florals, which are painted in rich, deep colors in the center of each panel.

In a small colonial bedroom, the window curtains are of heavy, blocked linen in rose and green, on an ivory ground. Matching these, is the curtain which hangs in the closet doorway. Light weight curtains of this sort are often preferred to doors, for windowless clothes closets, as they permit of more air and light than a solid door, and consequently, are not as likely to make the closet close.

The wide, high openings between library and living room in an old fashion house are especially arranged to apparently lessen the height. A square wooden rod (instead of the conventional round rod) is fastened inside the door frame, about eighteen inches down from the top. The two toned deep blue and gold velvet curtains hang in straight, lustrous folds, escaping the floor by about ten inches. They are sewed at the top to square "rings" which fit the curtain rod and slide easily.

The real Vermont maple flavor is there

MAYFLOWER Syrup is made in the heart of Vermont. The fullest flavored maple is gathered for it from sugar camps right nearby, and the men who blend it are Vermonters. Their lives have been spent in getting the utmost in flavor out of maple sap. They would not be satisfied to produce a syrup that had other than a wealth of maple flavor.

Only enough refined granulated sugar is added to the maple for Mayflower Syrup to make it richer-looking than it would be without it.

Mayflower Syrup is sold in both cans and bottles in pint and quart sizes—larger quantities only in cans. Perhaps you are not aware that you get more in a pint of syrup than you would in a pound. A pint is one-eighth of a gallon, while a pound is only one-eleventh. To be sure of getting full measure, buy Mayflower.

The Vermont maple flavor of Mayflower Syrup will give you a real treat. Buy a can today and start this minute looking forward to a pancake feast tomorrow morning. Your grocer has it, or can get it for you.

FORTUNE TELLING by MOLES

By Doris Blake

If you have a little mole, or a bigger one, tucked away upon some part of your anatomy, or projecting boldly from chin, or cheek, or eyebrow, right, you may have it tell you a story of just wny it has attached itself to you. Practically every human being, it is said, has one or more of these small birthmarks, and the ever busy superstition compilers have taken this opportunity to construct a language peculiar to each mole and its position on the body.

If yours stands on the right of the forehead or over the right temple or closely adjoining, you are destined to arrive to sudden wealth an honor as sayeth the mighty soothsayer. Whose word it were not well to take too seriously; that is, to the point of spending the wealth before you have earned it, say.

A mole on the right eyebrow announces a good marriage, the mate to possess many good qualities and a fortune.

A mole on the outside of either eye indicates a sober, steady and sedate disposition.

A mole on either cheek signifies its owner shall not rise above mediocrity in point of fortune.

A mole on the nose means travel on foot in many countries and success in undertakings.

On the nip, either upper or lower, proves a great eater, amorous, but much loved.

On the chin—Great riches, prosperity and high esteem.

On either side of chin—Amiable, industrious, and successful.

On the neck—Money by the peck.

On the throat—riches through marriage.

On the right breast—Poverty, reverses, many children; mostly girls.

On the left breast—Success in undertakings and an amorous disposition; many children, mostly boys.

On the lower jaw—A life of sorrow and pain of body.

On the middle of the forehead—Discourteous, gossipy, and unpleasant.

Under the left breast over the heart—A warm disposition in a man, unsettled, rambling; in a woman, sincerity in love and an easy life.

On the ear—Riches and respect.

Near the bottom of the nostril—Lucky.

On the right side over any part of the ribs—A timid, weak disposition; slow in understanding and working out difficulties.

On the stomach—Affliction; sloth, gluttony, and careless in point of dress.

On either hip—Many children, possessing much patience and love.

On the right thigh—Riches and happiness in the married state.

On the left thigh—Poverty and want of friends through the enmity and unkindness of others.

On the right knee—Will meet with few disappointments in the world.

On the left knee—The person will be rash, inconsiderate, hasty, but modest.

On right leg—Activity and

On left leg—Dangerous, rash actions.

On the ankle—Courage, activity and industry if on a woman's; if on a man's, he is inclined to be elegant in dress and effeminate.

On the foot—Same as applies to right and left leg.

On the right shoulder—Indicates prudence, discretion, secrecy, and wisdom.

On the left shoulder—A testy, cantankerous, contentious, and ungovernable spirit.

Approximately One Thousand United States WATER CARTS

Made for the Government by The Studebaker Wagon Works of South Bend, Ind.

These Carts, we are creditably informed, were built for the government at a cost of $275.00 each.

EQUIPMENT OF THESE CARTS

They have a 158-gallon Water Tank, made of one-piece sheet of No. 14 galvanized iron, joined solidly with 3-16 inch rivets placed 1 inch apart. Tank is 36 ins. in diameter and 48 inches long.

It has Water Hose 25 ft. long, made of 2 inch 4-ply rubber.

It has a Brake Rod of standard, approved type.

Interior of tank has a splash partition, also made of 16-gauge galvanized iron.

Water Strainer is connected with 2 inch standard Pipe Nipple.

It is equipped with a "Red Jacket" Pump, supposed to be the best pump on the market.

Wheels are 54 inches in diameter with a 10-inch steel hub.

It also has Foot Brakes and Tool Box under seat.

There are 15 Brass Water Faucets in rear for drawing water.

Tanks are likewise removable and the chassis can be converted into a cart, to serve a multitude of purposes.

This is an unusual opportunity for Municipalities, Road Builders, Ranchers, Farmers, etc., and makes a practical Sprayer for Trees, Plants, etc., for use on large or small estates.

These Water Carts make ideal water sprinklers and water carriers for drinking purposes, and are indispensable for road construction work. The tanks are likewise suitable for carrying gasoline or oil.

The carts are shipped to you from the Government warehouse at Norfolk, Virginia, knocked down, in original crates, just as the Government received them from the Studebaker Wagon Works. This method of shipment carries a low freight rate.

THE POTTERS

(Than which "Our Mary" has never received a more sincere tribute.)

PROLOGUE.

You must keep a good man down, as Jonah told the whale . . . here is Bill Potter on the house staff of the Auditorium at least, that is how he describes it to Anabelle, who never stops to him that she knows he is only an usher . . . If was Anabelle's uncle who came to Bill's rescue with the silver suit and the broad red ribbon which the ground floor ushers must wear athwart the thorax while they ush . . . and now surely our interest in Bill is sufficient to condone a little curiosity . . . let us in the manner of our representative at Lausanne do a bit of intense observing.

SCENE I.

(Bill Potter, in all the glory of his evening attire, is standing at the back of the house discussing the performance with a fellow usher. The opera is "CARMEN," and the running comment is lucid, even though it might seem a trifle strange to the...)

BILL (to Fred Saxine, art student by day and opera usher by night):
When does this Carmen dame show?

FRED:
She'll come out of that cigaret factory in a minute.

BILL:
What's she doing there?

FRED:
Frying wienies, I suppose. What would she do in a cigaret factory, stupe?

BILL:
Roll 'er own, I guess. Ha, that ain't so bad. (Chuckles out loud, and fourteen white shirt fronts turn around and frown severely. Chuckle dies sudden death.)

FRED:
Here comes Carmen now. That's Mary Garden.

BILL:
O, that her? Didn't she take her stage name from some perfume or somethin'?

FRED:
No, that's her real name.

BILL:
Quit your kiddin'. Garden ain't a real name. Madison Square Garden, Bismarck Garden, Mary Garden. It's a stage name, I know. When does the bull fighter come on?

FRED:
O, he don't come on till the next act.

(Flock of impressive newcomers interrupt the discussion, for Bill Potter must show them their seats. Meanwhile Carmen has gone on the warpath, laid out a few cigaret girls, and is now arguing with the lieutenant, who seems surprised that she should object to going to jail.)

CARMEN (singing):
Tra la la la la la la la. Je brave tout ,e feu, le fer, et le ciel meme!

Bill leads elegantly groomed couple down to the fifth row.

BILL:
What's she sayin' now?

FRED (whose French was the pride of the A. E. F.): She's saying, "I'm a brave gal; I don't care for nothing."

BILL:
O!

LIEUTENANT (singing):
Fais-nous grace de tes chansons,
Et juis que l'on t'a dit de repondre, responds!

BILL:
What's he sayin'?

FRED:
Somethin' about have a heart, cut out the singin', and get down to business.

"She's saying, 'I'm a brave gal. I don't care for nothing.'"

BILL:
Some more of these birds draggin' in late. Why can't they get here on time?

(A fair question, but nobody seems to know the answer . . . Bill leads elegantly groomed couple down to the fifth row and slams down two aisle seats for them with more dispatch than dignity—noise all but drowns out orchestra. Bill stalks back up the aisle, warmed by a sense of duty well done, unmindful of the angry glares and hissed imprecations.)

FRED (to Bill, on his return):
You shouldn't make so much noise; you'll wake up the box holders.

BILL (as Carmen begins to do her stuff to Don José):
Look at her vamp the handsome ossifer.

FRED (admiringly):
Yeh, she's beginnin' to warm up.

BILL (ardently):
Hot diggity dog!

PA (listening intently):
Sounds like Russian or somethin'. That's opera, anyway. They don't sing operas in English.

MA: Which one is it tonight?

PA (listens for a few moments):
Wait a minute.

RADIO (man's voice):
Bloo, Blah, Bleee, Bluggle, Bloogle, Blur, Gwarr, Gweek, Gweek, Gweek, Blub.
(This is followed by a tremendous roaring sound.)

PA (with impressive authority):
What you hear now is the applause.
(The roaring subsides and is followed by a noise that resembles nothing so much as the remarks the lions make at the lion house when they discover it is Sunday morning and they are not going to be fed that day.)

MA (sagely):
That's the orchestra. They must be beating the drums or something . . . (Wistfully): I'd like to go hear an opera again. Do you remember "Madam Butterfly" last year? My, that was grand! I don't remember when I cried so much. Poor little thing!

PA (still listening intently):
This ain't "Butterfly," I'm sure of that.

MAMIE (who has been looking it up in the paper):
Why, Ma, it's "Carmen." That's Mary Garden singing tonight.

MA (who immediately discovers new beauties in the radio rendering):
So that's Mary Garden.

RADIO:
Wooooooooo, Waaaaaaaaa, Weeeeeeeee, Blup.

MA (drinking it in):
Isn't that wonderful, Pa? I wish we could go and hear another opera some time.

PA (jumping at the chance to placate Ma, who blames him for making Bill run away from home):
Why not? Any night you say.

MAMIE (excited):
Chaliapin is going to sing Mefistofele next Saturday night. He's that big Russian bass singer. They say he's just wonderful. I'd like to hear him myself.

MA: What is Mefis—er—whatever it is, all about?

MAMIE (slyly):
I think it's all about the Devil and Hell and things like that. Very snappy, I'd say.

MA (reprovingly):
Mamie, such language!

MAMIE:
I bet Bill woulda liked it.

MA (as Pa gives Mamie a quick glance of warning):
Poor Bill, if he'd only write to me and tell me what he's doing. If I only knew where he is. Maybe he's sick or—

PA (with artificial nonchalance):
He's not sick. He'll come draggin' in here one of these days.

MAMIE:
Red says he's looked everywhere and he can't find him. He'll be here soon. Maybe he's got some news today.

MA (weeping a little):
I wish we could find him. I wish he'd come home. I'm sick worrying.

PA (soothingly):
Don't worry; you'll see him one of these days. He's all right. Let him buck up against the world a while and he'll appreciate a good home when he comes back to it.

(Doorbell rings. It's Red. You can see that if you just look at Mamie.)

"Isn't that wonderful, Pa?"

RED (breezing in):
Well, folks, good news.

MA, PA, and MAMIE (breathlessly):
Bill? Where is he?

RED: I don't know.

MA, PA, and MAMIE (disappointed):
O!

RED: But I heard from him. He called me up.

MA (excited):
What did he say? Where is he? Is he well?

RED (enjoying the importance of his rôle):
Wait a minute. He said he was well and he had a swell job and to tell Ma she wasn't to worry about him, that he was all right. But when I tried to get him to tell me where he was living and working he said nothing doing and hung up.

PA: Why didn't you try to trace the call?

RED: I did, but he phoned from a drug store downtown. Fat chance of tracin' him.

PA (triumphantly, to Ma):
There, I told you not to worry. You just go to the opera Saturday night and enjoy yourself and don't worry about him any more. You may see him sooner than you expect.
(Maybe Pa's more of a prophet than he has any idea.)

EPILOGUE.

(Don José is just getting around to killing Carmen. Why he waits so long is one of the unsolved mysteries of opera. Bill and Fred are getting better acquainted.)

BILL (to Fred, proudly):
I'm on my own, too, you know. Left home to make my own way.

FRED:
Where do your folks live?

BILL:
O, here in the city. But they'll never find me. (Suddenly): Look! What's he doing with that knife?

FRED (callously):
He's goin' to kill her. What makes you think they won't find you?

BILL (excited):
Why don't she beat it? Serves her right, anyway. If I had a girl like that I'd killed her long ago.
(Don José stabs at Carmen and misses her two feet. She drops dead. Tremendous applause, in which Bill and Fred join enthusiastically.)

BILL (confidentially):
Pa and Ma'll never find me. They never go to opera. I'm just as safe here as if I was in St. Peter's pocket. (O, you are, are you? What would you say, Bill Potter, if you knew that Ma and Pa were coming to the opera next Saturday night? And it will be just your luck for them to walk down your aisle.)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

Bright Sayings of the Childr n

The Tribune will pay $1 for each child-talk saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not necessary to acknowledge or return available contributions. Write on one side of the paper. Address Bright Sayings to Aunty Lee, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

The day after Paul's third birthday, a neighbor said: "Well, Paul, I hear you had a birthday party yesterday."

Paul replied, trying to look as tall as he could, "Was fee yeahs old yesserday. I's most foah now." B. E. S.

Alfred has a very vivid imagination and one day when he was telling me about a big cyclone that blew down a windmill I asked him where he had heard about it.

He replied, "O, I hearded about that in a newspaper." R. G. G.

Several children not quite 5 years old, who wanted to enter kindergarten, were assembled to take an intelligence test. Some passed and some did not.

Teacher asked one: "Harry, suppose you were all ready to go to school and it started to rain hard, what would you do?"

She thought he would answer that he would take an umbrella.

Quick as a flash he replied, "I'd call a taxi." G. L. R.

Dannie's mother could not get him to eat lettuce, and the doctor had prescribed it. Hoping to make a pleasure of necessity, mother gave a party, at which the children eagerly played rabbit. Mother joined the children and hopped about and crinkled up her nose as bunnies do. Then she brought on the lettuce.

Dannie, seeing where his enthusiasm had led him, retreated gracefully.

"I think they're too many rabbits," he said. "I rather be a little doggie and eat meat." G. D. W.

Ralph had been told that he must never ask for anything. One day last week at a neighbor's home he saw a tempting basket of oranges.

Approaching the mother of the home, he impressively exclaimed: "Do you know, it's so long since I eated an orange I forget what they tastes like!" F. J.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $1 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to keep.

SHARING HER SECRET.

DEAREST: Did you ever have a secret way down in your heart that you just could not let any one know? Dear, for months I have had a secret buried way down in my heart. Sometimes I was afraid you might know. It was so hard to keep it all to myself. Then last night you put your arms around me and kissed me and told me you loved me. Dear, then I could tell you I loved you. That was my secret.

You will never know how awful it was to love you and not know if you loved me. I knew you liked me heaps, but I was almost afraid to dare to dream of your loving me. It seemed altogether too wonderful. I did not want to hope and dream and then have all my dreams shattered.

Dear, two years ago yesterday when I first met you little thrills went up and down my back. Then for that one solid week at Helen's house party you rushed me. I knew you must like me, but thought merely as a pal.

Then you went back to school in the fall. You took me to all of your frat dances. I thought it was merely because you and Bill were such good pals and I was his sister. All the time I was learning to love you. I did not realize it, though, until the farewell dance in June. Remember? We sat out in the porch for one dance. It was next to the last. You put your arms around me, told me you were going north for the summer, and asked if I would miss you. Dear, my heart stopped—almost. Then you kissed me good-by. You left early the next morning.

I did not see you until the following winter. You wrote lots—chummy letters—always calling me your pal. I thought perhaps you had meant nothing by that kiss—it had been so brotherly—but, dear, I gave you my heart with that kiss.

Then you came back. You called often. My heart was almost breaking for love of you—love which I had to keep all to myself.

But last night, dear—you called for me and took me for a ride. Will I ever forget that most wonderful moon and the lake? And you told me you loved me and had for long. O, honey, I love you so! You asked me to tell you last night if I would be willing to give myself to you for safekeeping forever and ever. Dear, you have my heart—have had it for long—and I love you, love you, love you. I love you so that I could cry for happiness. And to think you love me, too! Yours,

EMILY.

Beauty Answers by Antoinette Donnelly

MRS. X.: REFERRING TO THE drama of the female figure, some wit has ascribed it "From Bass Viol to Flagpole." You want to play a lead? The back row in the chorus for you for a few weeks, anyway, and if you will take me on as your manager I'll get you right out in the spotlight, singing "I'm not as much of a girl as I used to was by twenty pounds or so." But you must diet and you must exercise. Send s. a. e. for reducing book containing all this, please.

A. M. G.: IT IS DIFFICULT TO fatten your face without adding a few pounds to the rest of you. No use sacrificing the pretty contour of a face to a foolish desire to be underweight. Massaging plumpness into the cheeks is a slow and tedious course, invariably of little success, too. Wearing the hair low and puffed around the ears lends an artificial aid. You had better eat and eat heartily until you have put roses and a dash of rotundity in your cheeks.

MRS. M. C.: I CLAIM YOU CAN make any hair look better by the daily use of the hairbrush, and that alone. Of course, in exaggerated cases, a tonic may be necessary, but for the general run you can get that gloss and smart look to the coiffure by keeping it well brushed. Brushing tones the scalp and also removes foreign matter from the scalp. It will keep it free from scales, and where there is no actual scalp disease will prevent dandruff. The hairs that come out as a result of brushing are those which have degenerated and which would come out anyway. They should be removed from the hair follicles to allow more vigorous hairs to supplant them.

FLOR: NO, FLORA, YOU NEVER read that in my department. I advise you to wash the face in warm water, rinse in warm water, and then cold, or rub with ice. I can see where you would have a lot of trouble using the procedure you attribute erroneously to my advice. I never recommended that kind of cream, either, as I have never recommended any proprietary article. You must have me confused with some one else. But that's that. Send s. a. e. for my instructions on how to care for the complexion, follow them, and all will be forgiven. Your skin will undoubtedly improve in muck quicker time than on the last treatment.

Doesn't hurt a bit! Drop a little "Freezone" on an aching corn, instantly that corn stops hurting, then shortly you lift it right off with fingers. Truly!

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between toes, and calluses, without soreness or irritation.

COFFEE PRODUCTS COMPANY

Dept. 124 MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

1. Anyone living outside of Minneapolis, except employees of this company, may enter. Only one list of answers to a puzzle picture is permitted.

2. Whoever submits contains the largest list of correct answers, the names of visible objects in the picture beginning with "S" will win first prize; second largest, second prize, and so on down the list of fifty prizes. In case of tie, prize tied for will be awarded each tying contestant. One point will be given for each correct word and one point for each incorrect word or omission of a correct word.

3. The correct list by which all answers will be judged will be made up of the correct words in all the answers received, and not from a "master" or artist's list. The correct list will be published at the close of the contest, together with list winning first prize and names and addresses of prize winners, and mailed to all who have "qualified."

4. Only English words will be allowed. An object may be named only once, but words of objects may also be named. Either the singular or plural of a word may be used, but not both. Words of same spelling but different meaning or pronunciation, words will count only once. Compounds, hyphenated and coupled words are not permissible. Webster's New International Dictionary will be the authority.

5. Number your words in the order that you find them, 1, 2, 3, 4, etc. Write on one side of paper only, and place your full name and address at top of each sheet.

6. All answers must be mailed and postmarked not later than Feb. 15, 1925. Contestants may "qualify" up to midnight March 2, 1925.

7. Three prominent Minneapolis people will act as judges in deciding the winners, and all who take part in this puzzle game agree to accept their decisions as final and conclusive.

1167—Woman's dress. Sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 inch material.

1615—Girls' dress and bloomers. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 3½ yards of 36 inch material.

How to Use the Patterns

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

THIS time of year women usually need new house dresses. Pattern No. 1636 should prove a favorite design. Waist and skirt are cut separately, and joined to the same narrow band.

The waist buttons up the middle front and is finished at the neck with an attractive collar. Long or short sleeves may be made—the long ones being gathered at the lower edge and set into a wrist band; the shorter length finished with turned back cuffs—and these are prettily shaped—the straight part slipping under the cuffs where it goes into a point on the upper side.

The skirt is one that will wash and iron easily, and should look well always. There is a back gore and two front ones. The back is gathered across the top and the fronts are shaped so that they fit without fullness. The side seams gore out towards the bottom and as you can see from the picture the front gores are hemmed on the straight edges—which form the middle of the front, and these hems are lapped to a point indicated on the pattern, and from there on up the skirt is left open.

The material should be thoroughly shrunk and the color set before cutting into it, and it will not se a bad idea to face instead of hemming the skirt. When seams are gored, even slightly, it is not possible to lay a hem without putting plaits in at the upper edge, and these will show through after ironing. If a fitted facing is used, cut it by the skirt pattern, being sure to follow the same directions for laying the pattern on the material as you did when cutting the skirt. After the bottom line is cut, remove the pattern, use rule and pencil or chalk, and measure up from the bottom at intervals, making the hem the depth you wish.

If lavender is becoming, gingham in lavender and white check would be pretty, making the collar and cuffs of a fine quality of pique.

Pattern No. 1615 is a simple yet smart design for a girl's dress. It seems especially good for school wear and will be suitable for wash materials, or for serge, wool jersey, etc. There are bloomers included in the pattern.

NEGLIGEES IN THE MAKING.

A LOVELY negligee, decidedly expensive to buy, may be made at home for a comparatively small sum. For a garment of this kind it is not absolutely necessary to buy heavy georgette, one of the lighter, less expensive qualities should be quite satisfactory.

This negligee, as you will see from the picture, is cut kimono fashion—the material being folded across the width. This fold comes on the shoulders, so the right length of material must be allowed front and back for the negligee to be cut without piecing. No fullness is allowed anywhere. The back is plain, so are the fronts—they come just together. The sleeves are cut to elbow length.

No pattern should be necessary. Use the width of georgette—the selvedge on each side making the edge of each sleeve; then allow about eight inches on the fold for the width of the sleeves, and draw a line for the under part, making the right curve under the arm. Carry the seam line down to the bottom of the skirt, goring it out downwards.

There is a lining of China silk, and a lovely combination is to have the silk a rose pink, with georgette in an orchid shade. The trimming consists of three ruffles of georgette—each one measuring four or five inches.

These ruffles are cut on the straight of the material, and are hemmed top and bottom with as narrow a hem as can be made. Then there is an inch wide heading left at the top of each. Around the sleeve edges are two ruffles—one set on the edge and the other above it. A three inch ruffle is set around the neck—and just across the middle of the back it is much fuller than across the shoulders. Around the shoulder curves the ruffle is full enough to set well, and that is all.

Small single roses are set on at intervals where the gathering comes in the top ruffles, and a narrow string sash of georgette finishes it at the waist. Of course, there are all sorts of wonderful color combinations that one may use in making.

Another pretty negligee is made of albatross, in any preferred color, lined with white china silk. This can be cut from a plain waist pattern. It is cut full length, has shoulder seams, set in sleeves, and just meets down the front.

A rather deep shawl collar finishes the neck and comes to the waist line. There is one pocket set on the left side of the skirt, and both collar and pocket are embroidered.

Collar and pocket edges may be finished with the blanket stitch—using the long and short stitch—indeed the entire garment will be pretty with that finish.

Doris Blake's Answers to Love Problems

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

He Subdues Her.

"Dear Miss Blake: I wish you would give me your opinion of the following situation: John is 18 but most likely to be taken for 25, for his sensibility and manner. When in the company of his girl friend he talks of nothing but topics of the day and his work by which of course, I do not mean that he is a bore. He seems so bashful and shy she does not dare to say anything snappy for fear he would think she was a roughneck. But when in the company of other fellows and girls he seems much more familiar and personal with the latter than with the girl friend with whom he is much better acquainted. ANXIOUS."

I take it the company he is in has the happy faculty of bringing him out and that when his girl friend is alone with him she draws into a shell. A simple enough thing to understand with a bashful person. With a bit of schooling of herself the girl may make him quite as chatty and interesting during their hours.

Sauce for the Goose.

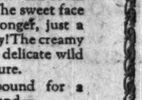
"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 21 and have been going with a fellow of 26 for two years. It is understood that we are to be married soon. He will not stop going out with other girls, but I must not dare to look at another fellow. What do you make of this? He says he is just going out for the sake of having a good time. We are always arguing on this point, so please advise us what to do, for he is willing to hear what you advise. PEGGY."

If he is just going out to have a good time, there is no reason, Peggy, why he should not allow you the same courtesy. And with that kind of a man you had better have all the fun you can right now, because he sounds as though he would be the type of husband who'd park his wife at home there to remain while he went off on pleasure bent.

Spoonful for a Penny Brings Quick Relief

Proves splendid laxative properties of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin by test

A SCIENTIFIC test has now proven what Dr. Caldwell of Monticello asserted many years ago, that constipation will slow you up fully 25 per cent. The test was made by Dr. Donaldson of Loma Linda upon four men in the prime of life who deliberately went without a bowel movement for four days. Within 48 hours the men had coated tongue and foul breath, cankers in the mouth, no appetite, restless sleep, indigestion, headache, depression, nervousness, cramps. The blood pressure was up 28 per cent. It is just this that Dr. Caldwell has preached to his patients in private and to the public through the printed word ever since he began the practice of his specialty, diseases of the stomach and bowels, back in 1875.



After observing for years the satisfactory effect of his prescription for constipation, he placed it in drug stores in 1892, a simple vegetable compound of Egyptian senna and pepsin with pleasant-tasting aromatics, now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. That was 30 years ago, and today over 10 million bottles are bought annually, the largest selling family laxative in the world. You will find it in any drug store you enter, a generous-size bottle costing you less than a cent a dose.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 545 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

Every member of the family from the infants to the grandparents can use it with safety. It is gentle and mild. The formula is on the package. Mrs. Roy Cook of Bellefontaine, O., has been giving it to her 5-months old baby, who now weighs 19 pounds; and Mr. J. B. Dawson of Brinson, Ga., declares it the best laxative his family has ever found. Try a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin for constipation or any of its symptoms. The results will delight you. And the cost is only one cent a dose.

My Nicest Compliment

What was the nicest compliment you ever received? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wistful tones, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

More than Beauty.

I had never seen Celeste. Ours was a correspondence friendship originated through our being exchange editors on college papers in states several hundred miles apart. Upon receiving her degree, Celeste came to our town in search of employment. I did what I could for her, locating her on the staff of our newspaper and taking her into our home. I thought nothing of what I had done until the following summer, when, accompanying her to her home in North Dakota, I received a happy surprise in the form of a letter her mother showed me. It was Celeste's reply to an inquiry from home asking what sort of a person I was, and read as follows:

"You ask, mother, if Helen is pretty. No, I hardly say that she is. But she has something which is to me more wonderful than beauty. She has personality—to a marked degree. Once you have known her you can never forget her. And then, too, mother she possesses that priceless gift—unselfishness. The more I study her the more I marvel at her. Her whole life is lived for others."

In itself, this may not seem such a compliment. But it impressed me indelibly because it was the frank and sincere comment to her mother of a girl who was with me so constantly that she had the opportunity to know my infirmities as well as my virtues.

H. A. L.

Good Enough for Him.

I am a widow with one son. Five years ago, while working to keep him in school, I met with an accident that proved to be a spinal injury, necessitating my being in hospital much of the time. Jim had to quit school in his junior year at the age of 17, not only to support himself, but an invalid mother. He began with a railroad company and has worked his way up steadily.

He never forgets to write a letter every day when he can't come to see me. Here is the beginning of one recently received, of which I am exceedingly proud:

"Dear mother: You are the most lovable person I ever did meet. You always think of the other fellow first and are always looking for the best way out in the long run, no matter if it suits or not. I have thought and thought there is no one like you. I thank you for the hint you gave me about the nurse who has her eye on me. I am not interested—all I want is you. E. W. M."

"Don't Envy Beauty—Use Pompeian"

To accentuate your own coloring or add a delicate charm you may never before have possessed—use the Pompeian Beauty Trio.

The Day Cream is a vanishing cream that softens the skin and prepares it for the rouge and powder. This cream really disappears and there remains but a barely perceptible coating, a protection against sun, wind, and dust.

The Beauty Powder is soft and smooth and of the finest possible texture. It goes on evenly and adheres so well that there is no reason to worry about glistening nose and cheek bones.

Pompeian Bloom is a rouge that is absolutely harmless and will neither crack nor crumble. You can match your complexion perfectly, for Pompeian Bloom comes in all desired shades: Dark, Medium, Light, and Orange Tint.

If you use these Pompeian preparations together for Instant Beauty, you will obtain the most natural effect, for great care has been taken that the colors blend naturally.

He seized her hands, and...

THEY had been boy and girl sweethearts—and then he had gone away, promising to come back for her when he had "made good," while she with tear-dimmed eyes had said she would wait for him.

At last he did come back, thinking of her as the same sweet slip of a girl—forgetful of the years between.

But the beauty of a girl is apt to fade. She too often forgets to care for her complexion, and soon loses youth's delicate bloom of girlhood. And his heart ached as he wondered how roughly time might have dealt with his little sweetheart of long ago. Then he saw her. He could scarcely believe his eyes! The sweet face was the same—a little stronger, just a bit wistful—but oh, so lovely! The creamy skin was quite unlined, the delicate wild rose flush held the same allure.

He stood there spellbound for a moment, seized her hands, and—

THE ART OF POWDERING

By MME. JEANNETTE

AS a rule, women give too little thought to the way they use powder. Perhaps one reason is that for so many years powder has been a necessary part of the toilette among practically all classes of women. Long before the present wide use of rouge and lip stick, it had become almost a mechanical habit to "dab" a little powder on the face.

This is why we often see such odd effects; at times, purplish or dead-white noses, or a broad, band of white crossing the chin and half way up the cheeks. Pure carelessness can be the only reason for this grotesque mockery of nature's loveliest gift—a beautiful complexion.

Powdering correctly is so simple if you will just use a little thought.

Be sure to select a shade of face powder that will tone in with your own coloring. Many a lovely face has been very nearly spoiled by flesh-colored powder on an olive skin, or the rachel shade used by a delicately tinted blonde.

Powder should be placed first upon the portions of the face that are normally whitest—brow, chin and nose—then a delicate coating brushed over the whole face. And above all be sure that you do powder your face all over. It is impossible to emphasize this too strongly, for one of the greatest crimes against appearance is that the work of powdering is so often left unfinished.

A woman is too apt to forget that, when her face is freshly washed, the skin on her temples and under her chin is the same color; and never by any possible chance does nature make the mistake of having the one several shades lighter or of a different texture than the other.

So be sure that these often-neglected outside edges are given the same attention that you give to nose and chin. Nature always blends, and it is by powdering correctly that you can best get this desired effect.

It is always wise to cover the face with a delicate coating of Pompeian Day Cream before powdering. This is a vanishing cream and should be spread on very softly with the tips of the fingers. The powder will go on much more smoothly and will remain far longer with this cream as a foundation.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Ever see anything LIKE the way young Mr. January slid in and out again? "Happy New Year!" hardly out of our mouths, and here it is almost Valentine's day! O, well—we managed to get in some good pictures last month, anyhow.

Remember "THE FLIRT"? (DO you remember "The Flirt"!) Of COURSE you do, and with great joy! Made from the fascinating story by Booth Tarkington that appeared in serial form, it lost nothing at all by screen adaptation—which is saying a lot. The story is woven in and about the home of a typical American family ruled over by a selfish younger sister, who is the great "I AM" and "I WILL" of the household till the gods get a little bored with her ax is and decide to take a hand in her affairs. Splendidly produced and acted photoplay.

EILEEN PERCY
Played the flirt of the Tarkington comedy.

"BACK HOME AND BROKE" was a good picture because Thomas Meighan et al. turned it into one. The story, by George Ade, was not the kind of story one would expect from that gifted pen. At least, some folks didn't care for it. Anyhow, the production stacked up as good, clean entertainment, and there are a lot of folks who will declare the author never wrote anything better.

"BROTHERS UNDER THE SKIN" was a grand tonic. One long laugh. Clever situations, lines, and acting. Good little idea behind the story, which had to do with the efficacy of cave man methods when used upon the modern married woman.

"SHADOWS"—Lon Chaney in the cinema version of Daniel Wilbur Steele's "Ching, Ching, Chinaman." Unique story, excellently acted, photographed, cast, and set. It held suspense and much real human interest. Mr. Chaney, who can slide like an eel from one characterization to another, had the part of a frail, mysterious little Chinese laundryman.

RICHARD BARTHELMESS
Starred in "Fury."

"SURE FIRE FLINT" was described at the time of its review as "a comedy drama without too much drama." Johnny Hines headed a gay cast who went through a series of performances reminiscent of the dreams of a rarebit fiend. You COULDN'T take the film seriously. In fact, you really never guessed what it was all about. But it DID entertain you. So—step to the head of the class, "SURE FIRE FLINT"!

"PAWN TICKET 210" was an improbable but homey and touching little program offering starring Shirley Mason. A picture the grownups and children could enjoy together.

"FURY" starred Richard Barthelmess, and managed to get away from the conventional "love stuff" the male head of the family always growls about as he gets into his shoes to take the family to the nightly movie show. A rather brutal story—in fact, QUITE a brutal story—but one that held the interest. And when

Sunday Surplus and Weekday Stint in Music Make New Hall Needed

By Edward Moore.

SHOULD your desires turn you in the direction of music today, you will find about as many varieties of ballads, songs, and snatches as were ever celebrated by Nanki-Poo. It will be an embarrassment of riches. Start at the Auditorium, and you will find Titta Ruffo, a greatly applauded baritone in the days when he was a member of the Chicago Opera. He will sing arias from the Italian segment of operas, and, in the light of past concert performances, presumably a vast category of encores. With him on the program will be Yvonne D'Arle, soprano, and Fritz Renk, violinist.

Go around the corner to the Studebaker, and you will find the most famous of all cellists, Pablo Casals. A great if somewhat ascetic artist he, with a fondness for ancient concertos and sonatas, also unaccompanied Bach suites, and a lesser admixture of brief tunes, all of which he plays most superbly.

Or farther down Boul Mich, at Orchestra hall, you will confront a mother and daughter jointly and severally engaged in the art of song. They are Louise Homer, contralto, and Louise Homer Stires, soprano, who will combine their voices in a duet from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" and several nonoperatic works, and then appear separately in a variety of recital numbers.

ODA SLOBODSKAJA,
Soprano, appearing with Ukrainian chorus tonight.

Or, if you care to wait until evening, you can do no better than to come back to the Auditorium and hear the Ukrainian chorus, just back from Mexico, where they would seem to have set the country ablaze with something else than revolution. They sing folksongs of their own land, and, though their words must remain in obscurity only partially pierced by a libretto translation, their music is ingratiatingly perfect. They have Oda Slobodskaja with them, a soprano who is no longer merely a soloist, but is listed as a joint attraction. She will sing a large collection of arias, one from Glinka's "Russian and Ludmilla," another from Tschaikowsky's "Oprichnik," then Gluck's "Divinités du Styx" and excerpts from "Tosca" and "Le Cid," not to mention songs by Dargomijsky, Glazounoff, and Beethoven.

What with one thing and another, it ought to be a full day. There will be other events than those that have just been noted. Too many are concentrated into today and too few are spread through the week. All of which indicates that the great need of Chicago at present, if it would continue to be a music center, is not more music but a first class concert hall of medium dimensions that can be devoted solely to musical events. From all appearances it would probably be kept busy twice a day six days in the week.

New Singers in Russ Opera.

Once again the time approaches to get out the pronouncing biographical dictionary and indulge in a bit of earnest research therein. The Russian Grand Opera company is headed this way. In another two weeks the Auditorium will be full of music and combinations of consonants. Strangely enough, however, they will sound much softer and less angular than they look.

Four newcomers are listed in this year's roster of artists, in addition to last season's earnest group, with Feodor Chaliapin as a further cause to buy tickets. One is Nina Gusieva, a dramatic soprano, who was with the company in its romantic tour through the orient, left it in Java, and rejoined it in this country last October.

Two more waited until the company reached America before making their operatic debuts. Ivan Dneproff, tenor, was a lieutenant of Cossacks during the war, and made his first appearance in opera last fall in Baltimore. Clara Pasvolskaya was born in Russia, but her family came to the United

Joining the Chorus That Sings in Praise of the Cowl Juliet

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Perhaps Julia Marlowe at 20 was a better Juliet than Jane Cowl at 38. But we'll wager she was no more beautiful to look upon nor more impassioned or more real. She may have had a lovelier voice and a finer feeling for spoken verse. As we remember her, not at 30, but later, she did have. But she was neither so trim of figure nor so buoyantly youthful as Miss Cowl. And we do not recall that she made us feel the tragedy as keenly.

Therefore we are willing to join the other cheer leaders and insist that the Cowl Juliet is the greatest Juliet of this generation. Which means less than it should mean, seeing there have been no other great Juliets during the last quarter century. Neither Maude Adams, Eleanor Robson, nor Ethel Barrymore could qualify in that class. And Miss Marlowe's Capulet daughter was at its loveliest more than twenty-five years ago.

JANE COWL.
[White Photo.]

It was to be expected that the Selwyns, crafty showmen that they are, would take advantage of the Hopkins-Barrymore Juliet experiment of some weeks ago. And they did. All the things the Barrymore production was not this production is. Where the Hopkins players were gloomy and depressed the Cowlites are lively and hopeful. Where the Barrymore actors labored a little consciously for a heavy poetic beauty in reading, the Cowl players are content to speak the lines trippingly from the tongue.

Here we have "Romeo and Juliet" played with speed and in the spirit of melodrama, and it is a little startling to discover how much the change helps the play. Coupled with the appeal of a youthful cast, it intensifies the romance and holds the interest in the story rather than in the characters.

Miss Cowl's scenes are of an even excellence. She is lovely in the first meeting with Romeo, an eager and impetuous youth, as Rollo Peters plays him. The setting here is literally "a hall in Capulet's house," an entrance hall in place of the usual ballroom. Hence, with the minuet danced off stage, the meeting of the lovers is given an effective touch of privacy when they come upon each other accidentally near the door.

For a moment they are as flustered as youngsters might be at the crisis of an evening's flirtation. And then this daring Romeo kisses his Juliet full upon the mouth twice before she can protest, and the romance is definitely motivated.

The balcony scene is most eloquently read by both Miss Cowl and Mr Peters. For the first time in our Shakespearean playgoing we felt that these young people were actually involved in this adventure, and not mere players reciting beautiful lines.

The potion scene the actress plays quite frankly for its theatrical value. Here her generous training in emotional drama is of vast help to her, and she pictures vividly the tortured imaginings of the unhappy girl, emoting with gusto and yet with good restraint. And finally the tomb scene, a striking picture, with the vault gates high at back and a flight of stone steps leading down to the level on which the catafalque rests, is most feelingly played.

A satisfying production in every way. The Mercutio of Dennis King is a fiery young Italian, who battles with Tybalt, another wild lad, as enthusiastically and as skillfully as Doug Fairbanks might have done. Jessie Ralph has scored as the nurse and Robert Ayrton is the friar.

They have taken the "bridge of thighs" out of the Winter Garden gaining thereby the use of those orchestra seats across the backs of which the runway was built the entire length of the orchestra floor. Also they have removed the ash jars from the backs of the seats and notified the customers that there will be no smoking.

In other words, they have made the Paging the Playwrights: Where Are All the Plays?

By Sheppard Butler.

WHERE are the playwrights? Fine acting surrounds us—never more of it to be had for the asking in the American theater—but the supply of brilliant dramas seems strangely meager and uncertain. Great names of the stage appear briefly in the Masdas and flicker out, chiefly because the plays they herald will not do. Experiment and makeshift everywhere. In some instances, failure; in others, just a dogged determination to make the best of it.

Mr. Miller, Miss Chatterton, Miss Bainter, Miss Keane, Miss O'Neil give brief trials to plays and reject them as unsuitable. Miss Barrymore ponders her short-lived Juliet, the most ill-advised undertaking of her career. Mr. Skinner revives something out of the past; so did Mr. Warfield before he found what appears to be a happy refuge in Shakespeare. John Barrymore and Miss Cowl turn, like Warfield, to the Bard for solace. Miss Rambeau prepares to abandon the absurdities of "The Goldfish," which was the best thing she could find. Miss Ferguson's play is mediocre and gloomy, Miss Frederick's hopelessly old-fashioned, and Miss Starr's—well, "staged by David Belasco" is the most important thing about "Shore Leave."

ETHEL WILSON
In "The Last Warning," coming tomorrow to the Blackstone.
[Raymor Photo.]

Now comes Miss George (Mrs. William A. Brady), and Mr. Brady resorts to his old trick of berating the critics because they liked her play only moderately. No doubt Mr. Brady knows best, but at least there is difference of opinion. And Mrs. Fiske . . .

It is a great pity that Mrs. Fiske has not something better. "The Dice of the Gods" is nearly all it should not be. It rambles, and fritters itself away on inconsequential incident. It repels interest instead of attracting it. But its central character is keenly etched, and, for sheer fascination of glittering artistry, there are few things in the current theater to be compared with Mrs. Fiske's playing of the part. Here is the true magic of marvelous acting, authentic, vivid, and real. For that, and that alone, is this sordid tale of a morphine addict worth while.

Oscar Wilde at Thirty-first and Indiana.

A new "little theater" was born in Chicago last week, and the venture seems as sincere and honest as it is interesting. At the Avenue Theater, Indiana avenue and Thirty-first street, a company of colored players has been installed, and here under the guidance of Raymond O'Neil, a director of wide experience, performances will be given nightly as long as public interest sustains them. The enterprise is to be conducted on a straightforward commercial basis; what marks it as unusual is the choice of plays to be presented. The current bill is devoted chiefly to Oscar Wilde's "Salome." Next week Molière's "Les Fourberies de Scapin" will be given. Later will come "Everyman," some Shakespeare, and other things.

LUELLA GEAR
the solemn and quizzical cutup of "Elsie," at the Illinois.
[Moffett Photo.]

The press agent said it was to be a "jazz Salome." I found it anything but that. In a dimlit setting of fine simplicity and no little beauty, these players give a thoughtful and imaginative performance. There is reticence in it, and intelligent feeling, both for the poetry and the horror of the tale.

The Salome is an opulent beauty named Evelyn Preer. She understands the denotement of passion, and, if she sometimes misses a nuance or mangles her words, there is nevertheless more than a hint of smouldering fire in her acting. Her dance of the veils, sultry rather than abandoned, is done to a barbaric accompaniment of tambourines and tom-toms—a weirdly exotic effect. An impressive Herod is present in the person of Sidney Kirk-

A Special Showing of The New Nash Six Touring Model

Here's the car that proved itself one of the real attractions of the Motor Show.

All this week we are giving it a special exhibition so that you may enjoy a more satisfactory opportunity to examine this new Nash model and its remarkable features.

Every condition of travel has been fully anticipated with a series of truly exceptional improvements.

There's a new and wonderful readjustment of motor and carburetor, imparting an enhanced smoothness and power responsiveness that have hitherto been considered unattainable.

There's a resulting increase in mileage per gallon of fuel that places this car almost on a par with a "Four" in economy.

And there's a new frame cross-member construction that bulwarks the structure against the most severe stress. Come in and see these and a host of further refinements.

The New Plays

First Aid for First Nighters on Attractions Scheduled for the Coming Weeks in the Theaters.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT.

"The Last Warning" (Blackstone)—Another of the mystery plays and, they say, one of the best. It is the work of Thomas F. Fallon and is based on "The House of Fear," a novel by Wadsworth Camp, which was widely read when it appeared several years ago. There's murder in it, and many hair-raising excitements. The special company organized to Act it in Chicago includes Edward H. Robins, once of the College theater on the north side; Charles Angelo, Harry Benham, Ann Winslow, Ethel Wilson, and Ruby Blackburn.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"The Awful Truth" (Powers', Feb. 19)—Miss Ina Claire with Bruce McRae and others in a comedy by Arthur Richman.

"Peter Weston" (Harris, Feb. 25)—Frank Keenan in the first important showing of a new play by Frank Dazey. Miss Frances Anderson will have the leading feminine rôle.

"The Rear Car" (Cort, Feb. 25)—More mystery melodrama. Edward E. Rose is the author in this instance, and Taylor Holmes will be the chief player.

"Whispering Wires" (Playhouse, probably Feb. 26)—Still more mystery. Something by Kate L. McLaurin from a story by Henry Leverage.

"Light Wines and Beer" (Woods, March 11)—A comedy by Aaron Hoffman, dealing with prohibition, and known on the Pacific coast as "Now and Then." Joseph Cawthorn will be in it.

"The World We Live In" (Auditorium, March 19)—A play at once fantastic and philosophical by the brothers Capek of Czecho-Slovakia. Most of the characters are insects.

"R. U. R." (Cort)—A satirical melodrama by Karel Capek, one of the brothers aforesaid, dealing with a race of automatons. To arrive at the Cort, probably, when "The Rear Car" departs.

A Dash in Thought!

(DASH 1)—YOU—reading this ad may live 150 miles away from Chicago, yet contemplate a visit to Chicago shortly, and, of course, to the theatre you will go.

(DASH 2)—An institution of comedy — that's BARNEY BERNARD and ALEXANDER CARR in "PARTNERS AGAIN" now playing before remarkable audiences at the SELWYN THEATRE, Lake and Dearborn Streets. Phone Central 3404.

(DASH 3)—TRY THE "SS" (meaning Selwyn Service), Mr. and Mrs. Out-of-Towner. Write a letter TONIGHT from your home town, address it to the Manager, Selwyn Theatre, specify the performance of "PARTNERS AGAIN" you desire to attend, the number of tickets, and the order will be delivered to your room at the hotel you are stopping at.

(DASH 4)—When Montague Glass and Jules Eckert Goodman gave the stage the Potash and Perlmutter series (of these the greatest is "PARTNERS AGAIN") they did more to drive "grouches" into oblivion than any hitherto comedy sensation.

(DASH 5)—A party of 34 Waukegan playgoers were made happy and comfortable last Wednesday night at the Selwyn; the Remy Electric Co. of Anderson, Ind., got service at the SELWYN THEATRE that proved the worth of the "SS". Ask Leon C. Danforth, manager City Salesrooms for Sprague-Warner Co., about Selwyn Service.

(DASH 6)—Co-operation of the PUBLIC is going to help further perfection of the "SS". Regardless of perfection of service, there'll be some kickers. That's life. However, let every kicker get in touch with the Manager of the Selwyn Theatre, explain the kick either by letter or by a personal visit; the result will prove the SELWYN THEATRE wants the WORLD to know that CHICAGO HOSPITALITY—the greatest trademark of our GREAT CITY—prevails at the Selwyn Theatre.

patrick, an actor with a magnificently resonous voice, and Jokanaan is played with somber dignity by Solomon Bruce, who makes the character in appearance more of a madman than a prophet.

The audience, mostly of the same race as the players, was inclined, when I was there, to titter at the wrong moments, but as the tragedy advanced they caught something of its revolting significance and sat, apparently, shashed. They laughed gleefully, however, at the comedy which served as a curtain-raiser—something about an improvident family and a talking machine, with Miss Preer playing a sullen slattern wench in a ramshackle rocking chair. As for me, I liked best the Negro "spirituals," some happy and some plaintive, which a silver-voiced quartet sang in the intervals. These are worth a trip across town to hear.

Why Is a Torch Bearer?

This story may be apocryphal, but it's funny if you have a flair for nonsense. When "The Torch Bearers" was in Philadelphia Miss Allison Skipworth, a person of dignity, was invited to address the members of the Philadelphia Forum. For some reason (perhaps because otherwise there would be no story) Fred Allen, the monologist, was there to introduce her. Not having seen the play, but feeling that something should be told about it, Allen described the piece, to Miss Skipworth's profound horror, as follows:

"'The Torch Bearers' is a translation from the language of ancient Gaul, going back to B. C.—even further back, perhaps to A. It begins by showing a retired female impersonator, an Italian, who has two daughters, Marie and Florence. One day he has a quarrel with Marie, kills her, and leaves Italy without touching Florence. Coming to America and wishing to become a citizen, he goes into a cigar store in Hoboken, buys a package of Bull Durham, and takes out his first papers.

"The next act occurs during civil war times, and the man, having no union suit, is forced to enter the confederate army. There he makes a large fortune in confederate money, which was the mark of its day, selling carved knapsacks to round shouldered soldiers. He then invents the pretzel and is promptly arrested, the government claiming he made the first crooked dough in this country.

"We are taken later to Dallas, Tex., where, the war being over, the old man has been made a lamplighter. But, as the years pass, he becomes so bent with age that he can no longer reach the wicks. So his son, also an inventor, comes to the rescue by producing a longer pole by which the lamps may be lit.

"The last act is in modern times and Dallas wishes to be illuminated in the most up to date fashion. So the old man's inventive son crosses carrier pigeons with lightning bugs and the results fly over Dallas at night, making the city as bright as day. They are known as the torchbearers."

Gossip of Plays and Players.

Frank Craven and "The First Year" will remain at the Woods but five weeks longer, terminating their Chicago engagement on March 10 and setting out thereafter for a tour of the middle west. This gives the play eighteen weeks in Chicago, as against eighty-seven in New York. When it came, it was expected that it would play out the season, or most of it, here.

That it is not good for a longer stay is, indeed, a curious thing, for it is a fine comedy, with, one would think, an almost universal appeal. But you never can tell about the cities. "Thank-U," which didn't even approach the success of "The First Year" in the east, fared better, much better, than Craven's play in Chicago. A fundamental difference in taste, perhaps.

Next at the Woods, they say, will be a comedy by Aaron Hoffman, now being acted on the Pacific coast under the name of "Now and Then," but to be known in this part of the world by the more specific title, "Light Wines and Beer." It has to do, as you may suspect, with prohibition, and will have Joseph Cawthorn, the comedian, in its leading rôle.

Meanwhile, Mr. Craven joyfully announces that, if nothing unforeseen happens, this will be his last season on the stage. Joyfully, because, unlike most of his fellow Thespians, he does not like to act. He does, however, like to write plays and stage them, and to this he proposes to devote himself when he gets through appearing in "The First Year." He has made resolutions to retire before, but prosperity and insistent managers have detained him.

A novel method of staging a production will be used when the Czechoslovakian "insect comedy," "The World We Live In," is brought to the Auditorium in March. Only about fifteen principals will be brought from the company which has been presenting the play in New York. The rest of the cast (said by the veracious press agent to number more than 500) will be recruited here from the membership of various social, civic, and dramatic organizations which, it is hoped, will thus find a special interest in the drama and its prosperity. Four weeks of rehearsals will be required before the Chicago performances are ready.

"The Cat and the Canary" reached its 200th Chicago performance at the Princess last night. Before it departs it will have easily established the long run record for the 1922-'23 season outside of New York.

Bert French, junior member of the firm which produced "The Torch Bearers," was in Chicago last week administering some quickening touches to the performance of "Elsie" at the Illinois. There are grave suspicions that the latter opus may turn out a success. French makes known his intention of producing in the spring a serious play called "No Man's Wife" and later a comedy elaborated from the vaudeville skit known as "The Show Off." Both are by George Kelly, who wrote "The Torch Bearers" and who also has a musical comedy up his sleeve.

A. H. Woods, who bought the Columbia recently, thinks it would be a good plan to change its name to the Adelphi. When he takes over its operation, perhaps in May, he will, according to report, put into effect a "popular price" régime similar to that which obtained years ago at McVicker's. Times have changed, however, and two dollars, instead of one, will be the top figure.

Burton Holmes will begin his Chicago series of travelogues for the current year at Orchestra hall on Friday evening of next week. Five lectures will be given on successive Friday evenings and Saturday afternoons, all dealing with Asia.

Definite plans are under way in New York for the restoration of Weber and Fields to their old time status as proprietors of a music hall. Financial backing for the venture is assured and a site is being sought for a building in which will be included a theater, a restaurant, and a dancing floor. The entertainments to be presented will be similar to those which made the pair famous a generation or more ago.

Thompson Buchanan's "The Sporting Thing to Do," in which Miss Emily Stevens was to have been starred, has been withdrawn in the east, and producer and playwright are at loggerheads as to whose fault it is.

The tireless Theater guild will submit its production of "Peer Gynt" in New York tomorrow night, with Joseph Schildkraut in the title rôle and Lilibil Ibsen, a descendant of the author, in the part of Anitra.

Miss Nancy Welford, prominently concerned with the late lamented "Orange Blossoms," will go soon into the leading rôle of "Cinders," another musical comedy to be staged by the same producer.

Gallagher and Shean, known hereabouts as a vaudeville team, but persons of high prestige since they became adjuncts of the current "Follies," are to be starred by George White in a musical play. It will be called "Gallagher and Shean."

THE TRIANGLE IN "THE TWIST"

Here are the three who have all the trouble in the mixup called "The Twist," now to be observed at the La Salle. Reading in the conventional manner from left to right they are Hale Hamilton, who plays the lover; Miss Ann Andrews, who impersonates the wife, and Arthur Byron, who breezes along cheerfully as the husband. The piece starts as a tragedy, proceeds as an emotional drama, and winds up as a farce comedy. Queerest play you ever saw, that way. [H. A. Atwell Photo.]

Slams of Life

VOX POPULI, VOX DEI.

I love to ride the L or bus
And hear our citizens discuss
The weighty matters of the state,
The peccadilloes of the great.

Events abroad, events at home,
Each doughty democratic dome
Exuding isolated facts
With no apparent parallax.

Waddye thing o' them there French?
I thing they're nuts.
Well, mebbe them Germans won't pay, huh?
Mebbe that's it.
Y'can't tell sometimes.
I'll say y'can't.
Yu said somep'in that time.
I'll say I did.

2d Verse.

And oh it thrills this timid heart
To mingle in the merry mart
And fold a small, attentive ear
Around the wisdom I can hear,
Ignoring those who would deride
The gems I hear on every side,
Who murmur to themselves "How odd
The voice of the people is the voice of God."

Waddye think o' that there tariff?
I think it's nuts,

Joining the Big Chorus in Praise of Cowl's Juliet

famous music hall over into a regular theater, with new upholstery and thick carpets, and will hereafter produce there a combination of musical comedy revue in place of the gaudier spectacles that came to be known as "typical Winter Garden shows."

The first one is called "The Dancing Girl." Its scenes are a little more closely knit than were those in the former type of play, but otherwise there is little difference. This is a better and cleaner show than the garden has had in some time, however. It serves to introduce a Spanish dancer named Trini to New York. She is pretty, talks English with one of those accents usually described as piquant, and dances gracefully. She is a castanet virtuoso, and when she elects to stamp out the rhythm of a tune with her heels she is convincingly expert. But we suspect Spain is full of dancers as gifted as she.

The plot of "The Dancing Girl" revolves about Trini, picking her up in the steerage of an ocean liner, where she entertains a slumming party from the first cabin, and carrying her through many adventures in New York before she is married to the handsome juvenile.

The company includes Tom Burke, an excellent Irish tenor, recently devoted to concert work; the Doners, Kittie, Ted and Rose, and Benny Leonard, the lightweight champion, who shadow boxes, skips the rope, and spars with an obliging trainer.

Russian in Atmosphere.

The Russian troupers of the Moscow Art theater are continuing to thrill their countrymen and ours at the Fifty-ninth Street theater. This week they are presenting the second of their Tchekoff dramas, "The Three Sisters," and though it is practically devoid of action and heavily Russian in atmosphere, the attendance is huge and the enthusiasm stirring.

Their mastery of detail, their fine ensembles, still excite wonder and admiration. They have fallen down a bit on the scenic side, however. Many of their exteriors are shabby, and there is no art in the arrangement of several of the sets, which has pained the wildest of their supporters.

Now Morris Gest, whom the Russians have saved from bankruptcy, is talking of building an art theater in New York that shall follow in a general way the Moscow scheme—with one large auditorium and several smaller studios for the use of students. Otto Kahn is interested, as he has been in several similar enterprises, and makes the prediction that work will be started on the building before next fall.

You All Know Her.

Another of those grim, middle class domestic tragedies is called "A Square Peg," and Guthrie McClintic has produced it in the hope, evidently, of disproving the oft proved fact that American playgoers do not enjoy having their feelings harrowed or their common faults exposed.

This play, written by the Lewis Beach who did a gripping one acter called "The Clod" some years back, reveals the havoc wrought in one home by the terrifying efficiency of a wife and mother, one of those highly capable female executives born, the author submits, a generation before her time.

She runs her husband, her children, her home, her spinster sister, her church guild, and a committee devoted to the welfare of the Y. W. C. A. So dominant is she that she makes all the decisions for all the family, until each member of it is sapped of his courage and initiative and becomes practically helpless to act for himself. Before she is through she drives her poor husband to the embezzlement of funds with which he hopes to escape her, her nerve shattered daughter to an elopement with a married man, and her son to join the navy in his desperate search for a peaceful home.

The embezzling father is quite happy about going to jail, and when his too efficient wife manages to save him that disgrace he shoots himself through the heart rather than go on living under her domineering influence.

Beverly Sitgreaves, who has been away from Broadway for some time, plays the efficient one with rare good judgment, making her so credible a human that at least half the audience will recognize her as friend or relative. In the cast with her William B. Mack gives an excellent performance as the husband, and Leona Hogarth and Walter Abel are good as the children.

Not So Good.

A new musical play is "Lady Butterfly," which has succeeded "The Bunch and Judy" at the Globe. Not so good, this one, though Ned Wayburn has put considerable spirit into the dances and there is a nice backing of scenery. At the conclusion of the first act, for example, the audience is furnished the sensation of being aboard a ship that slowly swings away from the dock at Havre and leaves a gradually receding shore line far behind.

This is the play that was to bring James T. Powers back to the stage. Years ago it was a Mark Swan farce called "Somebody's Luggage," and relates the adventure of the comedian, who passes himself off as an expected heir and bridegroom from Australia. Powers rehearsed it, but decided after trying it out of town that life would be a lot sweeter for him if he continued in retirement. Inasmuch as James is 61 we are inclined to consider his decision wise.

He helped with the book, however, and it may be that he wrote the one that goes: "Are you an entomologist?" "No, I'm a Baptist." It's in, anyway. Also the one about the maid whose love affairs have been "mostly plutonic." Marjorie Gateson is the prima donna and Maude Eburne prominent in the fun.

(Copyright: 1923: By The Chicago Tribune.)

TWO GENERATIONS IN SONG

Mother and daughter combining their voices in the art of song is the unusual happening that will be presented at Orchestra hall this afternoon. Louise Homer is a famous contralto in opera and concert, and in this program she will be joined by her soprano daughter, Louise Homer Stires. The picture represents them in reverse order. Vaudeville Wit

RIALTO.

Courtney and Graham:

"Where is your uncle?"

"He died just before Christmas."

"You must have missed his presents."

"I'm writing a book on Niagara Falls."

"That's a funny place to write a book."

"Our Sunday dinner cost us a dollar for five of us. That's economy, isn't it?"

"I've got you beat. Ours cost only 25 cents for five of us."

"How do you manage it?"

"We take a trolley ride out to my mother-in-law's for dinner."

"I don't know what I'm going to make of that son of mine."

"Perhaps your son hasn't found himself yet. Isn't he gifted in any way?"

"Gifted? I should say he is. Everything he's got was given to him."

"This watch will last a lifetime."

"Nonsense—it is plain to see that its hours are numbered."

"We should love our enemies."

"But suppose we haven't any?"

"O, it's easy to make a few."

"Do you see any change in me?"

"No, why?"

"I've just swallowed a penny."

"It's a wise child who knows its own father."

"Or it's own mother, too, in these days of rouge, short skirts, and bobbed hair."

"Did you enjoy the dinner you ate at my house last night?"

"Why, bless you, old man, I hope never to have a worse one."

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

"Bal Poudre" to Close Season on Shrove Tuesday

By Mme. X.

THERE comes Lent just ahead of us! The old fashioned observance of the season of fasting and prayer is a thing of the past. Ash Wednesday, nevertheless, ushers in a definite period, a forty days in which a more serious tone prevails even among the most frivolous and light minded. The fathers of the early church were a wise lot. They established this time of penance and self-denial at that moment of the year when it was most hygienically desirable.

During the winter months it is the tendency of most of the well to do of that division of the human race that lives north of the equator to eat much and exercise little. Lent comes just in time to give the tired organs a rest, and in so doing to restore the soul to better health. This contributes to establish the equilibrium between soul and body which the origin of this forty day fast made so manifest.

The final festivity of the social season of 1922-'23 will be the "Bal Poudré" at the Congress hotel in the gold ballroom. This is an affair that the Alliance Française is getting up for Shrove Tuesday, a day that falls this year on Feb. 13. A powdered ball is as French an entertainment as you can give. It is reminiscent of the times before the French revolution when the great ladies of the courts of the Louis' always appeared at court and other social functions with their high piled coiffures powdered white and richly hung with jeweled chains or adorned with chic little wreathes. The powdered heads were the insignia of the married. The unmarried women wore their hair "au naturelle."

Promoting the Ball.

A long list of chairmen, patronesses, and committees is promoting the ball. Mrs. Milan H. Hulbert and the French consul, A. Barthelemy, are general chairmen. Mrs. William Stanton Monroe is vice chairman. Charles L. Hutchinson is treasurer. Mrs. Walter Brewster and Mrs. Allen Haines are in charge of the music. Mrs. E. A. Leight, Mrs. John H. Winterbotham, Mrs. Francis M. Taber, Mrs. William Mitchell Blair, Miss Clara Laughlin, Ralph Clarkson, Evan Evans, Mrs. Potter Palmer, Mrs. John A. Carpenter, Mrs. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. George W. Dixon, Mrs. Roy Dickie, and Mrs. Marvin Miner Jr. all head committees which will manage different parts of the ball.

There will be committees for hospitality, publicity, débutantes, pageant, floor, patronesses, decorations, box, and table reservations, program, advertising, and distribution of unused tickets to crippled soldiers, while, testifying to the growing popularity of the Chinese game Mah Jongg, there will be a committee to arrange for games of this latest comer in the field of parlor games.

Proceeds from the sale of tickets for the ball will go to the many activities of the Alliance Française. The alliance is constantly asked to help and to find work for young men and women who have come from France. They do this without any charge. It also arranges free lectures in Fullerton hall in the Art institute for every Saturday from November to April, lectures which are well attended. Many instances could be given of financial assistance afforded to people as worthy as they are needy. The alliance paid for the restoration of the destroyed water system of the little town of Pagny-Sur-Moselle. In short, its benefactions are many and various and not covered by the moderate annual dues of its members. Its larger work of promoting friendship between the two great republics is also valuable. Better understanding is the only cure for the many international troubles of the day.

Memorial of Our Golden Age.

Last Wednesday at the Chicago Woman's clubrooms there was a gathering of men and women interested in making permanent and a part of the new Chicago the Fine Arts building in Jackson park, which is the last remaining monument and memorial of Chicago's golden age, the time when the great World's Fair, the Columbian exposition, rose like a vision of beauty from the lawns and lagoons of Jackson park and faded almost as quickly as the mists of daybreak. This building, the work of one of our few real geniuses, the late Charles Atwood, is by most connoisseurs considered the second most beautiful classic building in the world, the first being the Parthenon at Athens. It was built in a much more solid and enduring way than any other of the World's Fair structures and today is in a state which warrants continued preservation.

It is proposed by those advocating its renovation and restoration that it be used as a shrine of art, a temple wherein all the arts may find a home and live side by side, by the arts to be so enshrined to be music, drama, and anything pertaining to the industrial arts. It is suggested that at least a part of the building could be devoted to a school of industrial arts. Also the museum could be used as an annex to the Art institute which might keep there its great collection of plaster reproductions of ancient sculptures and architectural carvings which now occupy Blackstone hall and which are so valuable to the students there but which take up much valuable space. The Art institute is only a ten minutes' train trip from the Fine Arts building in Jackson park, so it is quite accessible as an annex.

Strange Road to Loyalty.

But the chief thing to be considered now is how best to arouse public sentiment to a realization of the danger that threatens the existence of a monument that is not merely a Chicago possession but also is a national treasure of which Chicago is merely the fortunate custodian. In the records of the great war it will not be the manner of fighting the battles that were won or lost that will be emphasized; it will be the burning of the library at Louvain, the destruction of town hall of Lisle, the irreparable damage to the cathedral at Reims that will arouse most censure and condemnation in those who come after us. Those were claimed to be war measures. This proposed vandalism in Chicago is to be perpetrated by supposedly loyal Chicagoans. A strange road to loyalty it is to destroy the second most beautiful building in the world! May some glimmering of realization of what they are planning to do hold the hands of the south park board.

It is thirty years since the World's Fair and the eyes of many of those who saw that transcendant vision of beauty are growing dim. A whole generation has passed off the stage since then. When the last man or woman dies who visited the Columbian exposition, if the Fine Arts building be razed, then indeed will the fair be dead and buried, for no pictures, no descriptions of it can give any adequate idea of what it was. If the people who come after have this beautiful temple before their eyes it will keep alive the knowledge of our great past, a knowledge that will serve as an inspiration for our future.

Among those present at Wednesday's meeting were Charles H. Wacker, head of the City Beautiful Plan Commission; Mrs. Richard Ogiesby, Lorado Taft, Miss Harriet Monroe, Mrs. Albion Headburg, Alexander Revell, Dr. Julia Holmes Smith, and Oliver Dennett Grover.

Apropos of matters artistic, there is one of the most striking and worthwhile exhibits now on at the Art institute that Chicago has had in many a moon. This is the collection of twenty-one statues and twenty drawings by Auguste Rodin, the celebrated French sculptor, one of the great geniuses of our time—in fact, it is safe to call him one of the great of all time. It is being shown in the Arts club room on the second floor and is brought here by the initiative and energy of Mrs. John A. Carpenter, president of the club, and by Miss Alice Roullier, chairman of the exhibit committee. It is a collection that every one should visit.

Interesting and notable people come wandering through Chicago all the time. Last week Sir Paul and Lady Dukes were here. It is not his title (given him by the British government for his work in the secret service in Russia) that makes him and his wife attractive. It is their unusual personalities. Both are striking, both outwardly and inwardly.

They are disciples of a cult that believes in making the body as fine a temple for the soul as is possible. The Puritans gave their descendants a profound distrust of this doctrine. The Greeks carried the belief in it to its highest expression. The Dukes are interesting illustrations. Both are supple, erect in carriage, and give the impression of perfect muscular control.

Lady Dukes, who was Mrs. Ogden Mills and a daughter of the Mrs. Rutherford who was William K. Vanderbilt's second wife, is tall, slender, and of rich coloring. I was misinformed as to the hue of her hair, which is black—a good, unmistakable black—not red, as we announced last Sunday. It is bobbed and worn close to her head, with an Assyrian curl on each side covering her ears. Her features are clear cut and aquiline. Her rather Byzantine eyes fairly shine out with a piercing glance that sees everything. She is distinctly exotic and sophisticated in type, and we Chicagoites are so simple and obvious!

Drives as He Flies.

Another stranger who comes clothed with an inherited mantle of fame is Capt. d'Annunzio, son of the famous Italian poet, aviator, and one time disturber of the peace of the Adriatic. The son resembles somewhat his illustrious parent in the cast of his distinctly Latin features. They are clear cut, decisive, and not unlike the bronze busts of some of the Roman emperors in the Vatican or at the museum in Naples. His expression is cold and his manner unsmiling and quiet.

He is here to promote the introduction into this country of an Italian automobile. He is often seen on Michigan avenue skimming up and down the crowded way in his low swung, rakish machine. He drives as he flies, swiftly and straight.

The marchioness of Donegall and her son, the marquess, arrived in Chicago last Thursday for a ten days' stay. He is young and fond of sports. The marquisate is an Irish title. They are being much entertained here, as they brought letters to several prominent people in Chicago.

Brings His Own Chef.

The benefit for Association house, which will be Chaliapin's debut here in "Boris Godenow," with the Russian opera company, is making great progress. The young women interested in the affair are ever "on their job." Mrs. Edward L. Ryerson Jr. and Mrs. Donald MacPherson went to see the famous Russian baritone and had tea with him in his rooms at the Sovereign hotel. Although he has been (wrongly) accused of being a bolshevik, he does not mind staying at a hotel called the Sovereign. He does so because it has apartments with kitchenettes, and the great Chaliapin doesn't like our unsophisticated cooking, so he always travels with his own chef, Nikolai. Nikolai is as short as his master is tall, and the two are as striking as ever were Don Quixote and Sancho Panza.

The renowned impersonator of the mad Boris was much interested in his visitors and the charity for which they were working, and promised he would sing Boris as never before. At the tea party the agile and diminutive Nikolai served real Russian tea in glasses. Almost always when he goes out Chaliapin wears knickerbockers and a high fur cap. When he practices in his rooms his great voice booms out, and every one in the hotel stops to listen. The date for the benefit is Tuesday evening, Feb. 20, the second night of the engagement of the Russian opera troupe here.

Long Before Summer.

On last Wednesday at a luncheon at the Arts club the first steps were taken in the formation of a committee composed principally of Lake Foresters to back up Ravinia opera and to help to make it a permanent institution. Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter was made chairman of the committee, with Mrs. Ralph Poole vice chairman and Alfred Granger secretary. A widespread campaign to help the rest of the north shore communities to secure an adequate guarantee fund will soon be started and it is to be hoped that what is one of the most interesting of Chicago's musical enterprises and in its way entirely unique will be adopted, as was our civic opera, by the people who have been profiting by it for so many years.

Many of our esthetic enterprises have to be started and carried on by individual initiative. Up to a certain point this support by one generous and public spirited individual or group of such is advantageous to the community, but there comes a time in all such enterprises, the psychological moment, when it behooves the recipients of these gifts to take over the financial burden and become at least part owners.

This new organization does not intend to conflict with the work of the box selling committee of the Civic opera. This energetic body of women hopes to have all the available boxes sold before summer intervenes with its enervating holidays. The second of the fortnightly luncheons which Mrs. Rockefeller is giving for this committee is dated for Wednesday next.

It is an interesting sight to see the members of this body of women gathered about the long T-shaped table which is spread in Mrs. McCormick's Napoleonic drawing room, her dining room not being quite large enough for the company. The dignified room and the liveried footmen give an air of state to the occasions which cannot fail to have an impression on those who attend, and contribute to making them feel the importance of their mission.

Florence Macbeth in Benefit.

We of Chicago are nothing if not musical. The Gamma chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota, the national musical sorority, is giving a concert on Feb. 18 at the Studebaker theater, when Miss Florence Macbeth will provide the program. The money raised by the sale of tickets will be devoted to the scholarship the sorority offers yearly to young women musical students. Miss Macbeth belongs to this association.

The scholarship this year will be given to a singer. It is given in rotation to a pianist, violinist, and singer. Mme. Galli-Curci and Mme. Rosa Raisa are honorary members of this sorority. They head the list of patronesses, which also includes Mme. Sturkow-Ryder, Mrs. Frederick Upham, Mrs. Archibald Freer, and Mrs. L. A. Carson.

Next Saturday at one of the luncheons the Chicago Council of Foreign Relations holds periodically at the Palmer house, Mme. Agresti of Rome will speak on the Fascisti movement in Italy. She is a delightful lecturer, and has already many friends in this country, which she has visited several times. These luncheons are getting so popular that the room where they take place bids fair soon to be inadequate.

Women to Campaign.

The political campaign to be waged

[Moffett Photo.]

Mrs. R. Douglas Stuart is a member of the committee of charge of a benefit performance of Russian opera to be given at the Auditorium theater on Feb. 20 for Association house. Many boxes and blocks of seats for the affair have already been sold. Feodor Chaliapin is to sing the leading rôle.

MISS FRANCES TAFT.
[Raymor Studio Photo.]

Miss Frances Taft, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oren E. Taft of 220 East Walton place, is one of the Junior league members who is much sought after when theatricals are in prospect and who has presented many charming rôles in Junior league performances. As Rosalie, a blind girl, she was most appealing in Mrs. Aldis' play, "The Will of the People."

MRS. PHILIP MAHER.

Mrs. Philip Maher achieved much success as an amateur actress in "The Will of the People," a play by Mrs. Arthur T. Aldis, which was produced at the Studebaker theater this week by the Playwrights' Theater organization. Mrs. Maher was before her marriage Miss Madeleine Michelson.

Here's a Corset That Both Style and Comfort Dominates: The Choice of Thousands for Easter

—Third Floor—Dearborn Street—

Fashion is uppermost in the mind of the woman who is thinking of her Easter clothes and so now just as she is about to buy her new corset to try on Easter clothes over—she is interested in the "Nemo Juspul," a unique model that is neither a front or a back lace corset, a model whose rubber front sections create pliant, youthful uncorseted appearance so much sought after—a model that means the fashionable straight line silhouetted figure, and is most acceptable to women whose spreading figures demand the need of control.

A model, too, that at the same time means health and comfort for the Juspul has a hidden supporting device that performs a genuine hygienic service in support and control of the figure—the device is instantly adjusted by means of two lacers on the outside of the corset.

We want you to see and inspect the Juspul—for most women readily see its many advantages upon examination—our corsetieres, conceded to be the best trained in the city, are always at your service without extra charge.

Sizes up to 32, at 3.50, $4, $5 Sizes to 40, at $6, 7.50

The Nemo Self-Reducing Corset at $3 is already the talk of all America—a reducing corset with all the Nemo exclusive patented reducing devices, strong and serviceable in every way—with the scientific and hygienic features so necessary to health and comfort, at $3

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Illinois Women's Athletic Club Plans Gala Mart

By Kate Webber.

PREPARATIONS will be launched this week for one of the largest events of the spring season of interest to club women on all sides of the city. It is a "gala mart" to be opened during Easter week by the Illinois Women's Athletic club and run for a number of days—just how long is not definitely decided as yet—as a combination sale and entertainment spectacle.

The Chicago Lincoln club has been selected as headquarters for the mart where two large halls can be converted into bazaars and shop spaces, and the plan of decoration now under consideration will transform the space into picturesque foreign shops in which every conceivable article to please the shopper will be exhibited. Daily programs and dancing will complete the program.

This carnival event, the proceeds from which will add to the club's building fund, has been planned as a finale to a membership drive which is now in progress and will closely approach the time when ground will be broken for the new fifteen story building with living quarters, gymnasium, and revenue producing office space which is to go up on the site of the club's present property at 820 Tower court.

An intensive membership drive was begun by the club before the holidays and in the last month many names of importance have bene added to its roster. Mrs. Douglas F. Fesler, president, has actively directed the campaign and, with the cooperation of the three past presidents, Mrs. William Severin, Mrs. Grant Williams, and Mrs. Leona Krag, will direct a great part of the plans for the mart. Mrs. M. J. Seifert is general chairman.

An auction block, where mysterious packages will go to the highest bidder, will be in charge of Mrs. Fesler and Mrs. E. R. Fifield. A white elephant booth will be supervised by Mrs. R. W. Davis and Mrs. James Swope. Mrs. Donald Graham will head the hostess committee. Mrs. Walter E. Hughes will direct a group of fortune telling booths, and Mrs. E. C. Trevett will be chairman of a lingerie booth.

Although one classification in the membership has been filled, applications for other memberships are to be taken until work begins on the new building, and a number of life memberships and junior memberships have been recently taken.

Included in the list of new members are Mrs. George Seaman (life member), Mrs. John Borden, Miss Ellen Borden, and Miss Mary Borden (junior members), Mrs. Joseph G. Coleman, Mrs. Frederick H. Rawson, Mrs. George Halleck Taylor, Mrs. Orville E. Babcock, Mrs. William A. Yager, Mrs. Jesse Leroy Smith, Miss Edna McLennan, Mrs. William Cieff, Mrs. J. M. Patterson, Mrs. Thomas Purcell, Mrs. U. L. Atkinson, Mrs. Heaton Owsley, Miss Elizabeth Pope, Mrs. Charles A. Channell, Mrs. Frank A. Hecht Jr., and Mrs. John L. Fortune.

Arche Club Votes Gift to Children's Museum

THE Arché club, of which Mrs. Adele S. Martin is president, has long been identified with all moves for the advancement of art, literature, music, and civics, but it is in art more especially that its activities have been directed, having been organized as a distinctive art club. In its early days, which date back to 1888, the study of art began under instructors, and during the world's fair the work was directed along lines which enabled the members to enjoy more fully the exhibits in fine arts. The membership increased rapidly, and in 1897 the club found itself on such a financial basis that it was able to do some definite work to aid in the establishment of making Chicago an art center.

The encouragement of local artists was decided upon and since that date the club has each year purchased a picture at the annual exhibit of works by Chicago artists.

The morning study classes always have been under able leadership and have become the life of the club; each might be called a club within a club.

The club gave the first $1,000 toward the restoration of the Columbian Fine Arts building and set an example which has been followed by numerous clubs in the state. Added to that achievement it has just voted $1,000 as an individual gift to the children's museum which is being arranged by directors of the Art institute and art lovers of Chicago. The gift again puts the Arché club in the position of pioneer in a great move for raising the standard of education in our city.

ART AND ARTISTS

Chicago Artists' Exhibit Excels Former Efforts

By Eleanor Jewett

WHAT is probably the best exhibition Chicago artists have ever held here opened last Thursday at the Art institute.

The paintings illustrate practically every vein of artistic interpretation from the vivid imagery of Carl Hoeckner's "The Storm" to the realistic photography of Hans Larwin's "Bread Line."

This last painting is not, of course, really in any sense of the word a photograph, except for its searching cruelty in truthful, unshaded portrayal. As a rule, it is the camera that searches out the sore spots of humanity for the consumption of the curious public. In this case it is an artist with brush and paint who has set before the world the exquisite awfulness of the Viennese hunger situation. The faces of those children haunt one; the wizened babies make one's heart bleed; the anguished eyes of the old cut into the toughened hide of a satisfied knowledge, at presshand, of the starvation going on now throughout Austria. It is a terrible and wonderful picture. It is truth, stark naked. It is life—raw.

But this "Bread Line" is not the whole of the exhibition. From its somber depths one rises through various grata of interesting and beautiful conceptions to a realization of the excellent work Chicago painters and sculptors are doing today. Perhaps the most striking of these of our painters who place before us the charm of hills and forest is Rudolph F. Ingerle. Perhaps it is some one else. At all events, Mr. Ingerle in this exhibit has five canvases, one treading close upon the heels of the other for first place in our regard.

Alfred Juergens is another artist who gives us the beauty of the country. His paintings are filled with a tender witchery, delicate, difficult of delineation. For the interpreter of the sand dunes one turns to Frank V. Dudley, who this year is represented by four pictures, among the most forceful of any that have been brod upon his palette.

Carl R. Kraft has three beautiful paintings, and John F. Stacey has three one, "Mountain Brook," is particularly vivid.

It is almost impossible to dilate at this time of writing upon the immense number of canvases one would wish to recognize. It must suffice to mention but the names of some of the exhibiting artists and trust in the next few Sundays to come for opportunity to deal more thoroughly with more of the individual pictures.

Among the painters represented are Adam Emory Albright, Anthony Angarola, Joseph Birren, Marie E. Blanke, Karl A. Buehr, Charles W. Dahlgreen, Gerald A. Frank, Eugenie F. Glamen, Oskar Gross, Indiana Gyberson, Lucie Hartrath, Mabel Key, Anna Lynch, Pauline Palmer, Walter Sargent, Anna L. Stacey, Helen Walker Szukalska, Frederick Tellander, R. G. Wedderspoon, Elisabeth Telling, and Laura Van Pappelendam.

Among the sculptors are Adela Barnett, Maximilian Hoffman, Edwin Pearson, Emory P. Seidel, Ruth Sherwood, Ida McClelland Stout, Kathleen Wheeler, and Fred M. Torrey.

Those of the prizes which were announced on Wednesday were the Barry A. Frank prize of $150 to "Morning," by Frederick Fursman; the Clyde M. Carr prize of $100 to "The Storm," by Carl Hoeckner, and the Municipal Art league prize of $100 to "Portrait of Old Lady," by Ejnar Hansen.

The feature to be remarked in the exhibit is the varied hanging of the pictures. They have been hung lower than is the general custom, and until the eye gets used to it the effect is not particularly pleasing. Those who made up the hanging committee were Carl Hoeckner, Raymond Jonson, and Alfred Juergens.

In the print room the thirteenth annual exhibition of etchings, under the management of the Chicago Society of Etchers, opened on Thursday. As far as a hurried glimpse of the exhibit would permit, the impression was gained that in this exhibition, too, Chicago artists have surpassed their past efforts. There are more than 200 etchings shown. While many of them are by artists who live in Chicago, a goodly number are the work of members of the society who live either in other cities or other countries. Some of the 115 active members, to illustrate, are in Italy, France, Sweden, Germany, England, Canada, Japan, and India. So the society has the world to draw on.

Among the distinguished etchers represented in the exhibit are Sir Frank Short, who is president of the Royal Society of Painter Etchers in London; Martin Hardie, keeper of prints in the Kensington museum in London, and George Soper and his daughter Eileen, who has won fame as an interpreter of children. From the United States there are representatives of etching from California to Maine, the list being about evenly divided between the east and west.

Among the etchers are Lee Sturges, Elizabeth Telling, Ralph Fletcher Seymour, Charles L. Morgan, Ralph M. Pearson, Bertha E. Jaques, Robert F. Logan, Charles E. Heil, Arthur W. Heintzelman, Robert L. Eskridge, Frank W. Benson, Dirk Baksteen, and John Taylor Arms.

The exhibition will remain open until March 15.

In the Arts club gallery at the Art institute an exhibit of original sculpture and drawings by Auguste Rodin was opened Thursday. The drawings are of interest as being in many cases the original conception of a later masterpiece in marble or bronze. In bronze there are three busts of Balzac, each impressive, and the one similar to the other, save for size.

Among the other bronze figures are "The Thinker," "The Shadow," "Brother and Sister," "The Man on the Rock," and "The Damned."

There are two works in plaster and one, "Bust of Bourgeois de Calais," in glazed terra cotta. The drawings are, for the most part of nudes, most of them block figures with the finer distinctions allowed to wait for the touch of the chisel.

The exhibit closes March 3.

"Portrait of Eleanor Eckhart," by Leopold Seyffert, in the exhibition of paintings by Chicago artists in the east galleries of the Art institute. The portrait is a pleasing and able demonstration of the skill to which this young painter is attaining.

The Associated Students of the Art Institute will produce Booth Tarkington's comedy, "Monsieur Beaucaire," in Fullerton hall on Feb. 20 and 21 at 8 o'clock. The leading rôles are to be played by Frances Haines, Wood Miller, Charles Adams, and V. Carr.

Beginning this evening a series of six Sunday night concerts will be held in Fullerton hall of the Art institute at 8 o'clock. There will be a small admission charge to cover part of the actual expense. These evening concerts will not interfere in any way with the afternoon ensemble concerts, of which there are two every Sunday. The four organizations scheduled for concerts in February are: This evening, the Philharmonic string quartet; next Sunday, the Shostac string quartet; the following week, the M. Jennette Loudon trio, and on Feb. 25, the Philharmonic string quartet again.

On Tuesday afternoons in February lectures will be given at 4 o'clock in Fullerton hall. This week Miss Mary Symonds will speak on "Weaving." The other subjects and lecturers are: "On the Collecting of Italian Primitives," by Raymond Henniker-Heaton; "Jewelry and Enamels and the Craft Movement," by Frank Gardner Hale; "Chamber Music," by the Beethoven trio.

The Best Joke I Ever Heard

What was the best joke you ever heard? Tell the world about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for each joke published. Address the Jokes Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

Life Is Real.

He was one of those men who never work. He was always fat and healthy, eating three meals a day.

At last the "Work or Fight" slogan came, and one of his enlisted friends, home for a few days' leave, happened to meet him. At a glance he noticed his haggard face and loss of weight, so the following conversation took place between them:

"Hello, Bill! You're looking puny; what's the matter, been sick?"

"No, it's work, work, nothing but work from morning till night."

"How long you been at it?"

"Start tomorrow." J. J. E.

It Can't Be Done.

Dorothy liked to play hookey, but had difficulty in doing so, because every time she was absent from school teacher sent a note to mother. One day she decided to see if she could not do away with this. So she got teacher on the telephone, and, disguising her voice as best she could, said: "Dorothy will not be at school today. She is not well."

"O, that's all right," said teacher. "Who is this speaking?"

Poor Dorothy, surprised by the unexpected question, said, "This is my mother." A. B.

Willie Finds a Way.

Mother—Now, Willie, if you put this wedding cake under your pillow, what you dream will come true.

Willie—Why can't I eat the cake and put the pillow over my stomach? L. J.

So Far So Good.

Tourist to farmer—Have you been living here all your life?

Farmer, to tourist—Not yit! L. W.

Turning a Deaf Ear.

A deaf woman sat herself down in one of the seats of a church and propped up an ear trumpet of large dimensions by way of hearing the sermon in comfort.

The sexton tiptoed down the aisle and frowned severely at her.

"One toot and you're out," he informed her. A. S.

What Could Abner Do?

Gallant rooter to fair damsel at football game—That fellow playing at guard will be our best man next year.

Fair damsel—O, Abner! This is so sudden! H. L.

Clear as Daylight.

Two men met and exchanged notes.

"I certainly doubled my money easy yesterday," said the first man to the second one.

"How so?" came the querry.

"I had a five dollar bill, and I doubled it when I folded it to put it in my pocket, and when I took it out it showed in creases," replied the first. C. D. C.

That Will Do.

"Everybody in our family is some kind of an animal," remarked Tommy.

"What do you mean?" asked his mother.

"Why, mother, you're a dear, you know," said Tommy.

"Yes, Tommy," and the baby is mother's little lamb."

"I'm the kid; sister is some chicken; Kate is a bird; little brother is a pig, dad's the goat, and——"

"That's enough," Tommy. E. R.

She'd Be Surprised.

A school teacher wrote the following criticism on the edge of a boy's report card: "A good worker, but talks too much."

When the father signed the report and sent it back the card bore this additional warning: "You should hear his mother." G. P.

Who Wouldn't?

Johnny: "What makes the new baby at your house cry so much, Tommy?"

Tommy: "It doesn't—and, anyway, if all your teeth were out, your hair off, and your legs so weak you couldn't stand on them, I guess you'd feel like crying yourself." L. H.

Fer or Agin? What Say You of the Movies?

Taken as a whole, do you think the movies aid or retard civilization? Do they make humans more human, or do they make monkeys of us? Answer! Answer!

Dear Miss Tinée: So you would really like to know what the movies do for the world at large, would you? YOU, who should know without asking the opinion of the laity! Well, here goes:

First of all, they keep a mass of people employed, some at enormous salaries, some at wages not so good. If all the film used in the movie industry was stretched out in a single roll it would reach 25,000,000 times around the earth, or more than three times the distance from the Statue of Liberty to the Colossus of Rhodes. Then, too, lots of title writers are kept busy burning the midnight oil trying to think up clever new subtitles for Mack Sennett and other comedies. That in itself is important. It quickens the wits and trains the thinking machines of these writers and writeresses.

It is also good for the optical business, because a constant movie fan is bound to get glasses sooner or later to tell where the picture began when he came in. It also strengthens the calves and thighs by a constant getting up and sitting down to let some one in or out of the seat (you invariably are sitting in the row where the optiences—your own word—move most frequently).

It further has a tendency to help the electric light companies not alone for the splendor of the interior lighting arrangements of the large theaters but especially by selling more batteries for the little pocket flashes the uniformed ushers and usheresses wear. That, too, is another feature—the uniform business must be going ahead by leaps and bounds, as well as the grand organ trade.

But why proceed? The man who told you the movies were not helpful only has a spite because he had to stand in line at his neighborhood showhouse to see "Why Girls Leave Home" when he should have been at home helping his wife with the dinner dishes. You send him to me, and I'll give him an earful of stuff he won't be able to glean from Dr. Eliot's Five Foot Shelf not only about the movies but about lots of things that stand still as well, including what the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina, why it never rains when you carry your umbrella, et cetera, ad infinitum. J. D. K.

Dear Miss Tinée: In response to your query, I wish to say that in my opinion the movies are all right. I don't think much of this educational bunk. None of the fans I am acquainted with attends the movies with a view to educational features.

We are disappointed at times, but I have not heard any cry for the suppression of the printing trades, because readers are frequently disappointed.

I do not consider the movies a menace to the morals of the nation. It is quite true immoral conditions are sometimes portrayed, but a nation that is used to seeing those same conditions in every day life should not be squeamish at seeing these conditions portrayed on the screen.

Don't you think it is high time for ordinary folks to rise up William Riley and swat the so-called reformers and their satellites hip and thigh? If we are to have a yardstick for moral acts, let's use it impartially on every class, high and low, movie actors, reformers, and men and women in high stations. If used on all persons this country would soon lose a large share of its so-called high class people. They would all jump in the ocean.

M. O. C.

Dear Miss Tinee: Regarding the effect of movies on children or adults, I believe it is in the main beneficial. My five children have been allowed to see motion pictures, with some family censoring, for the greater part of their childhood, and a careful consideration of the effect upon their lives has inclined me to the belief that if parents take an intimate interest in their pleasures, as well as tasks, the possibility of evil influence will be nullified. Go with the children to see the show, explain the difficult scenes to them, help them solve the weekly serial mysteries, enter fully into the spirit of the plays with them, and they will soon learn to select the good and reject the bad. In fact, act the part of parent and not of tyrant, and your children will get more from the movies than they could from school.

The effect upon the adult depends entirely upon individual preferences. Pigs like mud; cats do not; like seeks like. Some revel in sex plays, others delight in romantic drama, while many more seek moral story presentations. The movies supply demands and when the demands change they will change also.

I see the pictures you recommend, and generally avoid those you condemn, but I sometimes find enjoyment in one which you damn with faint praise. Taken altogether, I think there is at least 80 per cent good to be had from the movies—a percentage better than that given daily newspapers. Summing up the matter, why not apply the famous motto of the Order of the Garter—Honi soit que mal y pense?

G. P.

Dear Madam: It certainly was a brave act for you to ask: "What do movies do for the world?" We can guess what they do in the way of easy money for the producer and players but what they do to the poor public perhaps will never be fully known.

If money interests were not considered, could the average place of amusement give any good and sufficient excuse for existence? Is money all? Yes, commercialized amusement of all kinds produces money for a few, but the cost to society, caused by false and degrading impressions made on the mind of the spectators, can never be estimated.

No doubt there is some good of a minor quantity mixed with the rest to give it respectability, but the good is frequently lost in the vast mass of undesirable material. The time spent in observing the ordinary fiction takes the money of the victim and robs his mind of time that could be better spent in some other way.

At present the screen does not furnish anything necessary to civilization, and possibly through its practices blazes the way to barbarism. Under proper management, no doubt, the screen could be made a great power for good, but as a rule those things for advancement of civilization—such as religion, morals, and education—cannot be commercialized without causing their decay. The causes leading to civilization are antagonistic to those seeking great worldly gain. The greed for money may lead to practices which in the end nullify good intentions.

H. A.

THE KICK KORNER

ITS OBJECT—OBJECTION.

Dear Miss Tinée: I'm one of these here, now, grouches, who has every movie spoiled for him by some glaring inconsistency, anachronism, or just plain stupidity. I daresay that were you and I to commit as many blunders in a lifetime as I have seen in a few films, we'd move from job to job faster than C. C. goes from laugh to laugh.

But last night I was dragged to see Booth Tarkington's "The Flirt." For the first time in my life I wasn't forced to sit through an exhibition of busts, backs, legs and lubricity. There was a plot of sorts. The setting was in keeping. There was a cast, which though it overdid its several parts per usual, did not induce retching.

It is axiomatic with us who write advertisements that 80 per cent of hoi polloi has the mentality of 18 years or less. Bill Thompson and Bundesen's grand jury have amply proved that Chicago's should scale 15 and under. So I'm not astonished that filmed parts, to affect the general, should be overdone. But the company that left its record in the emulsion of this film had itself well in hand. Really, the moderation was refreshing.

Please tell me why, of every thousand feet of film, 400 or 500 should be devoted to subtitle. I may have overestimated, but I doubt it. Even the 80 per cent mentioned can read one-half as fast as I. And I can read the average subtitle thrice before it leaves the silver. A reduction of one-third would serve every purpose, and the continuity of the story [which I've paid too much money to see], would suffer less. Perhaps a word from you, frequently repeated, would have a slightly corrective effect. Ten feet in the thousand, let us hope.

R. C. J.

[Editor's note: I LOVE YOU when you're grouchy. You have such a good time being that way.]

Dear Miss Tinée: On your recommendation I went to see "Shadows," and I was never quite so bored. It did one good thing for me, though—I believe I will consider most other pictures good after sitting through that one.

If Harrison Ford would only straighten up—just once in the picture. A child sitting behind us remarked when Lon Chaney was dying, "Gee, mother, why doesn't he hurry up and die?"—and I think that was the sentiment of most of the audience.

You are, I believe, the most trusted critic of the screen—but if you recommend more pictures like "Shadows" you're going to lose your drag with me. Which will probably make you feel terrible.

MARJORIE.

[Editor's note—Alas, I shall have struck a snag if with you I should lose my "drag!"]

Dear Mae Tinée: I saw both of 'em "Broken Chains" and "Quincy Adams Sawyer." Why didn't you land on "Broken Chains" as you did on "Quincy Adams Sawyer"? Were you brainstormed by the galaxy of judges who pretended to lift the "chains" to first place among 27,000 competitors? Why didn't you land on that old "Broken Chain" stuff and then tell why the dull, reactionary bunch around Goldwyn selected it? I know why. Yours for better films.

J. H.

they handed you a tear they god busy and slipped you a laugh to make you forget. Fine picture—"FURY."

"THELMA"—Well done. From the story by Marie Corelli—starring Jane Novak, who was as adorable as the heroine of the novel was.

"FABIOLA," the spectacle that followed opera to the Auditorium, has good acting to recommend it and is valuable as a historical chronicle. The scenes were filmed overseas.

"MONTE CRISTO" Mrs. Krum thought might have been great had the director put more thought on it. She was greatly impressed with the work of John Gilbert as Edmond Dantes and found the picture as a whole "entertaining and unusual."

"JAVA HEAD"—SPLENDID! DON'T miss "Java Head"!

"LOVE IN THE DARK" may be briefly described in one flapperish word —"adorable!"

See you tomorrow!

Ask Me! Ask Me!

AMELIA R.: Ah, you're cunning—but you mustn't expect me to help you on your puzzle contest. That wouldn't be fair, would it? ANYHOW, who SAID he was "called" that? Read the caption over again.

A. E. P.: Lionel Belmore was the laird in "Kindred of the Dust." Y'wekkum.

T.: Why don't you write to Miss Swanson and tell her how much you like her? Nobody in the world but appreciates a word of praise now and then.

E. H. M.: Say it with brickbats. Your writing almost put out my eyes. However, I DID get you—which should leave you purring, E. H. M.

PATRICK: O, I don't mind. You'll probably be in a better humor tomorrow. If this sloppy weather keeps up, we might as well ALL go jump in the lake. Why don't you write an epic called "The Hangman's Chorus," or something of the kind, for coming generations to enjoy? In other words, brighten the corner where you are. In other words—I'm sorry you're blue, and hope the clouds have all rolled by by tomorrow.

J. C.: For which Miss La Marr should thank and Miss MacDonald curse you.

PALMER A.: Katherine Perry is the present wife of Owen Moore. Not that I know of. Thomas Moore has had two wives—Alice Joyce and Renee Adoree. Uwekkum! (How's that?)

VIRG: Yes, Mr. Keaton is a daddy. Couple of months or so. Yes. Entirely welcome.

RAE: Not that I know of. Think he should be?

GEOLOGY

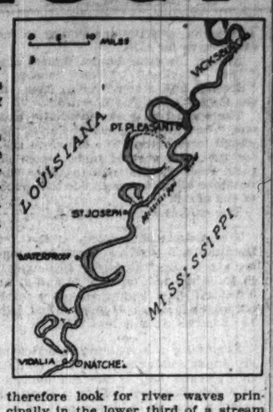
Meanders in the Mississippi.

BANK WAVES IN STREAMS.

BENDS in a river travel downstream. They are big waves which move in the direction of the current's flow.

When the stream cuts, the erosion is progressive and insatiable. The deeper it chews its bank, the farther it must cut to satisfy the laws or running water. What began as a little bend eventually becomes a great horseshoe shaped loop.

The process goes on. The current bites hardest on the two sides of the peninsula. If the ground is soft, the channel cuts through. The bend is lopped off, and an oxbow lake is left. More often, where the ground is not easily corraded, the whole bend slowly moves downstream.



The great urge behind all running water is to transport as much land as possible to sea level. When the current is rapid, the solid load of a river is large, but as it emerges on its flood plane, the flow is checked and some of the load falls down. You should therefore look for river waves principally in the lower third of a stream course to the ocean.

The lower Mississippi is one continuous meander. Within the borders of Louisiana alone there are forty-one great bends and fifteen large oxbow lakes.

Just a few drops combed into the hair and almost immediately you can see "listless locks" begin to take on new life, new lustre, new silky sheen—stray ends and straggly strands melding into glorious waves and curls.

And in 20 minutes your mirror shows you a new head of hair—marcelled and curled as you like it best; with a natural wave that no artificial beauty-parlor process could possibly duplicate.

Naturally Curly Hair in 20 Minutes with Marvelous New Spanish Liquid

Delightful elixir of Spanish herbs makes any hair soft, lustrous and wavy—and keeps it so!

Mr. Ryerson's Personal Story of His New Discovery

NATURALLY curly hair—soft, wavy and lustrous! Is there anything more gloriously beautiful in all the charms of womanhood? Yet how few women—how sadly few—may claim this crowning glory!

Lovely Curls

All my life, as an investigating chemist, it has been my dream to find a perfect curling and hair-dressing fluid. And I've been working at it ceaselessly close on to nine years. All told, I've spent a fortune in experimenting; testing all known curling methods, and rejecting them as unreliable, inefficient, often harmful.

But perseverance has finally brought a reward greater than I had ever dared hope for. We have at last compounded a curling fluid which not only curls the straightest head of hair, but beautifies it, too. A marvelous hair and scalp tonic which increases the growth and "life" of the hair as it curls and waves it—adding new silkiness, new softness, new thickness and beauty.

I consider this liquid our greatest beauty discovery—greater even than the English Beauty Clay which we brought to this country last year and introduced to one million American women.

It is a colorless fluid compounded from the purest herbs of Southern Spain—a delicate elixir which makes any head of hair naturally curly and wavy—a delightful hair balsam which, when combed into the hair or used with your favorite curlers or curling iron, creates the prettiest and most natural-looking marcelle you ever saw.

I have never known another liquid of such magic potency. Even after a shampoo, when the hair is often stubbornly straight and unruly, it performs the miracle of making the hair behave—making it obey the commands of comb or curling iron—staying put where you want it—besides producing immediate and captivating curls, ringlets and water-waves.

No more necessity now for resorting to the harsh and harmful baking process of waving the hair. This new product—called "Liquid Marcelle"—sounds the doom of dangerous "permanent wave" methods. Simply comb a few drops of Liquid Marcelle into your hair—then twirl the hair a bit with the fingers, or put up on your favorite curlers. When you are ready to dress, you are staring at a wealth of curls and waves.

No matter whether your hair is long, short or bobbed; whether dry or oily; blonde or brunette, Liquid Marcelle will solve your curling and hair-dressing problems. It will keep your hair rich in sheen and softness; gracefully wavy, dainty and charming, always.

A Matchless Marcelle

The remarkable introductory offer I have made in the next column means not one cent of profit on our initial distribution of Liquid Marcelle. But I believe that once you try Liquid Marcelle, you will use it permanently. Which will make our present sacrifice of immediate profit well worth while.

Free Distribution $3.50 Bottles

(ONLY ONE TO A FAMILY)

I AM SO enthused over the things I know "Liquid Marcelle" will do, that I am anxious to give it a wide public distribution quickly.

Liquid Marcelle is made from very costly ingredients—and can be compounded only in small quantities at one time. So $3.50 is a fair retail price for it—which is the price we shall establish when we distribute it through the drug stores later on.

Wavy Bob

But right now, we are anxious to make friends for it as rapidly as possible in all parts of the country. So we have decided to distribute the first 10,000 bottles at the net cost of production and handling—without one cent of profit. We have figured this down to $1.87, which includes preparing and compounding the herbs, bottling, packing and shipping the finished liquid. But this offer, it must be understood, is open to only one member of any single family.

You need send no money. Merely sign and mail the coupon below. When the postman brings your bottle of Liquid Marcelle, pay him $1.87 plus a few cents postage. And remember, the Century guarantee insures your satisfaction, as always. If you are not more than delighted with the results, you may return the bottle and its unused contents at the end of a five-day trial and we will refund your money in full by return mail.

music when she was a child. She has been touring the country in recitals and lectures on Russian songs, and belongs in the mezzo-soprano list.

Vanna Mirovitch made an operatic debut in Russia in 1917, then married a young Czecho-Slovak officer in the army that was cut off in Russia and had to make its way home around the world in the other direction. Mme. Mirovitch and her husband spent their honeymoon with the army on its journey through Siberia. She is a contralto.

There will also be Ina Bourskaya, who was apparently destined for stardom with this company and during the summer at Ravinia, but to whose the Chicago Civic Opera seemed disinclined to give many stellar opportunities. She will return to them with the Russian organization. Likewise, Chaliapin, the greatest of all the operatic artists in any language, will, if he keeps his engagement, appear in some five performances as Boris Godunoff in the Moussorgsky opera.

The others, mostly of last season's personnel, include these: Ina Dnen, Nina Ivanova, Olga Kazanskaya, Mary Mashir, Sophia Oslpova, sopranos; Barbara Loseva, Valja Valentinova, mezzo-sopranos; Nicolai Busanovsky, Vladimir Daniloff, Vladimir Svetloff, tenors; Gabriel Hrjanowsky, Max Panteleeff, Vladimir Radeef, baritones; Avram Arnoloff, Nicolai Karjash, David Tulchinoff, Sergei Anfimov, bassos; Victor Danilieff, Michail Feveiski, Eugene Fuerst, conductors.

Visitors of the Baton.

New York is having a season of guest conductors with the various symphony orchestras that play there. Albert Coates comes again from England for the New York Symphony orchestra. He will be succeeded by Bruno Walter of Germany. Willem Mengelberg is coming again to the Philharmonic, and before he arrives there will be one performance by another Dutch conductor, Willem van Hoogstraten. Georges Enesco, the Roumanian composer, has charge of the Philadelphia Symphony orchestra while its regular conductor, Leopold Stokowski, is in Europe. Darius Milhaud has been conducting his own and other French works with the organization known as the City Symphony.

They say at Orchestra hall that the only guest conductor here this season will be the Italian Alfredo Casella, and he in one of his own works. Guest conductors in anything else except their own compositions are not highly favored with the Chicago Symphony. They still have recollections of the 1918-'19 season there, when, in addition to Frederick Stock, Eric De Lamarter, and several composer-conductors, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Victor Herbert, Frans Kneisel, Giorgio Polacco, and Nikolai Sokoloff each took the baton for an entire performance. It was reported then that each conductor, insistent upon his own ideas, so upset the customary balance of the orchestra that at least two subsequent rehearsals were necessary to restore the normal. In these days of heavy expense for rehearsing this became an important matter.

Dippel's New Plan.

With head possibly bloody but certainly unbowed, Andreas Dippel emerges from the wreck of his operatic venture with a plan for reorganization and other performances next season. He told the Cincinnati committee that the new activities would be based upon a minimum of 100 performances, to cost $350,000. Financial stability is to be provided by a special fund paid into a common treasury by all cities of the circuit before the season begins. He proposes Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Buffalo, Detroit, and Cleveland as his circuit, and says that Indianapolis, Louisville, Toledo, Columbus, Syracuse, Rochester, Wheeling, Allentown, Springfield, Peoria, Davenport, Grand Rapids, and Kalamazoo have also expressed a desire to join in the movement. The enterprise will be known as the Intercity Grand Opera association.

With the Melody Makers.

The Chicago Civic Opera permits few figures of actual income to become public, but the critic of the Boston Herald, Philip Hale, administered a scarcely veiled hint to his readers that the business of the company's first week in that city had not been satisfactory. In the course of his remarks he said: "The question naturally arises, Do the people of Boston wish the visit of the Chicago company to be repeated, to be an annual event? Or is Boston careless of its former fame as a patron of opera? It would be a pity if at the end of this week the Chicago company, about to leave Boston, should be able to say, 'We have piped unto you and you have not danced.'"

Ildebrando Pizzetti's new opera, "Deborah and Jael," was recently brought out for the first time at La Scala, Milan, with Arturo Toscanini conducting, amid quite as much enthusiasm as usually accompanies a world premiere. The book is based upon the Biblical story, but is considerably amplified and developed with some imaginary incidents beyond the theme expressed in the book of Judges.

The London Times speaks of it thus: "The music in which this story finds its highly poetical expression confirms all the appreciation of the qualities of

Quick Relief From Constipation

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.

Titta Ruffo, Italian baritone, will appear in recital at the Auditorium today. For several seasons he was a highly applauded member of the opera company.

Maestro Pizzetti, his perfect knowledge and command of instrumentation, his aristocratic taste, his scrupulous accuracy of detail, and his delicate asceticism. Perhaps it lacks here and there the wealth of inspired and organic conception, but its lofty intentions and its noble forms make of 'Deborah and Jael,' in the opinion of the best critics, one of the finest operas of recent times."

Now you know just how it sounded. "The wealth of inspired and organic conception" is, one infers, critics slang for "a good tune."

The coming generation in music will have an opportunity this week; two of them, in fact, and both at Orchestra hall. The Bush Conservatory Symphony orchestra will give a concert tomorrow night, with Richard Czerwonky as conductor, and wherein Olga Eitner, violinist, and Harold Triggs, pianist, will play, and Maude Boulough will sing.

On the following night a concert by the artist pupils of the American conservatory is scheduled. An orchestra conducted by Adolf Weidig will play, and the soloists are thus categorized: Edward Eigenschenk and Edith Potter Smith, organists; Helen Rauh, Ethel Lyon, Esther Payne, and Joseph Brinkman, pianists; Ruth Parker and Lorraine Earnest, violinists; and Myra C. Conyers, Mrs. Esther Gielo, and Frances Ingwersen, singers.

Beginning tonight, there will be a series of six consecutive Sunday evening chamber music recitals at Fullerton hall. The Philharmonic String quartet will inaugurate the series, and will be heard again in three weeks. Two other organizations, the Shostac String quartet and the M. Jennette London trio, will make two appearances each. A small admission charge will be made to cover part of the expense. These recitals will in no way interfere with the afternoon Ensemble concerts, which will continue at 3 and 4:15 each Sunday.

Josephine Rosensweet, pianist, will be the soloist with the Chicago Symphony orchestra in its subscription concerts this week. She is the daughter of the late David Rosensweet, a native Chicagoan, and for eight years a member of the orchestra. Miss Rosensweet will play the Chopin E Minor Concerto. The symphony of the week is that by Haydn in B flat. Other numbers will be the overture to Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro," Wolf's "Italian Serenade," Glasounow's Symphonic Poem, "Stenka Razin," which is not recorded on past programs, and Dvorak's Slavonic Dances.

Jacques Gordon's violin recital next Wednesday night at Kimball hall will be under the auspices of the MacDowell society of Chicago and for the benefit of the Edward MacDowell society, which maintains a colony at Peterborough, N. H., the home of the composer.

In spite of delays in setting sail from Europe, the recital by Ganna Walska continues to be announced for Feb. 12 at Orchestra hall. Max Kaplic, baritone, will be associated with her on the program. It will be the first Chicago hearing for both.

Mendelssohn's music will be featured by the Sunday Evening club choir at Orchestra hall tonight. The chorus will sing "Judge Me, O God" and "O, for the Wings of a Dove," the latter with Mrs. Mabel Sharp Herdien as soloist. There will also be an arrangement for women's voices of "Lift Thine Eyes."

Free concerts under the auspices of the Civic Music association will be given this afternoon by Mary Cameron, pianist, and Belah Rosine, cellist, at Palmer park, and by Rachel Steinman Clarke violinist, and Edward Clarke, baritone at Hamilton park.

John Alden Carpenter has written special music for the minuet to be danced by sixteen young society women at the Bal Poudré which will be given at the gold room of the Congress Feb. 13 for the benefit of the educational and public welfare work of the Alliance Française. Mr. Carpenter may play the piano accompaniment for the minuet, and there will be a violin, cello, and flute trio from the Symphony orchestra.

Benno Moiseiwitsch, the pianist, whose announced appearance here this season was canceled by illness, has recovered his health and recently played as soloist with the symphony orchestra of Portland, Ore. Mme. Schumann-Heink, also on this winter's sick list, has taken up her recital tour again, beginning at Meadville, Pa.

Jerome Uhl, baritone in the Chicago opera last year, is now singing at the Paris opera. News from that city is to the effect that he recently married his wife for the third time, with two divorces intervening.

Charles Hackett, the tenor, has gone to Spain. He will sing lyric rôles at Barcelona, then at Madrid, and later at the Paris opera and Opera Comique and at Monte Carlo.

The soloists at the North Shore Music festival in Evanston next May will be Louise Homer, Tito Schipa, Mabel Garrison, Rose Lutiger Gannon, Theo Karle, John Barclay, and Margaret Matzenauer.

There is a broad choice of furniture for every room, and all at savings liberal in the extreme—for, besides the outstanding specials resulting from large "purchases," every piece of furniture on our floors has been specially priced for the February sale. 56 mohair covered living room suites —another record value in a one-day sale

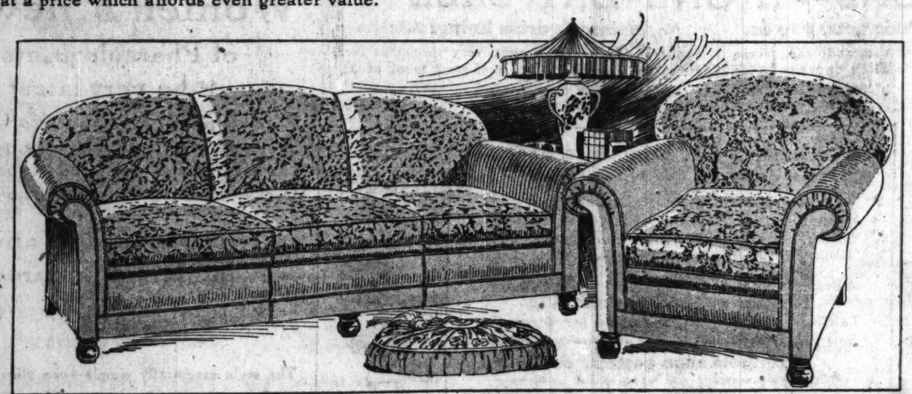
Last Monday we offered one hundred living room suites at a price which, we predicted, would "make furniture selling history on State Street." It did. The entire hundred suites were sold before nine o'clock, and, to avoid disappointing those who came later, we took orders for two hundred more, which we induced the manufacturer to make up for us. Tomorrow we shall place on sale fifty-six suites in a higher grade, at a price which affords even greater value.



Two-piece suites Monday only at $198 Mohair covered Curled hair filled

The two pieces—a massive divan and a luxuriously comfortable chair—are distinctly high grade in every detail. The simple, elegant design, as pictured above, will at once appeal to you. The sterling character of the materials and construction, the expert "tailoring" of the covers, will be equally evident upon examination.

here in a few weeks, which is, in fact, beginning now, to elect a mayor for Chicago, is going to be a gay and cheerful affair, if present appearances may be trusted. Women are planning to take an energetic part in it. The Women's Roosevelt Republican club is growing more and more active, though I think it is almost a disappointment to its members that they have not a real foe against whom to direct their attack. The selection between two perfectly respectable candidates makes the campaign more of a tournament, with visors up and lances at rest, and less of a battle for the right as against the wrong.

Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank is going down this week to visit former Chicagoans, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Bartlett, at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in order to put herself in prime condition to enter the lists for Judge Dever, while among the well known women who will campaign for the Republican candidate, Mr. Lueder, are Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, and Mrs. Marion McFadden.

The Bartletts, to return a moment to Mrs. Fairbank's trip, are now established in their new home, a sublimated rendering of a Spanish hidalgo's hacienda. It is outwardly just such a mansion as Juan Fernandez Ponce de Leon would have built for himself when he landed in Florida in search of the fountain of youth. Inwardly probably he would find it more marvelous than any Arabian Nights' tale, with its bathrooms and other modern inevitables.

Fortnightly in New Home.

The formal opening of the Fortnightly's new home, the old Lathrop house on Bellevue place, on last Wednesday evening was a notable occasion. Mrs. Robert Gregory, its president, sat in a crimson Italian chair on the platform, with the chairman of the committee whose efforts secured the house for the club, Mrs. Lynden Evans on one hand, and Mrs. Wirt Dexter, now of Boston, formerly of Chicago, on the other.

Mrs. Gregory made a short address of welcome and was followed by Mrs. Dexter, who told of the founding of the club on a day in June, 1873, as a dozen women sat about Mrs. Kate Doggett's dining room at a "kaffe klatsch." Mrs. Herbert Bradley spoke for the woman of the future in the club.

One of the most charming events of the evening was when John A. Carpenter played the accompaniment of his famous war song, while Miss Mina Hager sang the beautiful words which he wrote to his music. His mother, the late Mrs. George B. Carpenter, was a prominent member of the Fortnightly and often sang at its meetings. No one who ever heard her sing will forget the soft, thrilling notes of her voice.

Among the well known folk who helped to celebrate the opening of the new quarters were Mr. and Mrs. Carter H. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Blair, Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Farwell, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Adams, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Barnes, Mrs. B. F. Ayer, Mrs. S. T. Chase, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Tyson, Horace Oakley, Frank Cramer, and Arthur Aldis.

WHAT MAKES A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN?

Erelissa.

NORMAN BEAUTY SOUGHT.

By Selby Maxwell.

IN southern European countries when a little girl is born with blue eyes the family feels indeed fortunate. Blue eyes are prized almost above all other feminine charms. In Sicily they call them "Norman eyes."

When a Spanish woman sits for her painting she expects the artist to put blue into her eyes, and if the painter knows his profession he will so adjust the light that her irises look light, however dark her skin may be.

"It is the northern eye," they explain. "It is so beautiful."

Blue eyes are beautiful. It is no accident that fine ladies are always depicted as blondes, whereas their maids are darker toned in hair and eyes. This has been the established order of the world since Rollo, William, Henry, Edward, and other Norman leaders imposed their rule on most of western Europe.

Normans are fair. Their race still lives. To have Norman blood is universally believed to imply superiority.

Erelissa is Norman. She is a descendant of that great breed which followed the Conqueror across the English channel. Her men folks were brave in days gone by. They still are. She is beautiful. Masculine bravery and feminine loveliness go together. No race of cowards can produce fair women. It isn't in them. No more vigorous breed of men ever lived than the Normans. No prettier girl exists of the Norman type than Erelissa.

Her eyes are blue-gray. Her hair is yellow, inclined to copper brown. She is tall, her body is lithe, her wit is clear and sparkling.

Erelissa is too fine to stand harsh surroundings. Her men folks will see to it that she does not need to. It is a part of Norman nature to look out for woman.

Letters

"I's" and "J's."

"J" THE NEWCOMER.

"J" IS one of the youngest letters in our alphabet. The sign was unknown in Roman times. This letter has different sounds in different languages, thus attesting its youthfulness.

In French "J" is pronounced "ZH." In Spanish it is "H." In German it is sounded like a "Y."

The Latin "J," as in "Julius," was written with a sort of double "I" sign, to show that it was different from capital "I." In time scribes came to write it as two "Is," one above the other.

But this sign was too long to fit well into a line of ordinary letters. What to do? Why, the simplest thing in the world. The old artists simply curled up the excess of "I," and a "J" resulted.

Sulphur Is Best to Clear Ugly, Broken Out Skin

Any breaking out or skin irritation on face, neck or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur, says a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, nothing has ever been found to take the place of this sulphur preparation that instantly brings ease from the itching, burning and irritation.

Mentho-Sulphur heals eczema right up, leaving the skin clear and smooth. It seldom fails to relieve the torment or disfigurement. A little jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur may be obtained at any drug store. It is used like cold cream.

Evolution

GOOD IN DEATH.

NOT one life is ever destroyed without some compensating good at the same time. This is the teaching of evolution. Perhaps we, with our limited viewpoint, do not always see the good, but the best findings of science indicate that it is there.

Every living creature has three futures to look after—his own, that of his children, and that of his race. These are the duties that the mere act of living imposes. Nature demands that they be followed. A rebel is dangerous because he is upsetting the natural order of things.

A man who neglects his children, who is a traitor to his own people, or who abases himself, sooner or later comes to a tragic end, and his kind is wiped from the earth. By his death a menace to others who are abiding by nature's dictates is removed.

The death of a little child, which is the death of a promise, is a warning to the living that something is vitally wrong with the social order. It is therefore for the living to pay peculiar heed to such tragedies, that one death shall suffice, and many will not need to happen before the lesson is forced to us through our stupidity. Premature deaths are racial danger signals and should be met by deep seated reforms.

Many races are gone. They dropped from existence, sometimes swiftly, sometimes like the trilobites, so slowly that they hardly seemed to be losing ground at all. Nearly all of the great races of the world, however, have living descendants today. It is not strictly true to call them extinct. Their descendants are shriveled, but not wiped out. Those who died perished because they were unsuited to their environment, because of the mortality of their young, or because their race could not get along with its neighbors.

The moa did not care for his young. His race is dead.

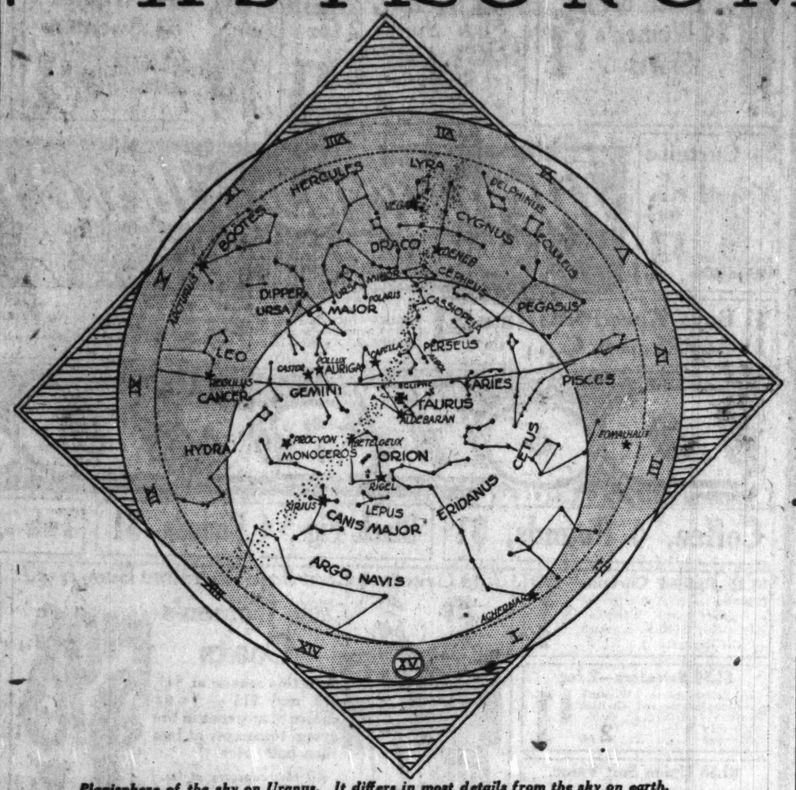
Evolution teaches one great lesson. The chief care of the living should always be to watch death, to recognize its causes, and cheat them, one by one.

ASTRONOMY



Planisphere of the sky on Uranus. It differs in most details from the sky on earth.

THE URANIAN SKY.

THE distance to the stars is so vast that you could not see any appreciable change in their positions, even if you were to go to the farthest planet. They lie around the solar system like a shell, with this little family of worlds in the center, and the vast empty blackness of space about in all directions.

But while the appearance of the stars as a whole is unchangeable throughout the solar system, the way they set in the sky varies from planet to planet. On Mars the skies revolve much as they do on earth. On Jupiter they seem to wheel in a dizzy whirl, for this great globe turns more than twice as rapidly as the earth. Jupiter's pole star is one of the stars of Draco, and not our familiar north star.

The sky has the strangest appearance of all on Uranus. This distant globe lies over on its side as it spins. Its north pole points to a spot near the bright red star Aldebaran. For Uranus, Aldebaran is the north star, a flaming cynosure indeed.

Uranus differs from all the planets inside its orbit. Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, and the earth and moon, rotate in the direction of their revolution. That is, from west to east. This is what makes our sky seem to turn backward from east to west. Uranus rotates backward, from east to west, and consequently the skies there turn from west to east. If you could go there you would see the heavenly bodies coming up where your earthly experience had taught you that they should set, and they would set where you might expect to see them rise.

Uranus rotates on its axis much faster than the earth. One day here is twenty-four hours long, but on Uranus it is only fifteen hours. Eight of our hours, our usual working day, would be greater than half of a Uranian day.

Uranus' axis is tilted 84 degrees to the plane of its orbit, while the earth's is inclined only 23½ degrees. In consequence, seasonal variations are pronounced on Uranus.

But how can they be, when the planet is boiling hot and half condensed? You ask.

A world's temperature is usually dependent on its own constitution, but its sunshine depends wholly on how it is placed in its orbit. There are two zones on Uranus that might be compared to our own frigid or Arctic and Antarctic caps.

On earth these icy caps extend 23½ degrees from the pole, and in them it is six months or more day, and six months night. On Uranus these zones are each of 84 degrees radius, and extend almost to the equator. This means that as the planet pursues one of its huge eighty-six year long years about the sun, half of the world will be shrouded in unbroken gloom, while the other side will have daylight without break. After making liberal allowance for refraction of light, the night side of Uranus must have a continuous night for over forty years.

On earth the sun follows a path that never takes it far from the celestial equator. On Uranus the ecliptic stands almost at right angles to the equator, with the sun creeping at a snail's pace near the poles.

Uranus is a world of vapor, like Jupiter and Saturn, only more so. It is 32,000 miles in diameter. The sun as seen from here is only a bright star, which sheds abundant light, but almost no heat.

MAN

TEMPLES IN MALTA.

CIVILIZATION in Mediterranean countries goes back many centuries. There was a high degree of culture in sheltered spots along this sea, 10,000 years ago while the basin was still two inland lakes, and long before the waters of the Atlantic ocean burst in at Gibraltar.

In the stone age, before the existence of metals was even suspected by man, and when the best of tools were only of polished stone, the people who lived in Malta erected temples which embodied most of the features found in modern churches.

The people of prehistoric Malta were Semitic; very like the present day inhabitants, and were most nearly related to Sicilians, Italians, Greeks, and Arabs. Their rulers were Celts, like modern Englishmen, Welsh, or Irish. In fact, the closest architectural affinities of Malta are found at New Grange, Ireland, while the paintings most nearly resemble that of ancient Greece.

The Maltese were a religious people. What form of worship they had we can only conjecture, but as altars, temples, priestly chambers, and fonts of water are found, it must have been similar to the historical religions of the levant.

These old temples consisted of a long central nave, like a modern church, and crossed by three transepts. Present churches usually have only one transept, although the porch, or ante room may almost rise to that dignity. Each arm of the Maltese transept was closed by a semicircular apse. Stained glass windows were unknown in those days, and the semi-dome was the usual method of closing a passage. Today churches keep the apse at the far end of the nave, but have suppressed the others in favor of windows.

People today believe in lighted buildings. In the stone age darkness was thought more desirable. There were oracles in many of these old temples. Niches have been found where priests could hide and speak words seeming'y from empty stone to the worshippers, standing awestricken in the gloom below.

It's never too late to learn!

TOO many people suffer needless foot trouble—they don't realize that the stiff shank of the ordinary shoe does not conform to the most vital part of the foot—the instep.

TO afford the greatest comfort the underarch of the shoe should provide restful support to the small bones which constitute the arch, and the shoe should be flexible at this point, so that the muscles and cords are not restrained.

—such is the principle on which Cantilever shoes are built.

STOP in tomorrow and see our line of latest style patent leather, suede and kid low shoes. A combination of neatness, beauty and comfort.

Can you wear the Flat Back?

There are different skirt lengths for day and for evening. There are celebrated designers who favor the bolero, and others who insist on the beltless flaring coat. There's a vogue for printed silks, and another for plain materials, pleated.

But there's one thing that all fashions unite on this season: the flat back. Here's a charming example of it—notice the combination of plain and printed materials, the skirt length, the tight-drawn skirt back, the draped godet at the side, the chou that holds it in place, the smartly cuffed sleeves.

But maybe you can't wear this model. Maybe you can see at a glance that, lovely as it is, it isn't for you. Never mind! There are a dozen other ways of achieving the flat back silhouette, ways that clever designers have contrived to mask figures which aren't all they should be.

You can see them all in Vogue. And thousands of other fashion points just as important to the smartness of your effect every season.

The surest way of getting the right thing first is to spend $2 on Vogue—what you would pay for the merest trifle of an accessory—so that you can be advised of the most desirable mode before you spend $25 for a hat or $100 for a gown.

The Admiral Oriental Line
L. C. Smith Building, Seattle, Washington
Gentlemen:—

It was my privilege to close a delightful tour of the Orient with a return voyage from Yokohama to Seattle on the S.S. President Jackson — my first experience in years aboard an American ocean liner. It was a surprising and delightful experience. Never in thirty years of travel have I found greater comfort or enjoyed pleasanter accommodations. To sleep in a real bed—instead of a bunk; to eat real food—instead of cold-storage chow; to have the smoking room and other public rooms closed only when the passengers were ready to retire instead of at the instant when the stewards decide to call it a day;—all these were things I never dared to hope to experience at sea. Thanking and congratulating you, I am

Sincerely yours,

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Moody Institute Celebrates Birth of Its Founder

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

FOUNDER'S week in recognition of the birth of the world evangelist, Dwight L. Moody, who died in 1899, will be observed by the Moody Bible institute beginning tomorrow, the exact anniversary of Moody's birth, and continuing through next Friday evening.

The program will begin at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at the institute auditorium, Chicago avenue and North La Salle street, led by Dr. J. M. Gray, dean. At 3 there will be a lecture by Prof. J. Gresham Machen of Princeton Theological seminary, and at 8 o'clock by Dr. R. A. Torrey of Los Angeles. Dr. Torrey's subject will be "D. L. Moody." There will be three sessions daily at 9 a. m., 2, and 7:30 p. m. Tuesday will be student day and Friday missionary day. All meetings are open to the public.

Among the other speakers from a distance will be Dr. Leander S. Keyser, Springfield, O.; Dr. Donald McTavish, Toronto; the Rev. Charles W. Abel, thirty-two years a missionary in New Guinea, and Dr. Maurice Frater, who went twenty-three years ago as a missionary to the New Hebrides.

Mr. Moody came to Chicago in 1856. A visit to England and Scotland in 1873 gave him world fame in connection with the singer, Ira D. Sankey. Later John Wannamaker in New York and John V. Farwell in Chicago constructed great wooden tabernacles for the two evangelists who thus became associated as Moody and Sankey. During the Chicago world's fair in 1893 Mr. Moody led meetings which attracted crowds of visitors. His latest work was to establish the schools at Northfield, Mass. He established the Moody church and Bible institute in 1886.

POSLAM OFTEN ENDS PIMPLES IN 24 HOURS

Folks who know what Poslam can do don't worry any more about pimples!

Whenever any of these annoying eruptions appear, they just dab them at night with that gentle, healing ointment. It is so concentrated that by the next morning the pimples have sometimes dried away. If they aren't all gone then, touch them again with a bit of Poslam. This seldom fails to do the trick, and it is so nearly flesh-colored that it is hardly noticeable on the face.

Washing the face with Poslam Soap and hot water helps the treatment wonderfully, and the regular use of Poslam Soap tends to KEEP the complexion clear. For trial sample, send 10c to POSLAM, 2G W. 47th St., New York.

Emergency Laboratories, New York, N.Y.

Let this trial offer prove for you at our expense whether more Iron in your blood will make you well and strong

Physician tells why you must have Iron to give you Health, Strength, Energy and Endurance.

"Lack of iron in your blood produces the most terrible of all devitalizing weaknesses and makes a man or woman a physical and mental weakling, nervous, irritable and easily tired out," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly Physician at Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.) and the Westchester County Hospital. "It is the iron in your blood that takes up oxygen from your lungs. The food you eat contains carbon. As digested food is absorbed into the blood, the carbon in the food unites with the oxygenated iron in your blood, and by so doing gives off tremendous power and energy, thereby giving you great force, physical and mental vigor, and producing the material which becomes active, living cells, flesh, muscle, bone and tissue, thus performing one of the most remarkable miracles of life. Without iron, even three big meals a day will not do you any good—you do not get any strength out of your food—it is like putting coal into a stove without a fire."

Blood corpuscles sick in iron, highly magnified. Starved blood Corpuscles highly magnified

Blood examinations by physicians all over the country show that three people out of every four you meet lack iron in their blood, often due to modern methods of cooking and modern diet. For centuries scientists tried in vain to produce iron like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. At last the problem was solved, so that you can now obtain this newer form of iron from any druggist under the name of "Nuxated Iron," which is ready for immediate absorption by the blood the moment it enters the system. A single daily dose of this newer form of iron gives your blood the opportunity of assimilating in concentrated form, iron like the iron that you could get by eating raisins, apples or spinach. It is often remarkable what a tremendous amount of pep, vigor, force and energy a little more iron will give a person whose blood is deficient in this magic-like substance. Nuxated Iron often increases the strength and endurance of weak, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time.

Trial Coupon

Fill in this coupon with your name and address and take it to any druggist in your city. Deposit with him the price of one regular full-size bottle of Nuxated Iron. This is not a payment, but a deposit only. It is still your money. If you are not more than delighted with the results obtained by two weeks' use of Nuxated Iron, simply return the empty package to your own druggist who will promptly refund your money. We will repay the druggist the full amount he refunds upon receipt of the coupon and wrapper.

Super-Stenographers

There is a legion of nomadic stenographers in Chicago, periodically migrating from one $15 job to another. There are thousands of positions for them, positions which never did and probably never will pay more than 15 to 18 dollars per week.

But every day of the year there are thousands of executives and professional men who are actively searching for competent stenographic and secretarial assistants. "Shorthand is an art whose usefulness is not confined to any particular science or profession, but is universal." This remark is as true today as it was in 1755 when Dr. Samuel Johnson made it.

The whole business world opens up before the man or woman who knows shorthand. But, as surely as water finds its own level, the competent stenographers sooner or later gravitate to the preferred positions.

Because most of Chicago's important business is written in Gregg Shorthand at far better salary than the average income of young people, and because every Gregg Stenographer is a potential secretary, and every secretary is a potential executive, the Gregg Stenographer holds one of youth's greatest opportunities.

The unusually thorough and comprehensive character of Gregg Training is the reason our appointment bureau always has more requests for our stenographers and secretaries than we have graduates to fill the positions. When you finish the course at Gregg School, you will be a super-stenographer, and there will be a preferred position waiting for you—you will have taken the first step on the road to achievement, a road which thousands of our graduates have already travelled far.

If you are interested in shorthand, we want you to feel that you can investigate our school or write for our catalogue without obligating yourself in any way. We do not employ solicitors.

There is nothing so imperishable as a book.—JAMES HAIN FRISWELL.

Best Sellers of the Ages

By James O'Donnell Bennett

Fifty-ninth Paper—The Book of Four and Thirty Gems.

Every reader has his first book; I mean to say, one book among all others which in early youth first fascinates his imagination, and at once excites and satisfies the desires of his mind. To me this first book was "The Sketch-Book" of Washington Irving. I was a schoolboy when it was published, and read each succeeding number with ever increasing wonder and delight, spellbound by its pleasant humor, melancholy tenderness, its atmosphere of revery—nay, even by its gray-brown covers, the shaded letters of its title, and the fair clear type which seemed an outward symbol of its style. How many delightful books the same author has given us. . . . Yet still the charm of "The Sketch-Book" remains unbroken; and whenever I open its pages, I open also that mysterious door which leads back into the haunted chambers of youth. HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.
(At memorial meeting, Boston, 1859.)

ONE HUNDRED AND THREE YEARS ago Rip Van Winkle stepped out of a 25 page sketch to become a citizen of the world.

That is the marvel of the 500 page volume called "The Sketch-Book"—which was published under the pseudonym of "Geoffrey Crayon," and which was the pride and pleasure of our great-grandparents, and is today a steady seller in two continents.

It has been said—and first said, I think, by Professor Smith of the Naval academy at Annapolis—that during the century of American literature which began with Washington Irving and his "Sketch-Book," our country has given to fiction six characters whom the world seems permanently to have adopted, whose names are universal coinage among persons old and young, gentle and simple, who can read, and whose attributes have become the equivalent of types everywhere existing and everywhere recognized. Rip was the first to step beyond our frontiers into this world-company. Cooper's Leatherstocking followed him. Then Mrs. Stowe's Uncle Tom, and Mark Twain's Tom Sawyer and Huckleberry Finn, and Joel Harris' Uncle Remus. All save Rip required books—some of them long books—to place them enduringly in the minds and affections of mankind. Less than seven thousand words gave Rip his universality and—as one loosely uses the word his—immortality. You could print the whole tale in a good deal less than a page of this newspaper. 'Tis among the most curious and most amazing things in literature—this vignette that possesses the vividness, the reality, and the completeness of an episodic painting covering square years of a gallery. Rip is as wholly known to us as Ulysses and Don Quixote and Vicar Primrose are known—and by far more of us, for we learn him, lock, stock and barrel, in a leisurely, happy hour.

It was so from the beginning. Eleven years after "The Sketch-Book" was published in England, Oxford gave Irving the degree of doctor of laws. One of the cries that greeted him from the students who were assembled in the senate hall to view the ceremony of installation was, "Has Rip Van Winkle waked up yet?"

"Rip Van Winkle," the gem among gems in this volume, possessed qualities bound to catch the general fancy. Theme and scene were fresh, the adventure curious, the style bewitching. But these gifts which an exquisite craftsman brought to bear on his work were supplemented by another, and it was that other which created this authentic masterpiece in little.

That gift was the gift for selection, and nowhere in Irving's many books is it more tellingly illustrated than in the fifth paragraph of this tale, where in fewer than 200 words he draws Rip at full length as huntsman, as citizen, and as the pathetic figure in society who has never found his work in the world and who, by being wholly reconciled to the deprivation, becomes a jovial figure:

The great error in Rip's composition was an insuperable aversion to all kinds of profitable labor. It could not be from the want of assiduity or perseverance; for he would sit on a wet rock, with a rod as long and heavy as a Tartar's lance, and fish all day without a murmur, even though he should not be encouraged by as much as a nibble. He would carry a fowling-piece on his shoulder for hours together, trudging through woods and swamps, and up hill and down dale, to shoot a few squirrels or wild pigeons. He would never refuse to assist a neighbor even in the roughest toil, and was a foremost man at all country frolics for husking Indian corn, or building stone fences; the women of the village, too, used to employ him to run their errands, and to do such little odd jobs as their less obliging husbands would not do for them. In a word, Rip was ready to attend to anybody's business but his own; but as to doing family duty, and keeping his farm in order, he found it impossible.

N. P. Willis who, along with a fluency that lured him into much shoddy writing, had the gift of happy phrases, never put together a happier one than when he wrote of Irving's "couchant humor and philosophic inevitableness of perception which form the strong undercurrent of his genius." Always he seems to be looking at life with genial wonderment; not weighed down by its perplexities, getting the savor and tang of them rather, and rolling each as a morsel under his tongue. He accepted life with the trustfulness of youth, but, even in the writings of his younger years, he surveys it with the sapiency of mellow age. It hath a thousand times been said that of all the characters in the imaginative literature of our language Rip has received the most affection and tolerance and has deserved the least. How does this come to pass? By the suavity with which Irving lays in the background of Rip's woes. Honest purpose, industry, sense of responsibility are possessed by Dame Van Winkle, but the expression of them is hard and unlovely. Rip's deficiencies are fundamental and comprehensive, but Rip as a fellow man is adorable because he is thoroughly reconciled to everything—including himself. He has inertia of perfect amiability, and there is no resisting that.

And Wolf, whom Joseph Jefferson and Dion Boucicault renamed Schneider in their stage version of the story—is not Wolf equally for all time?

. . . True it is, in all points of spirit befitting an honorable dog, he was as courageous an animal as ever scoured the woods; but what courage can withstand the ever-during and all-beating terrors of a woman's tongue? The moment Wolf entered the house his crest fell, his tail drooped to the ground, or curled between his legs, he sneaked about with a gallows air, casting many a sidelong glance at Dame Van Winkle, and at the least flourish of a broomstick or ladle he would fly to the door with a yelping precipitation.

I know no more deftly—because so reticently—managed effect in the literature of the American short story than the recurrence of the Wolf theme in "Rip Van Winkle." After Rip wakes from the long sleep—

Wolf, too, had disappeared, but he might have strayed away after a squirrel or a partridge. He whistled after him, and shouted his name, but all in vain; the echoes repeated his whistle and shout, but no dog was to be seen.

And then, when the old man descends into the village, this:

A half-starved dog that looked like Wolf was skulking about it. Rip called him by name, but the cur snarled, showed his teeth and passed on. This was an unkind cut indeed. "My very dog," sighed poor Rip, "has forgotten me!" . . . —he called loudly for his wife and children—the lonely chambers rang for a moment with his voice, and then all again was silent.

The pungent John Macy says in the aggressive little book called "The Spirit of American Literature" something about "Rip Van Winkle" which indicates that even John Macy can feel high regard for a work of art more than three weeks off the press. He says:

Irving's tale is so simple, so familiar, that in re-reading it one may easily take it for granted and not be struck by its genius. To be convinced that it is a masterpiece one needs but to reflect how infrequently such a tender weanling is adopted as the child of time. A little thing that happens seldom is important.

And for variety of matter, coupled with an urbane and ingratiating manner of presentation, is there another volume in our literature comparable to "The Sketch Book"? Among the four and thirty papers I find travel pictures, legends, tales of sentiment, sketches of rustic customs and festivals in England and of Indian annals in our country, easy-going excursions down byways of history and biography, literary musings, and the fragrant fancies and gnomic utterances of a mind well read, well traveled, well disposed. A being who never obtrudes himself, but who is always by our side with sagacious comment, or pensive retrospect, or pretty, fleeting imagery, accompanies us in these strollings—a being whom Longfellow, seeing him in Madrid when he was forty and writing Columbus," thus describes:

. . . all mirth and good humor. . . . a most beautiful countenance, and at the same time a very intellectual one. . . . some halting and hesitating in his conversation, and says very pleasant, agreeable things, in a husky, weak, peculiar voice.

About anything this companion of ours can be charming. I believe there never was another American writer who made so many boys fall in love with travel and with books as Irving did—and still does, I hope. Once he is standing with us in the Athenæum in Liverpool and he sees an old man enter the library—" a noble Roman style of countenance; a head that would have pleased a painter" . . . and eyes that "still beamed with the fire of a poetic soul." This is Roscoe, great citizen of Liverpool, great banker once, but now impoverished, and, for all time, great historian of the Medici. "I drew back," says our companion after hearing the name, "with an involuntary feeling of veneration." Then he tells us the sad but heroic story of Roscoe's misfortunes, and how the parting with his books "seems to have touched upon his tenderest feelings, and to have been the only circumstance that could provoke the notice of his muse." And while we are listening Irving drifts into one of the tenderest and most melodious passages of English known to me—a passage I so love that for many a year it has hung above the fireplace in my bookroom, whispering to me of the quiet friends there assembled:

The scholar only knows how dear these silent yet eloquent companions of pure thoughts and innocent hours become in the seasons of adversity. When all that is worldly turns to dross around us, these only retain their steady value. When friends grow cold, and the converse of intimates languishes into vapid civility and commonplace, these only continue the unaltered countenance of happier days, and cheer us with that true friendship which never deceived hope nor deserted sorrow.

Another time as we wander with him in the Highlands of the Hudson he takes to quizzing himself, a pastime in which he can be very droll, and he tells us how his admiration of a good fisherman's good writing once lured him into the decision to become a fisherman. But it was no go:

For my part, I was always a bungler at all kinds of sport that required either patience or adroitness, and had not angled above half an hour before I had completely "satisfied the sentiment," and convinced myself of the truth of Izaak Walton's opinion, that angling is something like poetry—a man must be born to it. I hooked myself instead of the fish; tangled my line in every tree; lost my bait; broke my rod; until I gave up the attempt in despair, and passed the day under the trees, reading old Izaak; satisfied that it was his fascinating vein of honest simplicity and rural feeling that had bewitched me and not the passion for angling.

Few reading men there be, I think, who are not fishermen, who have not gone through that experience—only to learn in half an hour that it was Izaak's book and not rod or line or pool that had baited the passion. And that is part of the charm of Irving—he is always so comfortably and genially of us and with us—always such good company. Godwin, the philosopher and agitator who wrote "Caleb Williams" once put it tellingly if pompously in some words he wrote about "The Sketch Book" when it was new—

The author powerfully conciliates himself to our kindness and affection . . . and one wonders, while reading, that nobody ever said this before.

"To have a secure and cherished though humble corner in the good opinions and kind feelings of his countrymen is the dearest wish of his heart," said Irving (writing in the third person) when he launched "The Sketch-Book." Thirty years passed and an American reviewer, whose name, unfortunately, is lost but whose words are preserved in Pierre Irving's life of his uncle, said, "Little did he then anticipate that 'the humble corner' he coveted in the affections of his countrymen should prove to be the most favored spot."

More than seventy years have passed since those sweet and spontaneous words came from the unknown pen. They still are true.

BOOK NEWS from LONDON

By Sidney Dark,

[Editor of John o' London's Weekly.]

LONDON, — [Special Correspondence.]—One thinks nowadays of John Masefield as the author of realistic narrative poems, often audacious in the use of the language of the streets, generally supremely successful in forcefulness and dramatic interest. I suppose that the "Daffodil Fields," "The Widow in the By-Street," "Dauber," and particularly "Raynard the Fox" have sold in larger numbers than any narrative poems written since Scott's "The Lady of the Lake." When Scott abandoned poetry and wrote "Waverley," the novel began its predominance as the most popular form of literary art. But Mr. Masefield's poems have certainly sold far better than the average English novel.

The recently published "Selected Poems" serves to remind us of the earlier Masefield, who loved the sea and who wrote of it with a charm and a knowledge that few modern poets have equaled. The selection begins with the admirable "Trade Winds," of which the two following stanzas are good to read again—and to remember:

I must go down to the seas again, for the call of the running tide
Is a wild call and a clear call that may not be denied;
And all I ask is a windy day with the white clouds flying,
And the flung spray and the blown spume and the seagulls crying.

I must go down to the seas again to the vagrant gypsy life,
To the gull's way and the whale's way where the wind's like a whetted knife;
And all I ask is a merry yarn from a laughing fellow rover,
And quiet sleep and a sweet dream when the long trick's over.

The Spectator has printed a long eulogy of the poetry of Emily Dickenson, the American poetess, who, it says, has written the finest poem ever written by a woman in the English language.

I referred last week to M. Victor Margueritte and his unpleasant novel, "La Garçonne," and doubtless America has already learned from the cables that, now that M. Margueritte is no longer hampered by the little red ribbon of the Legion d'Honneur in his buttonhole he has declared his determination to go on writing novels about nasty people and nasty things and to be even more "frank" and "daring." There is, of course, a large market in France for super-realistic fiction. As compared with England—even with America—sales of French novels are always large, but it must always be remembered that the untranslated French novel is read all over the continent of Europe. There are always more French than Italian novels in book shops in Italian cities. In this connection it is interesting to note that "Maria Chapdelaine," that exquisite story of French Canadian life—chaste, religious, intensely human—has sold in hundreds of thousands in French and has been translated into every European language. Its author, Louis Hémon, left two unpublished novels which are to be issued this year.

Jane Austen's unfinished story, "The Watsons" is shortly to be published with an introduction by A. B. Walkley, the theatrical critic of the Times.

I wonder how many Americans know that Pierre Augustin Caron de Beaumarchais, author of "The Barber of Seville" and "The Marriage of Figaro," plays made familiar by the genius of Rossini and Mozart, had a great deal to do with stirring up the French enthusiasm for the American revolution which caused Louis XVI. to send Lafayette across the Atlantic. Subsequently Beaumarchais made a good deal of money out of America. At one time he owned a fleet of forty ships which carried munitions from France and Spain to Washington's army. It is curious how often revolutions have been fomented and hastened by the most unlikely persons. Beaumarchais, whose story is retold by John Rivers in his "Figaro, or the Life of Beaumarchais," was a witty, light hearted adventurer, unquestionably the model on which his famous Barber was founded—in character another Tartuffe, and yet, as I have said, America owed French support largely to his persistent agitation.

BEAUMARCHAIS, [Saint-Aubin Engraving.] [Cochin Portrait.]

A. S. M. Hutchinson protests that he really has not earned so much money as the paragraphists credit him with.

AMAZING SALE

World-Famous Pocket Series Offered Until February 28 at Sensational Reduction! Size of Books 3½x5 inches. Books Printed Uniformly; Bound in Heavy Card Cover Stock. For Limited Time We Are Cutting Price to 5c per Book in Order to Make an Important Experiment that May Establish New Publishing Standards!

5 Only C Per Book Until Feb. 28

I have sold 25,000,000 copies of my pocket series in three years. Over 500,000 book buyers are now on my mailing list—the greatest aggregation of book buyers in the world. After careful investigation I find that it cost approximately a million dollars to sell these 25,000,000 books. That means that for every dime I received I had to spend five cents in order to make the sale. So I have really been getting only five cents for each book I sold so far. I have solved the production problem—I produce these books at an astonishingly low cost. The actual cost above the price of raw material is very slight indeed. This is because of especially made machinery that makes a joke of production problems. Mass production has cut the cost of the book, but distribution costs remain the same—5c per book. That is the problem I am working on now, and I may solve it. I have a plan which I intend to try out with readers of this announcement, and if it works I shall then go to the general public. Everything depends on this present announcement. It must "make good," or the price will remain 10c per copy after February 28, 1923. In brief, what I must do is simply this: The sales cost per book must be reduced from 5c per book to 1c per book. That means we must get five times as much business on the same advertising and distribution outlay. Am I asking too much? That remains to be seen. The response to this amazing announcement will decide the question. There is nothing so convincing as an actual test, and that is the real reason for this special sale.

Books—Lighthouses erected in the great sea of time.—WHIPPLE.

BOOKS

Laws die; books never.—BULWER LYTTON.

By Fanny Butcher.

"PHANTOM," is the title of Gerhart Hauptmann's latest novel to be translated into English—a title at once all revealing and all concealing. It is all revealing after one has read the book. Beforehand nothing could give an impression more removed from the one which the story gives. It suggests something fragile, dainty, charming—the sort of thing that Knut Hamsun did in "Pan," perhaps. Instead it is a sinister phantom which it reveals.

"Phantom" is the story of a love which makes a man mad, a study of abnormal psychology—ruthless in its revelations but tender in its effect. Mr. Hauptmann has chosen the autobiographical method of telling his story, a method which is almost perfect for the effect which he aims to produce. So delicate a master of his technique is he that you find yourself seeing into the innermost depths of a human soul without a qualm. He does a trick which many another would bungle. He tells a story from which many another would squeeze emotion and degradations and all sorts of sentimental bunkombe. He writes a story of the nauseating depths to which humankind may sink, and it has the cleanness and clearness and beauty of a tale of the most exalted passion. That is exactly what it was—exalted passion which drove the hero literally out of himself and into another form. From a timid, limping, studious government clerk, living in the most circumscribed manner possible, with an old mother whom he adored, to an accomplice in a crime revolting, cynical, hideous, he is driven by love.

It is a love of a peculiar kind—he sees a beautiful child, the daughter of wealthy parents. Fired by a sudden and inexplicable worship of her, he becomes—a madman. He writes verses—which he shows to a gentle old man and his daughter. The old bookbinder, assuming the rôle of critic says they are as wonderful as Schiller's and sends them to a famous journal, from which they are returned, but the maddened youth forgets they have not been printed.

He is a great poet—it is his wish-fulfilment. He tells his aunt, a rich old pawnbroker, of his new estate, and, also fulfilling his yearning, he tells her he has been looked upon with favor by the parents of a beautiful and wealthy maiden. The old aunt gives him money and from that moment he becomes a parasite, more and more lecherlike as the days go by, lower and lower morally, and yet always, somehow, he is exalted in his own mind.

He makes a mad visit to the parents of the child, who recognize his malady and humor him. Then he happens upon a woman who, to his disordered mind, seems to be a message from the child he loves—she resembles the child, although she is a creature neither too bright nor good, as the child of his adoration seems to him. He enters upon a mental debauch with her, meanwhile having made the lowest possible friends for himself and having delivered his sister from the arms of one lover into the most debasing servitude to his so called friend.

This man, who also lessens the tedium of the rich aunt's life, plans a clever robbery of the old woman, and makes certain that it shall not be detected by seeing to it himself that she shall not be disturbed during the night. The robbery turns into a murder of the old woman, and they all go to prison.

While in prison the hero awakes from his madness. When he comes out he marries the quiet, gentle daughter of the old bookbinder, and they all go to some indeterminate little town and buy a shop and settle down among the rustic peaces. His wife and father-in-law still believe he is a great creative genius. To free his mind he has set down the whole story of his life.

A tale of greater degradation it is impossible to imagine. But a less degraded one is impossible to find. It is a strong, beautiful thing. It is a story of spiritual resurrection. If the emphasis is placed upon the months in the depths of the foulness it is because a psychic catharsis is taking place in the book. Throughout there is the quiet background of a soul comfortably at peace after the horrors of its utmost torments. And against this background are splashes of lurid genius.

"Phantom" is not, you see, the delicate and lovely thing that its title might intimate. It is, however, in one sense a beautiful thing. Technically it is somewhere near a masterpiece. It is amazing how Mr. Hauptmann has succeeded in preserving the feeling of complete rebirth even through the most nauseating moments. His hero is a sane man reviewing, with the charity of a kind judge, but with that judge's search for justice, the causes of his madness. To know all is to forgive all, he says, thus echoing a modern doctrine.

If there is a line of sogginess or sentimentality in "Phantom" I did not see it. Hauptmann draws no veils over the sordid and disgusting details. Nor does he rhapsodize. The love of a lowly clerk for a child whom he never even spoke to would have been in the hands of some writers, material for a highly romantic tale. In his it is simply material for a highly skillful and technically beautiful realistic novel, a story of the reality of a spiritual rebirth from the equally real reality of a great madness.

Help! Help!

T. S. Eliot, who was crowned with The Dial's laureis this year, is the parent of a volume which is called "The Waste Land." It is a long poem about—well, we must admit that we don't know what it is about. It seems to us a bad example of the thing that Gertrude Stein did years ago and that Dorothy Richardson and James Joyce do now to the despair of the plain clothes sleuth of literature. It seems to us a good example of the worst possible disease that modern literature suffers from—egomania.

It is a long poem—with notes—which seems to be a dumping of the contents of his mind into print by a man who labors under the prevalent delusion that the contents of any one's mind are interesting to the world. There is no selection. There seems to be no attempt to approach that hodgepodge with any of the skill that we used to display when we played jackstraws. He sees a pile of ideas, and he yanks one out. Upon it there fall countless others, unrelated, making a little hump of ideas themselves, from which he pulls another—and so on.

Taken separately, and with the help of the notes and using an enormous imagination in clothing the ideas with a poetic concept, each line, or each three or four words may be pregnant with meaning, but how there can be any design or rhythm [in the sense of the flowingness of a poetic concept, not in the technical sense of a beat every so often] how there can be any poetic stimulation in something that is chiefly a picture puzzle or ideas we cannot see. It may be granted that an unsolvable thing is a constant delight—like Thomas Bailey Aldrich's comment on Samuel F. B. Morse's letters [or Mr. Morse's on Mr. Aldrich's—don't remember which], but that it is poetry is certainly a debatable question in which we, for one, would take a loud and vociferous negative. The most poetic line in the whole thing is

Those are pearls that were his eyes—and that line, I believe, was written by Mr. William Shakespeare some time ago.

There is an echo of Vachel Lindsay's method in

O O O O that Shakespeherian Rag—
It's so elegant,
So intelligent,

and also a travesty on the modern jazz song, but to find it simply sitting pretty [as the gobs used to say] in the midst of a serious bunch of ideas. . .

And the same thing may be said of what the notes proclaim to be the echo of an Australian ballad.

The moon shone bright on Mrs. Porter
And on her daughter,
They wash their feet in soda water.

And if this means anything in the world to anybody, we cry, like Harvey Woodruff in his Wake of the News,

Help! Help!
Twit twit twit
Jug jug jug jug jug jug
So rudely forc'd
Tereu.

We grant that "The Waste Land may be a treasure chest of erudition We grant that it may be a box of highly intellectualized ideas. We grant that it may be wholly over our heads and that we may be one of the dumbsters who rail against all progress. But that it is poetry we will not grant. It's the same sort of thing that Peter Whiffle thought of doing when he was going to write the world's greatest book by putting down single words at random, catalogues of objects. And his book was to be about "the names of the things I have collected. It is to be about three hundred pages." That's what "The Waste Land" is about—the things Mr. Eliot has collected and forty-nine pages.

Like the Good Old Days.

James Elroy Flecker died in 1915, the victim, I believe, of tuberculosis. He has, however, always stood in the minds of his admirers in that august group of young Elizabethans who saluted us as they were about to die, who sang as they went to keep their rendezvous with death. They became a legend. In their dying they lived more vividly than in their living.

The years are swift in their work. That war—that holy war which was going to make the world a better place to live in, that war which was to end war—seems now little more than a sickness from which the world is not convalescing so well as might be expected. But the years haven't as yet more than touched that legend. We are too near to it psychologically to be unprejudiced critics of their work, although there is a voice now and then that says Rupert Brooke wasn't the greatest English poet of his period nor Alan Seeger the greatest American and that Maj. McCrea's "In Flanders Fields" was the only thing of significance which he ever wrote.

They are a cult, these young immortals, and of them there is no one more avidly praised than James Elroy Flecker. I read a volume of his poems in the first flare of his adoration, and I confess they seemed much like all the rest of the poetry that all the rest of the intense young men of his day were doing, a little more exotic, mayhap, and I decided that he was perhaps a trifle "precious" for me.

Then a few weeks ago there came "Hassan," a play in five acts. Its accusing face smote me as I passed it time after time, and took its neighbors from the shelf. I finally decided to read it just so I wouldn't have it staring at me thus. When it was finished I was a convert. I still think Mr. Flecker is "precious" and that his work can never have a large audience, but for the few who like the vivid colors and emotions of a highly poetized prose and a tale of Arabian Nightish contracts, "Hassan" is a find.

It concerns the sudden rise of an old confectioner to the high places of Bagdad and his sudden fall into the simple life of a confectioner. It concerns great deeds of daring by the King of the Robbers who has sworn to avenge the purchase of his love of the mountains by the caliph by nailing him down in his coffin, alive, "with his eyes staring into mine." It concerns the planned revolution of the beggars under his leadership—a revolution with a battle cry of "You have begged—you shall buy; you have fawned—you shall fight; you have plotted—you shall plunder; you have cringed—you shall kill. Copper they flung to us, and steel we shall give them back; good steel of Damascus, that digs a narrow hole and deep," a battle cry that might have been used in the French revolution. It concerns two love idylls, one coarse and outspoken, the bought love of a Yasmin for whomsoever; and the love of Pervenah for Rafi which life could not buy, which only time after death could touch.

It contains much beauty, much color, much passion, and much real poetry. It reminds me of that vivid pantomime which startled our staid city, "Sumurun." It is as colorful, as horrible, and as beautiful as that, but with the added romance of words which reach at times a height of poetic ecstasy. It is a tale of adventure served o'er with tyranny. It is an ancient tale modernized with the consciousness of the injustice of the powerful.

He Is Amusing.

Every one who has ever wondered where Reginald got its meaning can find out in a most charming little volume of essays or whatever one might call them—chats, maybe—by Saki, that brilliant H. H. Munro who was killed in the war and left England and English literature bereft of one of its few really gay writers.

Reginald is a gentleman who requires more than mental exertion. One can never tell what he will do, though one may be certain he'll say just the thing one hoped he wouldn't. There are many readers who will cast Reginald off without a shilling of reading because he's so worthless. I recommend him, however, to those of you who don't care whether the gentlemen they meet in books are devoted to the sincere life or not, so long as they are amusing. It's Saki, you know, who wrote those delightful "Toys of Peace."

Frederick Harrison Dead.

In the ninety-second year of a life full of good works—literarily—Frederick Harrison died on Jan. 14, a venerable and fine figure, sturdy mentally and physically until his death. He was the last of the great Victorians, a friend of Ruskin, Tennyson, and the others. He was an historian, a biographer, a philosopher, a teacher, a scholar, and a gentleman. His first book, "The Meaning of History," was published in 1862, and his last, "Novissima Verba," a collection of editorials on war and peace, in some of which he vigorously opposed the league of nations, was published in 1926.

Work Among the Blind.

Almost simultaneously with her marriage Miss Winifred Holt, founder of Lighthouses, national and international, saw her name again in the book review columns. "The Light Which Cannot Fail" she has called her new book, which describes the romances, the tragedies, and the heroic deeds of the blind with whom she has come in contact in many lands. The book has an introductory letter by the late Viscount Bryce—who was an ardent admirer of her work, and in its appendix are letters from the queen of Italy, Admiral Sims, and others of international fame. Miss Holt opened Lighthouse No. 1 in New York while our old friend William Howard Taft was President. Since then she has started eight other beacons for the blind, including those in Poland, in France, and in Italy.

Ah! Wolfville Again.

A new edition of Wolfville has just been brought out. When it was published in 1897 it was one of the most popular books of its day, and Alfred Henry Lewis was more talked about than Zane Grey is today.

All About Nothing.

W. L. George is fed up on the psychological novel.

He writes: "A horrid weakness seems to me to run today through many of the novels of the young men of my time, who round about 1910 were so full of critical energy. The stuff wanders on without a plot, without a story; characters that we care not at all for are analyses and analyses until their emptiness is exposed. . . . As for the new people, the young people of the 1918-1922 era, whereas their seniors show mainly dry bones, these exhibit mainly shadow; impressions while sitting in a hot bath; the emotional quality of the color of ice cream. The vibration of the hair of the girl who serves the ice cream. I am so tired of these books about nothing. People do things quite as much as they think things; it is more interesting to watch a man at work than to watch him meditate in an armchair."

All of which may—or may not—be propaganda for his "Her Unwelcome Husband," which he says has "a plot, a real plot, with incidents, surprises, and conflicts."

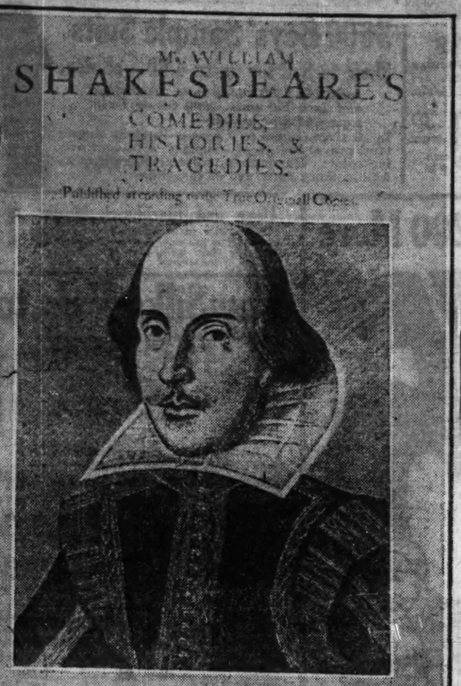
We Do Our Best.

A correspondent asks us to print announcements of the arrival of interesting literary figures. She says she always reads about them after they've gone. We'll do our best, but what with the shrinking violetness of publishers and authors alike, we never know ourselves until they appear. If we can persuade our local societies to tell us well in advance when they're having James Harvey Robinson or Mr. "Cowboy" Rollins or Ludwig Lewisohn or Zona Gale or Amy Lowell or whomsoever, we'll be more than happy to pass the news on. The only news we have this week is that M. Coue will speak at Orchestra hall on Tuesday morning and on Tuesday afternoon, as well as on Wednesday afternoon and evening, and that Dr. Alexander Irvine will speak tomorrow evening at Sinai Social center on "Victor Hugo and His Prophetic Message."



This is a facsimile of the title page of the first folio Shakespeare, registered Nov. 8, 1623. It is taken from the copy in the New York public library.

CONFESSIONS

When I asked Henry Kitchell Webster one day what book he would rather have written than any other, he said, "Gil Blas," and when I asked him a little later to "put it in writing," he wrote:

Dear Fanny Butcher: Did I really say I'd rather have written "Gil Blas" than any other novel? I must have been feeling unusual picaresque that afternoon. On another day I might have said "Emma" or "The Awkward Age," or "Huckleberry Finn." However, I'm perfectly satisfied to stick to "Gil Blas."

Yours most sincerely,
H. K. Webster

My Dear Miss Butcher:

The three Tahitian natives bearing the little gem to "my Donat" might have saved themselves a long journey. I read it somewhere ages ago. I don't blame you, with your multitudinous affairs. But how it ever got by the Stevensonian society is what gets me.

Yours truly, F. L. N.

LOGANSPORT, IND.

My Dear Miss Butcher:

I was much interested in the little tribute you recently paid to Myra Kelly of blessed memory. You know, I suppose, although you did not say so, that she died a year after what promised to be an unusually happy marriage. It always seemed to me the irony of ironies that a woman who had devoted the best years of her life to the guiding of the children of the slums and who was a real guardian angel to the budding Abes and Mawruses of the East Side, should have given up her life in giving birth to one of her own.

Very sincerely yours, M. M.

CHICAGO, ILL.

Dear Miss Butcher:

I hope they will not forget to season the Children's book list with "Pepper and Salt," by Howard Pyle.

Sincerely yours, ETHEL PRESTON.

It shall live (in the rare moments when I am not so engaged) on a shelf hallowed by a first edition of 'The Napoleon of Notting Hill'; for in my opinion Miss Rose Macaulay has produced the wisest and wittiest extravaganza which has appeared since that cherished masterpiece."

GOING UP

The price of farm products rose some 9% between August and November last. During the same period all commodities gained 1% (Prices computed by U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics). This shows a distinct tendency that the outlook is good. You can't go wrong on a farm no wat the right price.

AUTOMOBILES—GASOLINE.

Bird-Sykes Co.

20 YEARS ON MICHIGAN-AV.

2215 Michigan-av.

Paige and Jewett

WHEN BIRD-SYKES SAY:

"REBUILT."

They do not mean merely "altered up," "tightened up," and "tuned up." "REBUILT" in the Bird-Sykes shop means actually disassembling each unit; examining engine, transmission, rear axle, and other vital parts and completely rebuilding the same using new parts where necessary.

Coach work, which includes removing body and fender dents, re-covering worn tops, repairing and fitting of curtains, also upholstery, etc., is accomplished by experts in our own shops.

Every "Bird-Sykes Rebuilt" car is given a high grade paint job. Every "Rebuilt" car is thoroughly tested to meet our rigid standards and is guaranteed for 6 months. If anything turns up unsatisfactory within a reasonable time, Bird-Sykes Co. will make good without cost to purchaser.

We are not financed by so-called automobile bankers. Purchaser deals with us direct, as we have no interest to charge, and consequently is not charged exorbitant "finance" rates. You can have cars on liberal terms from us, paying usual bank interest, 6% on deferred payments and cost of insurance.

MARMON, TOURING, 1926, MODEL 34. This car is identical in appearance with the Marmon of today. It shows exceptionally fine care. Looks like new. Has dark maroon color. Mechanical condition above criticism. Motor is quiet. This car is guaranteed by us. Subject to factory demonstration. The coach work and tires are exceptionally fine. Rarely is a car as fine as this one offered to the public for so little money. It represents a tremendous saving as compared with the price of a new one today. Your quick action will be appreciated. You would avail yourself of this bargain. Do not let the price that we have put on it influence your judgment as it is being sacrificed for immediate sale. Price, $950.

STUDEBAKER SEDAN 1921 BIG SIX— This is the car that sells new today for slightly over $3,000, with the same equipment that this has on it. It has just been refinished a beautiful Dark Blue. Tires are practically brand new. Mechanically it runs very smoothly and quietly. It will be impossible to describe this car in such a way as to do it justice. Really must be seen to be appreciated. Riding in it and driving in it will convince you that it is an exceptionally good bargain at our price of $1,375.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, COUPE. We have just received this car from our refinishing department and we do not believe that you could tell it from a new one. It is a very late 1922 model and as this car has never been abused or mistreated in any way, it is painted a beautiful Dustproof Gray, with black running gear. The coach work is excellent. Mechanically we believe it to be way above the average. The upholstery and general condition is almost like new. It is equipped with a set of Westinghouse shock absorbers, spare tire and much other extra equipment, and the ride in it today because it will not stay in our possession long at our price of $1,350.

PEERLESS 1920 SEDAN. This car is like new. It has been owned by a very prominent Chicago man and has always been serviced in our own shop. It runs smoothly and quietly and will carry the standard guarantee of this company. Do not put this car in your mind as the ordinary used automobile, because it is far above the average and ready to go out and perform continuously for thousands of miles without being constantly in need of repairs. REAL ESTATE NEWS

SOON TO BUILDING NEW HOSPITAL FOR WEST SIDE

Will Overlook Columbus Park in Austin.

Work will get under way early in March on a six story hospital to be built at the northeast corner of Central avenue and Flournoy street in Austin, overlooking Columbus park. Those interested in the project believe the hospital will be ready to receive patients by December. The building, which was designed by Architect J. E. O. Pridmore, will involve a total expenditure, fully equipped of $500,000. There will be three wings, and the first unit, comprising the two front wings, will cost about $387,000 equipped.

DR. B. L. RAMSAY.

The corner on which the hospital will stand fronts 120 feet in Central avenue and 200 feet in Flournoy. Across the street, at the southeast corner, work will start after construction of the hospital, on a nurses' home to be completed in December.

The institution will be known as the Austin hospital and its affairs will be conducted by the Austin Hospital association, to be incorporated with a capital stock of $235,000. The project will be financed temporarily by the sale of $200,000 in preferred stock. The 3,500 shares of common stock have already been taken up by members of the association.

Dr. B. L. Ramsay, originator of the idea and one of the principal promoters, will be the chief surgeon. He has appointed a board of directors comprising twenty business men and Mrs. Lizzie Oliphant, who will have direct charge of business affairs.

The hospital will be for the general public. There will be 141 rooms with 191 beds. Each of the floors will have complete equipment with special attention given to the obstetrical department on the fifth floor. On each floor will be a solarium where convalescing patients may gather.

Legal details in connection with the organization of the association and erection of the hospital are being taken care of by McCormick, Kirkland, Patterson & Fleming.

WILL ERECT NEW $300,000 HOTEL IN ROGERS PARK

An attractive three story residential hotel to contain seventy-five rooms, each with bath, is announced this week by Harry Rubloff, real estate man and builder. The building will be in Loyola avenue, 150 feet west of Sheridan road, north front, 100x151, facing the Loyola avenue elevated station, and will represent an investment, including the land, of $300,000.

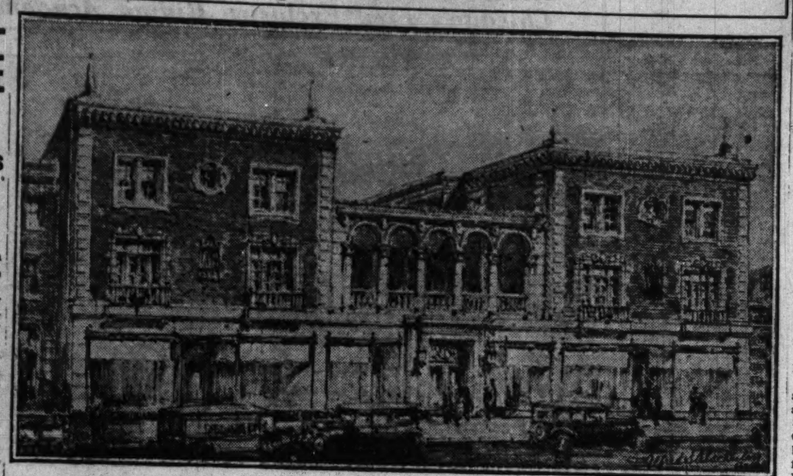
Work will get under way immediately, with a view to completion this fall. There will be six stores on the first floor, with unusually large rooms above. These will be equipped with all modern conveniences, including indoor beds and other appointments. In the center above the first story will be an outdoor court with fountain, with a plaza in the front. The building will be of brick and terra cotta exterior of the Italian type of architecture, according to the architect, Alfred S. Alschuler.

Mr. Rubloff will lease the hotel to one tenant, and will handle the renting of the stores himself. He has selected no name for the new building, but will probably call it the Loyola—as distinctive perhaps, but at least descriptive.

C. M. D. ISSUES SURVEY.

In the annual number of the Central Manufacturing District Magazine, published this week, is a comprehensive survey of the 239 industries comprising the district, compiled by Robert McKnight. There are twenty-three food producing concerns, seventeen iron and steel corporations, thirteen rubber firms, ten dealers in building materials, nine electrical concerns, nine manufacturers and dealers in machinery, and nine manufacturers and dealers in chemicals, according to this survey. The number also contains a directory of the different industries and an index of all firms using the Chicago Junction railway.

Uptown's Newest Hotel



Architect Alfred S. Alschuler has prepared plans for this three story residential hotel, to be known as the Loyola, which Harry Rubloff will erect opposite the "L" station on the south side of Loyola, 150 feet west of Sheridan road, 100x151. Work will get under way immediately. The building and land will cost $300,000. The hotel will have 75 furnished rooms, and there will be six stores on the first floor. The structure will be of the Italian type, brick and terra cotta exterior, with a large court in the center. A plaza in front of the court and a running fountain will add to the attractiveness of the structure.

BUILDING HEIGHT USED AS SUBJECT FOR NEW VOLUME

Charles M. Nichols, chairman of the zoning committee of the Chicago Real Estate board, announces that the transcript of the hearings of the subcommittee of the board on the height of buildings has been rearranged and edited and will be available in book form after Feb. 14. The volume, which is entitled "Studies on Building Height Limitations in Large Cities," was compiled and edited by Mr. Nichols and Jacob L. Crane Jr., technical adviser of the zoning committee of the board, and is invaluable to those interested in the subject.

In addition to the reports of the hearings, which have been grouped rather than arranged chronologically, there is an interesting preface written by Edward M. Bassett of New York, probably the leading authority on the subject in the country. There is also an introductory note by Mr. Nichols and an explanation of the purpose of the investigation by Mr. Crane.

The edition will be limited, of 1,000 to 1,200 copies, and only about 500 of these will be available to the public. The price will be $2.50 a volume. The work is published by the library of the board.

"Y" Announces Plans for Next R. E. Course

Second semester courses in real estate law and conveyancing, given by the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce in cooperation with the Chicago Real Estate board, will open Feb. 6. These courses, which extend over a period of seventeen weeks, will follow a general outline similar to those of the first semester, including weekly lectures by competent realtors.

George F. Nixon is chairman of the committee of the Chicago Real Estate board in charge of the course, with Arthur B. Hall and Louis T. Orr as associates on the committee. Harold L. Reeve, LL. M., will continue as instructor.

Contractor Will Build Cottages for Glencoe

Frederick A. Cooper, contractor and builder, acting for a syndicate, has purchased through Gilbert D. Johnson & Brother the block of residential vacant bounded by Grove, Hazel, Bluff and South avenues in Glencoe, with the exception of one lot, from William H. Mulholand. Mr. Cooper will start work immediately on the construction of a number of high grade two story English and colonial cottages. The property is within a block of the Skokie Country club and only a short distance from the Glencoe station.

$500,000 Austin Hospital

The Austin Hospital association will begin work early in March on a six story hospital at the northeast corner of Central avenue and Flournoy street. There will be 141 rooms for patients, with 191 beds. Dr. B. L. Ramsay will be the chief surgeon. The entire project will represent an investment of $500,000. The first unit, comprising the two front wings, will be completed by December. The structure, which overlooks Columbus park, was designed by Architect J. E. O. Pridmore. More is told of the project in another column.

Selfridge Sells N. Wells Public Garage; $57,500

H. Gordon Selfridge of London has sold to John T. Saracino the public garage at 1523-27 North Wells street, 80x160, for a reported $57,500, subject to $25,000. Chandler, Hildreth & Co. were the brokers. The purchaser, who is president of the Central Auto Service company, holds a lease on the property at $5,000 a year, with nine years yet to run. He is said to have subleased at $8,400 annually. The garage was obtained by Mr. Selfridge from Edward Walle Jr. last year in part payment for his summer home at Lake Geneva, Wis.

BUYS SUBSTATION SITE.

The Commonwealth Edison company has bought the property at 810-14 Rush street, with old improvements, from P. J. Sexton for $80,000, to be used as the site of a substation. Crowe Bros. & Co. represented the seller.

WILSON AVENUE CORNER LEASED, $15,000 YEARLY

Uptown Chicago and the Wilson avenue district come in for their share of activity in an unusually busy week in the realty field with the announcement of the closing of a lease on the southeast corner of Wilson and Clifton, adjoining the Wilson avenue elevated station on the west. Carter H. Harrison, William Preston Harrison, and Heaton Owsley, as trustees, are the lessors. John S. Bayes, vice president of Cochran & McCluer, represented the lessors in negotiations, and Joseph O. Kaplan acted for the lessees.

The lease is for a thirty year term at a total rental of $465,000, or $15,500 annually. The corner, which fronts 80 feet in Wilson and 125 feet in Clifton, is improved with a two story building with five stores on the first floor and four apartments above. The lessee company will occupy the corner store and will sublease the remainder of the building.

The steady advance of values in the district is shown through the several transfers of the property during the last quarter of a century. Harking back to 1901, records show that it sold at that time, unimproved, for $8,500. Seven years later George Devatence bought it at a $5,000 advance, and after improving it with the present building, sold it to the Harrison interests for $47,500 in 1910, or barely more than three times its present annual rental. Capitalizing this rental on a 5 per cent basis gives a leasing value of $310,000, or nearly $4,000 a front foot on Wilson.

POMANDER GATE, 12 STORIES, FOR 15-17 EAST ELM

Pomander Gate has been selected as the name for the latest of the ultra high grade apartment hotels to be erected on the near north side. Reborn, Wentworth & Dewey, Inc., have been retained by Dr. Dan U. Cameron to draw plans for the structure, which will be built at 15-17 East Elm street. The land on which it will stand is L-shaped and fronts 50 feet in Elm, with a depth of 146 feet and a rear frontage of 110 feet.

The building will be twelve stories, with twenty-two two-room, fifty-one three-room and forty-one four-room apartments, all with hotel service. The suites with housekeeping facilities will have dining alcoves served by electric grills, thus permitting the privacy of a home with the conveniences of hotel service at the same time.

The larger portion of the building will be in the center of the block with an unobstructed view to the east. In the rear an Italian garden will be laid out, which will probably be connected with the Latin quarter in Cedar street by gateways.

The name, Pomander Gate, was inspired by the three story covered driveway, which will extend from the entrance through the building directly to the elevator lobby.

The company operating the hotel will be announced later. The architects are still working on the drawings, but it is expected that work will get under way within sixty days. The structure will cost about $1,000,000, and the apartments will be rented at $100 to $200 monthly.

BUILDING FIVE TWO-APARTMENTS.

Architect Paul F. Gerhardt has completed plans and bids are now being taken on five two story apartment buildings to be erected at the northwest corner of 80th street and Luella avenue, for Frank M. Wilson. The buildings will cost $100,000 and will be ready for occupancy about May 1.

REAL ESTATE NEWS

PAYS HIGH RENT FOR RESTAURANT IN WEST MADISON

Raklios Leases Former Stillson Space.

Rumors to the effect that Harry Moir, president of the Moir Hotel company, owners of the Morrison hotel, would extend his hostelry to Dearborn street, to include the site of the Hartford building, southwest corner of Madison and Dearborn streets, were nailed yesterday by an announcement by W. D. Cousin, manager of the Moir properties, that John Raklios & Co. had taken a lease on the store at 59-61 West Madison street for a term of several years, at a graduated rental of approximately $500,000 for the term. While there is a cancellation clause in the lease, of course, this privilege cannot be exercised for a number of years.

The space just leased, fronting about thirty feet, with a depth of 100 feet, comprises a store formerly occupied as a men's wear shop and a part of the ground floor space recently vacated by Stillson's when that famous old restaurant was closed. There still remains of the Stillson space a store at 57 West Madison and the Dearborn street frontage, formerly occupied by the coffee shop, in addition to the entire second floor.

Twenty-sixth Restaurant.

Raklios & Co. will remodel the store just leased at a cost of $70,000, after which they will occupy it with their twenty-sixth restaurant. Most of the twenty-five stores now in operation are in the loop. While the rental is undoubtedly high, the lease was closed by Raklios & Co. only after an extensive survey and count of pedestrian traffic convinced them that a greater volume of this business could be done there during a twenty-four hour day than in any other block in the loop.

According to Mr. Cousin, this is the highest rental ever paid on Madison street, and probably equals rentals paid for most inside stores in State street. Mr. Cousin was assisted in concluding negotiations and closing the lease by George P. Chiagouris of George P. Chiagouris & Co. Thomas Sims attended to legal matters for the lessee and Campbell & Fisher acted for the Moir interests.

Offers for Other Space.

Offers also have been received for the remaining store space vacated by Stillson's and these stores probably will be rented in the near future. Negotiations are also pending for renting the second floor to a bank, in which event one of the stores probably would be used as a street entrance. Should these negotiations fall through, the space upstairs probably will be divided and leased to investment houses or a large insurance company, applications having already been received. Mr. Cousin has had several opportunities to rent out the space for other uses, but has refused, being convinced that the character of the tenancy he wishes will benefit the property to an extent that will more than make up for the sacrifice in rentals. A temporary lease has just been closed with the Lueder campaign committee for occupancy during the mayoralty campaign.

OIL COMPANIES BUY SITES FOR 5 STATIONS HERE

The Standard Oil company has bought the southwest corner of Kedzie and Montrose, 154x125, from Julius Grinker, Charles M. Friend and Charles F. Lowy for a filling station for an indicated $60,000. The company has also purchased the southeast corner of Kedzie and 39th from Julius Teich, John D. Curtin taking title, for $25,000.

The Sinclair Refining company has acquired three additional corners for filling stations, according to deeds filed for record this week. The northeast corner of Hyde Park boulevard and Ellis avenue, 164x62½, was purchased from Wallace G. Clark for $25,000; the northeast corner of Garfield boulevard and Princeton avenue, 163x110½, from Charles A. Weeks for $19,215, and the southwest corner of Ashland and Austin avenues, 100x105, from Hugo D. Loeb for $10,500.

National Association Honors Chicago Men

Hiram Cody of this city, who is treasurer of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, was appointed chairman of the mortgage and finance division of the National association at the midwinter convention held recently in Jacksonville. James W. Belanger was also given the chairmanship of the property management division. Other Chicago men who were honored in the appointments included Louis B. Beardslee, who was made vice chairman of the industrial division; J. Soule Warterfield, vice chairman of the executive secretaries' division; and I. Whiteson, who was made a member of the board of governors of the home builders' and subdividers' division.

ROCK ISLAND TO BUILD NEW STATION. The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railroad has taken title from Edgar A. Bunnell to 66x200 adjoining the railroad at 125th street in Blue Island, on which a suburban station will be built. The land is said to be a gift from a Blue Island broker on condition that a station be opened there. There are now stations at 119th and 127th streets.

New 20-Story Loop Skyscraper

This $8,000,000 skyscraper, twenty stories, has been designed by D. H. Burnham & Co., architects and engineers, to replace the old Metropolitan block, northwest corner of Randolph and La Salle streets. Work will be started in the near future, and it is expected to have the building ready for occupancy by May 1, 1924. Starrett Bros. have the general contract. The corner, 120x180, together with the adjoining 42x180, was purchased this week by the Courts Building corporation, in which Hubert and Daniel H. Burnham hold the controlling interest, through Frederick T. Hoyt. The building, which will be known as the Burnham, as a tribute to the late Daniel H. Burnham, will be set back twenty feet on the La Salle street frontage to provide for eventual widening of the street. Robert White & Co., associated with Mr. Hoyt, will manage the building.

Chicago's First Exclusive Riding Academy

Ralph C. Harris and Byron H. Jillson are the architects for the new riding academy to be built at the southeast corner of 53d and Cottage Grove, 108x150, the first structure of this type of such pretensions, according to the owner, M. A. Carroll, to be erected in Chicago. All the features of a clubhouse will be incorporated, in addition to the riding ring. Work is getting under way now, with a view to completion for occupancy by June 1. The proposition will represent a total investment of $175,000.

RIDING ACADEMY OF CLASSY STYLE FOR SOUTH SIDE

Possibly the public is becoming more interested in the sport—or possibly the demand for riding masters has reached proportions exceeding the supply. Anyway, this city is soon to have its first high grade building erected for and devoted exclusively to a riding academy. Work is under way, and it is hoped to have the building ready for use within four months.

The next structure will be at the southeast corner of 53d street and Cottage Grove avenue, and will represent a total investment, including the land, of approximately $175,000. The land fronts 150 feet on the avenue and 108 feet on 53d.

M. A. Carroll, president of the Washington Park Storage, and well known as a horseman and exhibitor of blooded stock, is the owner, and Ralph C. Harris and Byron H. Jillson are the architects and will supervise the construction of the building.

In addition to the riding ring, which will accommodate 200 horses and riders, there will be included all the features of a high class club. Among other features the building will contain a women's lounge, men's clubrooms, and locked rooms and showers. Private instruction is promised for timid sportsmen. No name has been selected for the academy.

Will Build Residence on Wellington Avenue

Harry Markheim has taken title [illegible] an undisclosed purchaser to vacant property at 329-41 Wellington avenue from Mrs. Montgomery Ward and William Roy Carney, for a reported total consideration of $80,000. The purchaser will build a private residence on the property, 70x140, within a year. Harold Bradley & Co. were the brokers.

STEWART SELLS LOOP BUILDING TO BEAK COMPANY

Mortgage Bankers Plan Expansion.

Because of the increased volume of their business and the program of expansion which they have outlined, K. R. Beak & Co., first mortgage bankers, have bought the leasehold interest and thirteen story building at 105-9 North Dearborn street, known as the George W. Stewart building and formerly the Brede, from George W. Stewart, for an undisclosed consideration. Title was taken by Kurt R. Beak, president of the corporation. Leverett F. Cox of Beak & Co. represented the buyer.

The building is of steel frame with pressed brick exterior, with stores on the first floor and offices above. It is in the heart of the loop real estate section and adjoins the eight story Beak building immediately on the south. The land, 56x80, is under lease for ninety-nine years from May 1, 1912, from the Catholic bishop of Chicago, the rental for the remainder of the term being $16,000 annually.

The mortgage corporation is entering upon an elaborate program of expansion at the present time, and will occupy a part of the Stewart building in addition to the offices they now have in the Beak building. The capital stock of the company, according to Mr. Beak, will be increased in the near future from $750,000 to $2,500,000.

LOAN $675,000 ON APARTMENTS IN HYDE PARK

Architects Rissman & Hirschfeld have drawn plans for three attractive apartment buildings to be erected for Herman Eisen at the southwest corner of Everett avenue and 55th street at a total cost, including the land, of $1,250,000. Greenebaum Sons Investment company has made three bond issue loans, aggregating $675,000, at 6½ per cent, maturing in two to ten years, on the projects.

At the southeast corner of Everett and 55th, 154x150, will be a three story building of fifty-four apartments on which $290,000 has been loaned. At Nos. 5515-25 Everett, 110x150, adjoining the corner, thirty-six apartments will be built, on which a loan of $192,500 has been obtained, and a loan of a like amount has been made on the thirty-six apartments to be erected immediately north, Nos. 5527-37, 110x150.

Brokers' Notes

Stanley Wolbach & Co. announce that they have acquired the general real estate business of E. B. Woolf & Co. at 47th street and Prairie avenue.

John Edmunds company, formerly known as the Broadway Realty company, has opened new offices at 3915 Sheridan road, telephone Buckingham 2010. The offices of the Broadway Realty company, 6161 Broadway, have been closed. Ralph Sexauer, for twelve years with the Chicago Association of Commerce, is now affiliated with the Edmunds company.

The regular monthly meeting of the Chicago Real Estate board will be held Wednesday at 1:30 in the assembly room.

Samuel E. Erickson is acting temporarily as auctioneer at the Cook County Real Estate board weekly market, owing to the indisposition of ex-President Loehde.

[For other real estate news see preceding page.]

CHICAGO U. BUYS ON N. LA SALLE, NEAR MADISON

The University of Chicago, according to the current Economist, has acquired Nos. 9 to 23 North La Salle street, 97x101, adjoining the Tacoma building property at the northeast corner of Madison, 80x101, which it already owns, for an undisclosed consideration. The seller was Howard B. Tuttle of Naugatuck, Conn.

The board of review valued the properties purchased at $793,401. The north twenty-nine feet, Nos. 21 and 23, are under a long-term lease to the Morris Plan bank, with 75 years yet to run. There are alleys to the east and north.

The university has no plans in mind for immediate changes in the use of the property, but probably eventually will negotiate long term leases on the holdings. Wallace Heckman acted for the university in negotiations, and Attorney E. F. Gorton for Mr. Tuttle.

The walls and roof of this splendid brick-veneer residence are insulated with FLAXLINUM. Its owner is assured of comfort in all seasons of the year. Excessive coal bills will never worry him.

How to Save Coal and Be Sure of a Comfortable House

What Flaxlinum Is

FLAXLINUM is a felted material made of durable chemically-purified flax fibre. When built into the walls and roof of a house it seals the interior against outside temperature changes. In winter it keeps the heat in and the cold out. It bars the heat of summer.

For walls it is made ½-inch thick with flanged edges to permit it to fit snugly between the studding. For roofs, sheets one inch in thickness are recommended. In applying FLAXLINUM no special construction is necessary. It will last as long as any house built. It will not crack, break or "sift down".

One-half inch of FLAXLINUM is equivalent in heat and cold resistance to 2½ inches of wood, eight inches of brick and mortar, or 13 inches of concrete.

FLAXLINUM
This is the Material that keeps the Cold Out

COAL saving and comfort must be built into a house. They aren't matters of chance.

For twelve years FLAXLINUM has been saving coal and giving year 'round comfort to thousands of home-owners in the coldest part of the country. Users by the hundreds have told us that it saves from 30% to 40% of their fuel bills and that their homes are cozy in the severest blizzards.

FLAXLINUM built into the walls and roof of a house forms a blanket against outside temperatures.

If you are building be sure to investigate FLAXLINUM. It is reasonable in cost—the savings in fuel bills will in a few years pay for it—and then it goes on saving and saving as long as your house stands. And all the while it gives you the utmost of comfort—winter and summer.

It is cheaper to build a warm house than heat a cold one.

Come in and ask us to tell you all about FLAXLINUM—or send for booklet showing sample of FLAXLINUM and giving complete information.

Now the physician can watch the glands of your mouth at work

A new instrument brings wider knowledge of how the glands protect the unreplaceable enamel of your teeth

SCIENTIFIC studies of human beings and animals now show that there are glands which determine whether we shall grow to be giants or pigmies, others which regulate the speed at which our body shall work, and still others which control our youth and vitality.

Equally important are the six tiny glands in the mouth which protect us against colds, tonsilitis, pneumonia and many other infectious diseases. With a new instrument—the sialometer—the physician can watch with his own eyes these glands pour out their healing, germ-free fluids.

This instrument teaches us also that it is their steady stream of fluids that protects the precious, unreplaceable enamel of your teeth against the deadly acids of decay.

"This new instrument—the sialometer—is teaching us the enormous importance of the six tiny glands of the mouth"

All day, all night, they wage this constant struggle

In the warmth of the mouth minute food particles ferment just as milk turns sour when left in a warm, moist place. The acids thus formed immediately begin to attack the enamel, forming cavities.

Brushing the teeth, while absolutely essential to mouth cleanliness, will not keep the acids from forming. Trying to fight the acids by brushing alone is like trying to keep your wind-shield polished on a foggy night. Even if you brush your teeth after every meal (and not one person in a hundred does) enough food remains to feed myriads of acid-forming bacteria.

To provide protection against the acids, nature intended the salivary glands automatically to flush the mouth and teeth every moment in the day and night.

The acids which destroy the enamel of your teeth are constantly forming—just like mist on your wind-shield on a foggy night

The fluids with which they bathe your teeth and gums are alkaline in character. They neutralize and wash away acids as fast as they form. Although the glands are small they can win their fight against the acids if they can be made to function normally. In a healthy mouth they secrete more than a quart of fluid per day.

But the way we live today makes it difficult for our glands to work at anything like their normal rate. Nature expected us to stimulate and exercise them by long-continued chewing of hard, tough foods. When we are chewing they are 20 times more active than when the jaws are at rest. The soft foods, quickly swallowed, that we eat today do not keep the glands active and healthy.

How to keep the glands of your mouth at work

For keeping their salivary glands at work, thoughtful, intelligent people all over the world for twenty years have been using Pebeco.

Pebeco is a dentifrice prepared especially to assist the natural processes causing these glands to work. It does for us what long-continued chewing of hard food did for our primitive ancestors.

Pebeco is neither acid nor alkaline. By its mere presence in the mouth it causes the salivary glands to flow for a long period of time. It never exhausts them as do strong acids—it never checks their natural action as do soapy alkaline substances.

For washing the teeth and keeping the outside surfaces polished, no better dentifrice than Pebeco can be made. It works quickly and efficiently without wearing away the enamel or injuring the edges of the gum. Its constant use gives you teeth as beautiful as nature intended you to have.

After a thorough cleansing with Pebeco—it has just enough tang to it to exhilarate—your mouth feels as refreshed as does your body after a bath—and you have the convincing feeling, too, that you have done for your teeth and mouth all that science can teach you to do.

Take home a tube tonight and note its pungent and refreshing taste. It will keep the glands of your mouth active and your teeth sound and beautiful. 50c at all druggists. Manufactured only by Lehn and Fink, Inc.

This simple test will show you

Send us ten cents today for the material for testing whether your own salivary glands are active enough to protect you against these deadly acids. We will include a junior size tube of Pebeco and our booklet—"How the Glands Protect the Teeth." Lehn and Fink, Inc., Dept. Z-2, 635 Greenwich St., New York.

*The care of the teeth and psychological efficiency

In a recent dental inspection in one of the public schools 856 children were examined—97 out of every 100 were in need of dental treatment.

27 of the children whose teeth were in the most serious condition were examined medically and psychologically. They were backward in their school work, their physical development was poor, most of them were unruly and wayward, sulky and insubordinate.

The teeth of these 27 children were put in first-class condition. Then they were instructed in the care of the mouth and teeth.

Tests made six months afterwards showed a marked improvement in general health; all had improved markedly in school work. The average improvement in all tests was 37.4%.

What is true of school children is largely true of American people as a whole. If the teeth of adults were cared for properly, the general efficiency of the race would be greatly improved.

The first step in the care of the teeth is a visit to your dentist. Take time to have all cavities filled and every vestige of tartar removed, especially where the tooth and the gum meet. Otherwise the germs of pyorrhea may find there a breeding ground. Once lodged they soon begin their deadly attack upon the membrane which holds the teeth firmly to the bone socket.

When you have a clean bill of health from your dentist, form the fixed habit of brushing your teeth at least four times every day (oftener if you eat between meals). Before brushing your teeth in the morning, clean the tongue well with a brush, coarse cloth, or a "tongue-scraper." Use a dentifrice which cleans and polishes without scratching and one which stimulates the salivary glands to increased activity without exhausting them. A copious flow of saliva is the best preventive against pyorrhea and tooth decay.

"Perhaps your skin is especially susceptible to blackheads"

Blackheads indicate your cleansing method is wrong

Perhaps you have the type of skin that is particularly susceptible to blackheads.

If so, you will need to use a special method of cleansing in order to overcome this trouble.

Blackheads are caused by excessive oil collecting dirt in the pores of your skin. To do away with the cause of blackheads follow this special treatment:

EVERY night before retiring, apply hot cloths to your face until the skin is reddened.

Then with a rough wash-cloth work up a heavy lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap and rub it into the pores thoroughly, always with an upward and outward motion.

Rinse with clear hot water, then with cold. If possible rub your face for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

To remove blackheads already formed, substitute a flesh brush for the wash-cloth in this treatment. Then protect the fingers with a handkerchief and press out the blackheads.

Use this treatment persistently and within a week or ten days you will be surprised to see how wonderfully your skin has improved in clearness.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake lasts a month or six weeks. Woodbury's also comes in convenient 3-cake boxes. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York, and Perth, Ontario.

Pierce hole through center of spinner with a pin. Insert match in pinhole and push it half way through cardboard, making a top with which to spin numbers. (See illustration.)

Paste the four markers at left on heavy cardboard and cut each one out separately, trimming closely.

Cut out rules on dotted line and paste on a piece of cardboard to preserve them.

PASTE THE MARKERS ON CARDBOARD AND CUT OUT SEPARATELY.

Player must spin a "1" to start. Once started, markers are advanced number of spaces shown by space upon which spinner falls, moving around board as indicated by arrows. Players take turns in using the spinner. Each player gets one spin at a time unless marker falls on spaces allowing extra spins.

Each player must complete each circuit around board. After moving once around outer circle player advances to inner circle at spot of same color as marker. After advancing once around inner circle player advances to "White House." "White House" must be reached by an exact spin.

Any player may be sent back to starting point by another player's marker arriving at the same place by exact spin or in passing, except from spaces marked "Safety."

Unless He Reformed He Had Less Than a Year to Live, and He Was Only 30; That Was How Agnes Came Into His Life.

DAY after day in the weeks through which he fought fate Blair remembered the picture of the city which Dr. Karol's window framed as the surgeon told him the truth which changed the face of his life.

Against a blaze of yellow sunset great chimneys belched forth heavy smoke into purplish pillars. Roofs—thousands of flat, barren plateaus—spread out dun areas over warrens of houses between which trains on the elevated wove ceaseless shuttles. Farther away engines pounded forward relentlessly, driving past high grain elevators and huge factories on their way to open country. It was a world of toil, of such grinding, incessant labor as Evan Blair had never known, which suddenly flashed upon him as a verity he hated.

From the boulevard below, that highway which he could not see from this upper room of St. Mark's, the thrum of myriad motors lifted their quicker rhythm of the gayer, easier ways of life Blair had known, but he could see none of that long, crowding procession of wealth as Dr. Karol's voice, a little sad in its finality, drove in the words he had feared. It was the sight of the city's poverty, interwoven with the city's power, which stayed in his mind after the surgeon's first words, as if the verdict had been pressure upon a high powered camera of thought which registered the unfamiliar scene with unforgettable clarity while a hammer in his brain kept thudding repetition of Dr. Karol's pronouncement. "Less than a year to live—unless you change everything, your way of living, your attitude toward life."

"You mean," he asked him, measuring his words as he struggled through the shadows which seemed to have come suddenly into the high room of the great hospital, "that I'll have to go away? Out west?"

"Not necessarily." The doctor, gray, a little stooped, aged by the cares of humanity rather than by his own years, frowned in the tension of his thought. "Your trouble is more involved than one which may be cured by sunlight. You need more than that. How old are you?"

"Thirty."

"Orphaned?" He consulted his records.

"My father died eight years ago. I don't remember my mother."

"You've had no one but yourself to consider?"

"No one."

"Unmarried, I see."

"Fortunately."

"So?" The surgeon's shrug displaced his flippant philosophy. "And you have made much money, and spent it as you went? You have danced, Mr. Blair. Now you pay the piper." He sighed at the inevitable justice of the common lot.

"I'm no welcher," Blair said.

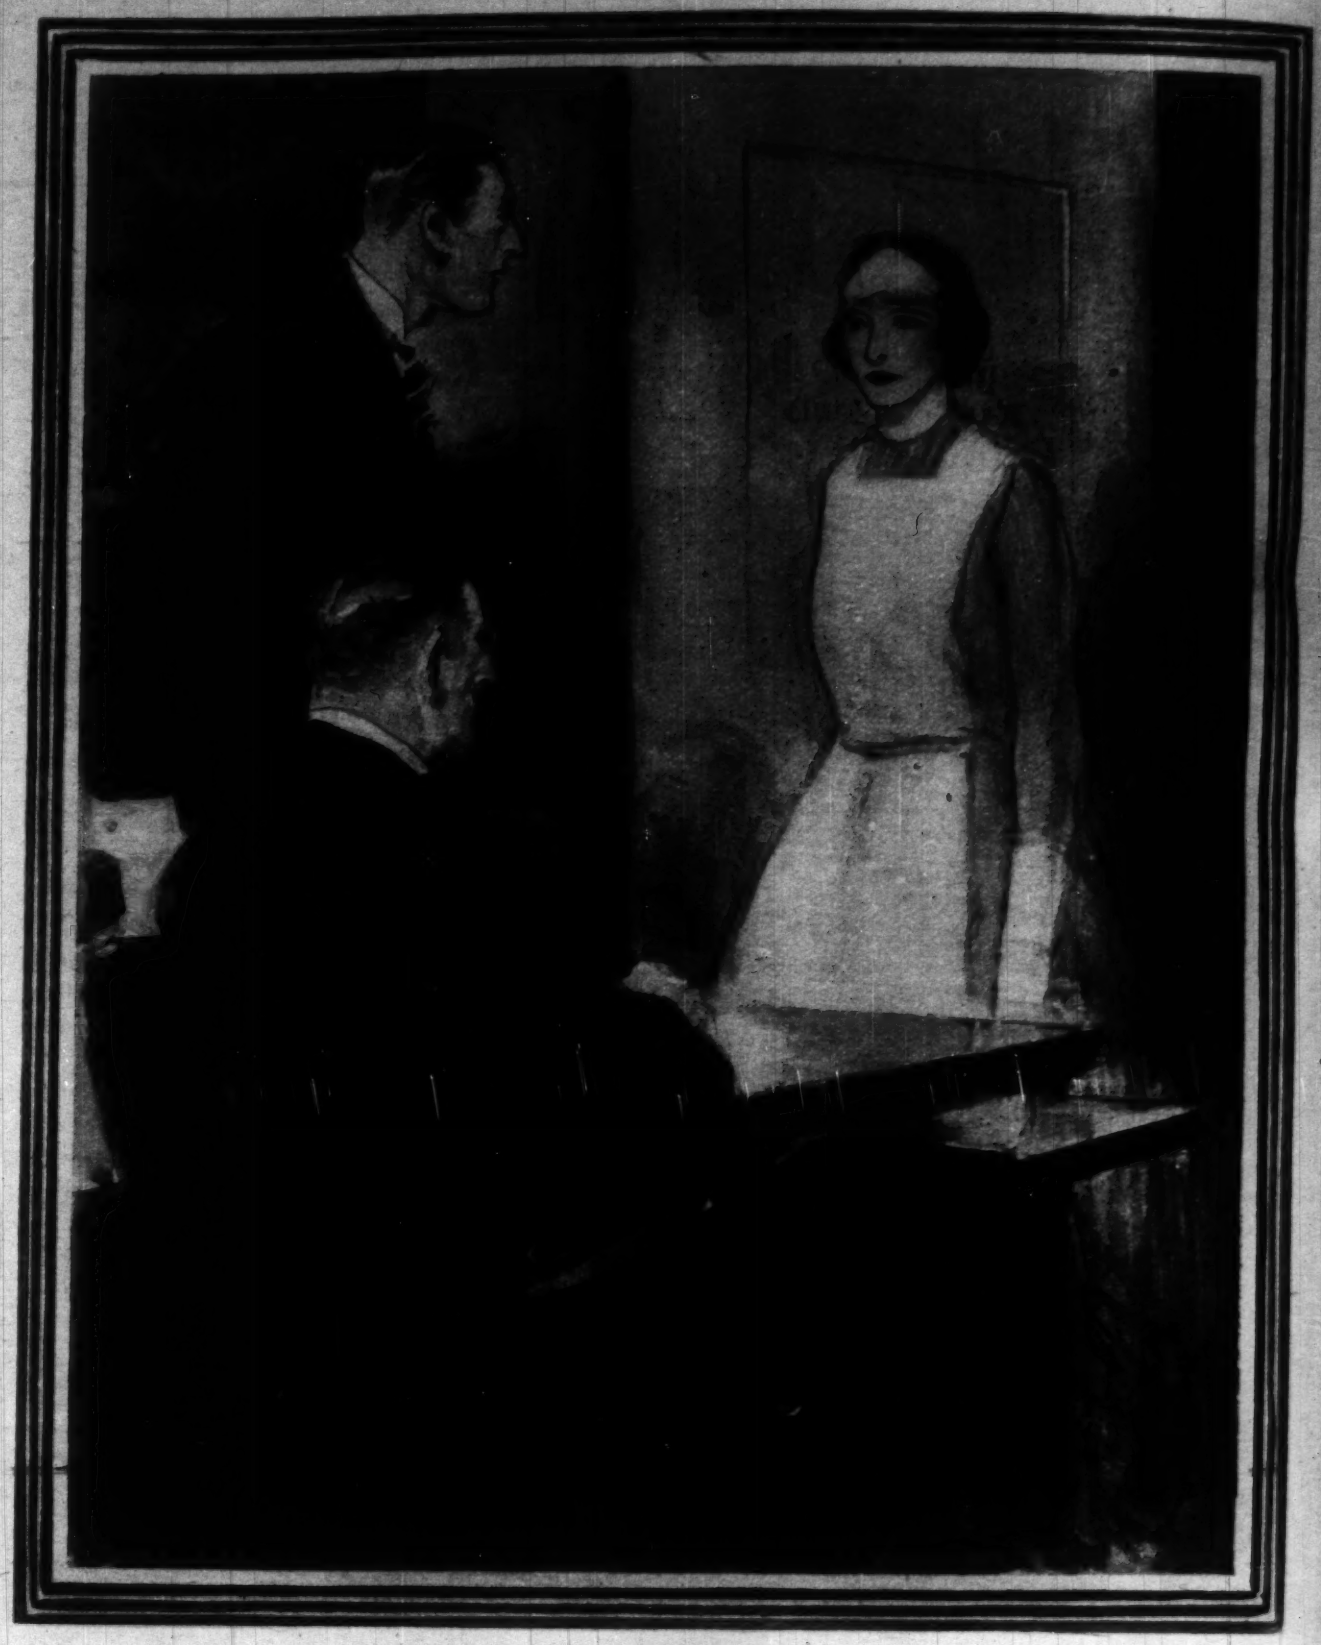
"No." The other man's tone held a doubt. "That means, I suppose, that you won't take the one chance nature gives you for recuperation."

"If it means," Blair said hotly, "that you're sentencing me to ten years of dullness in some out-of-the-world hole instead of one more year of excitement here, I tell you that I won't take it. It's better to live memorably than to——"

"What do you call memorable living?" The experience of age challenged the revolt of youth.

"'Better fifty years of Europe,'" Blair quoted.

"O, yes," Dr. Karol nodded. "You all know that better than your prayers, but it isn't going to help you, that creed. The desire for life is stronger, after all, than the desire for excitement, and the time will come when you will beg us doctors to find you the way to live on any terms. It is my business to forestall that time, Mr. Blair. You have come to me in trust. It is my duty to fulfill that trust. Besides—" back of his grim spectacles his owlish eyes softened a little—"I like you, and I'm going to do all I can to save you from your own folly in decision. Will you stay here in the hospital a month?"



"Should he be kept in bed?" she asked.

"No," Blair thundered.

"Then," said Dr. Karol, touching a button on his desk, "you must take the nurse with you."

"I won't have a nurse."

"In that contingency I must discharge myself from your case."

FOR an instant, raging with anger against the physician's peremptoriness, Blair thought to fling himself out from the office, and, swinging into the current in the boulevard below, submerge fear of the future in thrill of the present. He'd find some of the crowd out at Tracey's. Carmack and Vale and Penfield were sure to be there. They'd take a run out into the country. There were plenty of roadhouses waiting to welcome them. Or he'd call up Amie. She was always ready for any adventure. She'd take a chance with him. They'd skim over the roads at fifty—yes, the car would stand it, even if the laws didn't. They would—a glint of menace in the doctor's eyes jerked Blair back to realization that the decision waited for him. "How can I keep a nurse in my apartment?" he demanded, knowing that this was compromise of the issue.

"Conventions are for the well."

"But I'm not ill enough to——"

"You will be unless——"

"All right. You win."

Dr. Karol's secretary opened the door. "Send in Miss Wells," he told her, "if she's not on duty."

"Well, I hope she's pretty," Blair said.

"She is beautiful," said Dr. Karol. His voice throbbed with an exaltation which did not escape his patient. It made him ready for the coming of a girl of surpassing loveliness, some one who would satisfy the eye of such a connoisseur of beauty as he believed himself to be, and it left him strangely disappointed when Agnes Wells came into the room.

Had it not been for the red-gold glints in her hair and the radiance of her candid gray eyes Evan Blair, accustomed to judge pulchritude by a standard of line and color rather than by any measure of spiritual luminosity, would have called the girl ordinary. She was too sturdy for loveliness, he thought, wondering how Dr. Karol, world traveler that he was, could believe her beautiful. She was not romantic, he decided, meeting the level gaze of her eyes. If anything she was almost too matter of fact as she waited for Dr. Karol's orders. She watched the physician and not the patient as the former spoke. "You are to stay with Mr. Blair," he told her, "until I release you."

"Here?" she asked, and Blair noticed with a gladness which amazed him at his own pleasure in it that she had a wonderful voice. The one word gleamed with cadence which belied her aspect.

"He should stay here," Dr. Karol said, "but he refuses. He is a headstrong young man, Miss Wells. He will try to bulldoze you. You will not let him. You will see that, as far as you can make him, he will carry out my orders. You will stay with him as if he were your patient here in the hospital."

She ran a practiced glance over the record card the doctor gave her. "Should he be kept in bed?" she asked.

"I won't stay," Blair declared, resenting their professional exclusion of his own wishes.

"If he will not do that," Dr. Karol said, "you will undertake to keep him from excitement." He held out his hand to Blair, and Agnes Wells crossed to the door. "She will help you if you will let her," the doctor said.

IN the hall outside the girl turned to Blair, and he saw that, for all her seriousness of manner, her eyes were friendlily bright. "Do you want to take me with you," she asked him, "or shall I follow you?"

"I think you shouldn't come," he told her. "I live alone. I haven't even a maiden aunt to send for."

"O, you're not to think about me," she told him, and again he felt a shock of surprise at professional disregard of the social rules which most of the women of his acquaintanceship acknowledged and transgressed. Here were men and women who thrust the rules aside not for pleasure but for the business of saving life. What sort of a code did they have in its place, he wondered, and found himself staring into the girl's frank eyes with half cynical questioning. Her scrutiny, deeper than his own, disconcerted him.

"My car's outside," he told her. "Shall I wait for you?"

"I'll be down in ten minutes," she promised.

She came with almost incredible promptness, and took her place beside Blair, settling back into silence as he swung out expertly into the argosy of human traffic. He gave her a smile for the silence when they had come into a clearer space, and she responded with a flash of white teeth and a dimpling of pink cheek which gave him a quick, boyish joy. "Say, you're the cleanest looking girl I ever saw," he told her, knocking down the barriers he had decided to build against her as he had waited her coming.

"It's the uniform," she laughed.

As he passed Tracey's at the turn of the boulevard he saw Vale and Penfield, and had a swift thought of joining them; but the knowledge that he might have to explain Agnes Wells to them deterred him. "Where do you want to eat?" he asked her. "You see, I live alone, and I have to go out for my meals."

"I'll get dinner," she told him. "You're on a diet, anyhow, and it's my job to fix your food for you."

"O, I say," he protested, "there won't be anything in."

"Have you a stove?"

"O, yes."

"Then we'll stop at a delicatessen and get the things I need."

He obeyed her with misgivings, angered again because her reminder of her professional service had brought back to him the knowledge of his condition. What would Penfield and Vale and the rest of the crowd think of him if they knew that he had permitted a doctor, even a surgeon as great as Karol, to frighten him into being led around by a nurse? It was childish, ridiculous. "Will you make a bargain with me?" he asked her. "Will you go around with me as if you weren't my nurse?"

She turned to him, her eyes blazing with indignation. "No, I won't," she said. "That's the only reason why I'm with you at all. If you don't want me you can go back to Dr. Karol."

"But I do want you," he said. "It's only because it seems so absurd for a chap like myself to be led around this way."

"It isn't absurd, Mr. Blair," she told him earnestly. "We're both of us under orders. When you were in the army you didn't think about how things looked to other people, did you? You were too busy getting the work done to consider anything else. Well, you have to do just that now. I'm not a jailer. If you want to go out, you can go; but I'll have to go with you, and the only protection I have for myself is making it perfectly clear why I'm along."

"I see," he said. Suddenly he chuckled out of his penitence. "You'll be a riot at Tracey's," he told her.

"Where's that?" she queried.

"A restaurant," he said, "where, even in these days after Volstead, their drink is better than their food."

"I see," it was her turn to say.

The thought of her set into the crowd at Tracey's amused him, and he embroidered it with possible situations. Vale would try to flirt with her, as he did with every new girl. Penfield would want to tell her the story of his life. And Amie—Blair whistled in anticipation of Amie Lane's amazement and annoyance over the nurse's intrusion. Amie wouldn't believe that he was really sick. She had scorned his hints that he was going smash. She'd hit the ceiling when she realised the situation. After all, he was going to get some fun out of the game.

He studied Agnes Wells out of the corner of his eye. She was looking straight ahead down the long, wooded stretch of the boulevard. Some quality in her detachment, her high resolve, her fine professional courage lighted a spark in Blair's own spirit. "I'd like to see any one of them get gay with her," he thought, and found himself angry at the idea even while he was stirred into pride by her poised ability to take care of herself. "Well," he asked her, "are we going to be friends in this war?"

"Let's," she said eagerly, turning to him again the friendliness of her eyes. "It'll be so much easier then."

"Yes," he said, "I think it will."

THEY began their comradeship with their purchases of food at a neighborhood shop. Blair watched her efficiency of method with amusement which deepened into admiration when she took charge of his bachelor abode. With deft skill she prepared his dinner, bringing it to him on a tray.

"But where will you eat?" he demanded.

"O, I'll take care of myself," she said, but she laughed acquiescence when he carried back his tray to the table and insisted on making a place for her across from him.

As they dined he led her into talk of herself and her work, drawing from her the fact that she had come to St. Mark's from a town up north where her father still lived with her three younger sisters. She had finished her training four years earlier, just too late to go overseas. "And so I've been trying to make up for the service I didn't give," she said, and Blair understood why it was that Dr. Karol was likely to put her on his most trying cases. She had a surety about her work as well as about herself

Heed the danger sign—bleeding gums

Just before Pyorrhea strikes—to undermine the teeth and health—kindly, knowing Nature sends a warning: the gums are tender and bleed easily.

Take heed immediately, before it is too late, before the gums recede and the loosened teeth must be extracted, before the germ-laden pus-pockets form, before infection spreads throughout the system.

Better yet, play safe. Don't wait for Nature's warning. Four persons out of every five over forty years of age, and thousands younger, are afflicted with Pyorrhea. This is the immutable law of averages. Your dentist will tell you that.

Go to him regularly, systematically, for tooth and gum inspection. And brush your teeth, twice daily at least, with Forhan's For the Gums. This healing dentifrice, if used in time and used consistently, will prevent Pyorrhea or check its progress. It will make your mouth clean and healthful, preserve your priceless teeth, safeguard your precious health.

Forhan's For the Gums is the formula of R. J. Forhan, D.D.S. It is time-tested, efficient, safe. The foremost dentists recommend and use it.

which led him into talking to her of his own difficulties.

"I've been hitting the high spots," he told her, "mostly because nothing I do matters to any one."

"But it does," she said. "Everything we ever do, right or wrong, hits some one else sooner or later."

"I've never done anything to hurt any one else," he sought to justify himself.

"No," she said. "I believe that," and he glowed at her first approbation.

"I wonder, though," she went on, "if we aren't responsible for the things we don't do, as well as for the things we do. Sometimes I think that I shouldn't be doing private nursing at all. I ought to be giving what I can to the poor children of the city."

The memory of the city he had seen from the doctor's window returned to him. "I suppose," he mused, "that you have to see a great deal of suffering or else suffer a great deal before you can think of other people, particularly people you don't know?"

"Perhaps it's that," she said, and began to tell him of Dr. Karol's work among the city's poor. He listened at first with interested admiration of the surgeon, then with growing distaste of the praise which Agnes Wells showered upon him. Was it possible that she was in love with the man? Why, he was old, twice her age, at least, possibly older than that! Of course, he was a great man. He wouldn't have gone to him if he hadn't been the greatest diagnostician in town, but, after all, he wasn't incomparable, as the girl seemed to think. Blair shoved away his plate. "Let's go riding," he said.

"That's allowed," she told him. "And only three cigarets," she warned him as she cleared off the dishes.

TO his later surprise he forgot himself in striving to please Agnes Wells that evening. He rediscovered an almost forgotten pleasure in being able to give her something she enjoyed as much as she did their ride to the southward. "O, but this is good," she said, lifting her face to the sky. "I've been for five weeks on a hopeless case, and I'd almost forgotten the look of the sky at night."

"Well, I'm glad it's part of my treatment to stay outdoors," he said without realization that this was his first definite acceptance of the prescribed course.

She refused his invitation to go in to a gay country club, however, declaring that he had endured enough excitement for one day and taking the reins of authority in her hands. He grimaced acceptance of her order and turned homeward with a regret which sharpened to acute annoyance as they entered his apartment and heard the insistent jangling of the telephone bell. He knew it was a call from Amie, but he took it grudgingly. Her voice sounded harsh to him after the exquisite modulation of the other girl's.

"Where on earth have you been?" she demanded. "I've been calling you since eight o'clock. Frank Penfield's having a party and he wants us to come."

"Too late to go now," he declared.

"Too late? It's only ten o'clock."

"That's late for a sick man."

"Don't be silly, Van. You're only playing sick. Come on out. I'm all ready and we'll overtake them."

"Not tonight."

"O, very well!"

She banged up the receiver angrily and he paused with sudden regret at his refusal of the invitation. He was considering calling her back, for Amie was a good scout, he told himself, when he caught sight of Agnes Wells bending over his desk at work on her report. After all, he thought, it was silly to go to a doctor and then fail to carry out his orders. "Well, this is your domain," he told her, indicating the living room, and left her to her work.

He found her preparing breakfast the next morning and protested against her doing the work. "This is the part I like the best," she insisted. "Wait till you find the dinner I'll have for you tonight." He caught himself twice during the day looking forward to the meal with keen joy, but he told himself that it was the novelty of the situation as well as the pleasure of having home cooked food which he anticipated. Vale called him at four, inviting him to a dinner at a shore resort. He refused with the same alacrity he had shown to Amie. "What's the big idea?" Vale wanted to know. "New girl? What'll Amie say?"

HE wondered a little what Amie would say when she discovered Agnes. He was to find out earlier than he expected. He was dining with the nurse in blithe forgetfulness of every one else when Amie Lane opened the door. Poised like a brilliant tropical bird, she surveyed him and Agnes with an amazement that flared into sullen resentment but which she sought to conceal before she spoke. "I didn't know you had a sister," she said, trying to make her tone light.

"I haven't," he said. "This is Miss Wells, my nurse."

"But you're not really sick," she declared.

"Dr. Karol says I am." He beckoned her toward the table, but she refused, staring at Agnes Wells with speculative hostility. "It's the silliest thing I've ever heard," she asserted. "If you're really sick, you should go to the hospital. If you're not——"

"If I'd dreamed that any one would take that attitude," he said, "I'd have stayed at St. Mark's. All I thought about was that I hated the idea of a hospital. You must think I want to be sick," he went on with the peevishness of illness.

"Well, there seem to be compensations," she tantalized him.

Agnes Wells began to clear off the table and Blair followed Amie to the other side of the room. "I know it's unusual," he told her, "but it's my headstrongness against Dr. Karol's determination that's brought it about. Miss Wells is simply obeying the doctor's orders in trying to save my life."

From under her long, carefully emphasized lashes Amie studied him, and evidently concluded that she had made a mistake in direct attack, for she crossed back to him, lifting his chin in her hands. "I didn't dream you were serious, Van," she told him. "I never thought of you being ill."

"I never thought of it myself," he said, and kissed her just as Agnes returned to the room. He knew that she must have seen him and he flushed at the knowledge, but he reassured himself with the thought that, after all, it simplified matters between them. She would know now that he was in love with Amie, and she would see that her own cool professionalism of manner could mean nothing to him. Amie, purringly content, opened his cigaret case and lighted one for him, then her own.

"Have one, Miss Wells?" she queried with an inflection which seemed to shut out Agnes.

"No, thanks," Agnes said.

"They won't hurt you," Amie went on.

"She has as much right to refuse them as you have to take them," he told Amie.

"O, if you feel that way," she said, and puffed hard. "Aren't you going to take me riding?" she asked him after a while, and, because he could see no way of refusing, he agreed.

The ride lacked, however, the charm of other rides with Amie, and he turned back early. He found Agnes reading and unperturbed by the incidents of the evening. She refused to let him tell her about Amie, donning her nurse's manner for shield against intimate conversation. He had a feeling that he had somehow fallen from her good graces, and he spent the next two days struggling to reinstate himself. It was on the second night that he felt justified in talking to her in the same tone that had marked their first evening. He set the scene for it with care, driving her out to a point where they were alone with sky and water.

It was not of his later years that he spoke then, but of his childhood, telling her of his father, of his wanderings from school to school, of his loneliness and growing recklessness as the years went on. "I've never had anything to work for but excitement," he justified himself. "No one has ever cared whether I lived or died."

"Why didn't you marry?" she asked him.

"I've never loved any woman well enough," he said.

"But——"

"Amie? I've never thought of marrying her until I began to see I was slipping down. Then I thought it didn't make much difference. You—well, you know the world, and you've met Amie."

"But there are so many girls who——"

"You're the first really good girl I've ever known," he said. Then, plumbing the depth of the water into which he had waded, he leaped back to shore. "When a fellow has just a year ahead of him," he told her, "he's likely to do the most reckless thing he knows."

"You have the chance of so many years," she said solemnly, "if only you'll take hold with us. What's the use of what you call the game? Whom are you making money for? Why don't you give up your work for a while?"

"Because I daren't," he confessed. "My business is in the place where I don't know what may happen to it. If the market goes against me I'll be broke. I couldn't even pay your wages."

"Then I'll have to take you for a charity patient," she said lightly, and veered off into reminiscence of some of the humors of her work. She had him interested in queer old men, in querulous old women, in patient little children, in sorrowing mothers before he understood how he had been led away from talk of themselves. When he did he turned homeward, for the thought of the girl's admiration of Dr. Karol had returned to annoy him.

THE next day he suffered a sharp reaction to his mood of resignation toward the physician's advice. He wasn't going to be treated like a child, he decided. If Miss Wells had undertaken his case at Dr. Karol's order she'd have to take the consequences. He hadn't promised anything except to let her come. He'd go on just as if she weren't there. If she wanted to come, she could. If she didn't, she could stay there, and wait for him. Amie's telephoned call, telling him that Vale wanted them to go out that evening, confirmed his decision. "At least, he wants me," Amie said, "but I told him he had to ask you."

"I may have to bring my censor," he told her.

She laughed, and he knew that she had diagnosed his determination as a jealous reaction from the fact that Vale wanted her, anyhow. "Bring her," she dared him.

He left the acceptance to Agnes, however, telling her offhandedly that the crowd would be gay. She studied him with the manner which was beginning to irritate him at every recurrence, so definitely did it remind him of his danger. "You shouldn't go, Mr. Blair," she told him.

"You let me go to work."

"You said you had to go."

"I do—although I don't see that I'm going to be able to do anything if the crash comes."

"You can do much more if you don't burn the candle at both ends."

"Will you come with me tonight?"

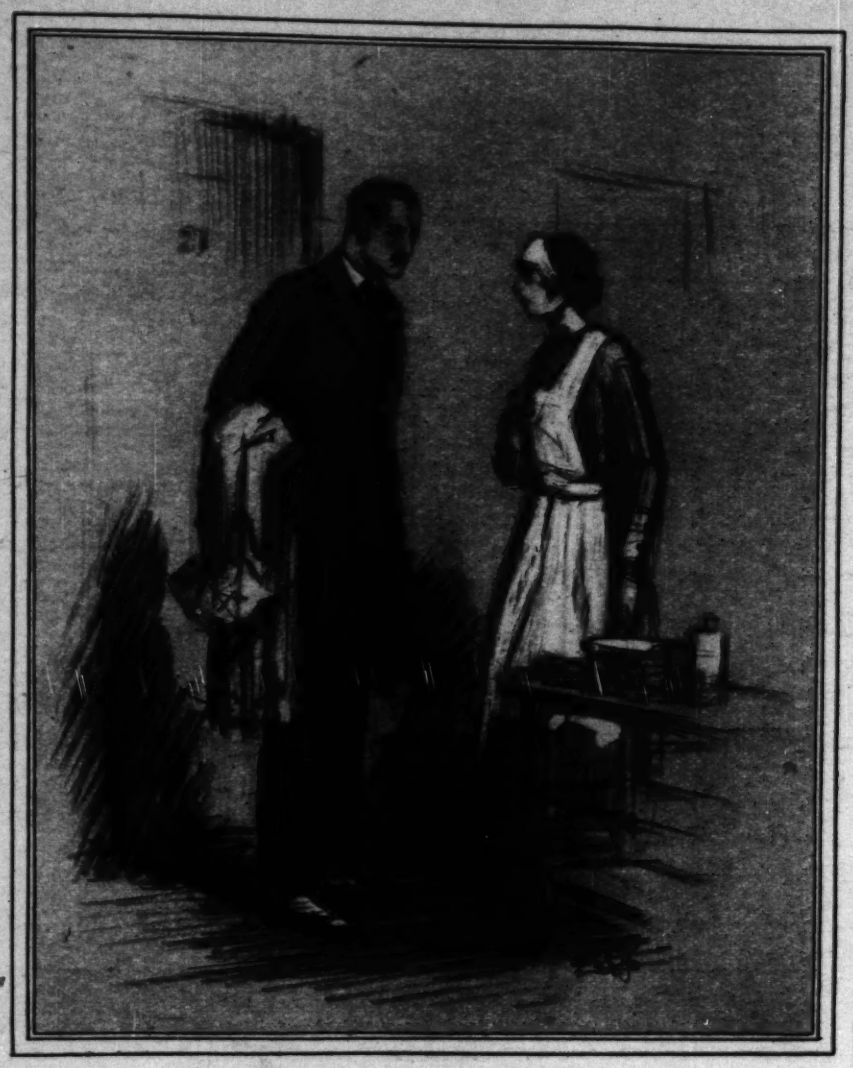
"I don't want to go," she said, "but I must. I hope you'll understand that definitely before we start."

"You give me no chance to forget that you're only doing this under orders."

The very crispness of her uniform seemed a factor added to her mental and moral detachment from him as they started toward Tracey's late that evening. She wasn't disagreeable—somehow Blair could not imagine her growing ugly in the way Amie did—but she was definitely apart from him. It didn't matter, of course, he decided. She was nothing to him but the nurse whom he had taken at old Karol's insistence. She wouldn't last. She'd find some way out of a job that was growing unpleasant. He told himself that he didn't care how soon she went, but he felt a curious ache at the thought of losing her. There was something fine, and straight, and splendid about her, something good in the kind of goodness he had known in his little boyhood. His mother must have been good that way. Perhaps, if he had met her sooner, he might have felt differently about living. After all, it was just as well. There was only the year to go.

He pulled up in front of Tracey's in no holiday mood, but recklessness seized him as he entered the place, smoke hung already and clamorous beneath its swaying Chinese lanterns. A Negro orchestra on a raised platform blared out volumes of jazz, and at the crowded tables men and [illegible] sometimes joined in the songs. There were other crowds dancing, and Blair had to lead the way through them to the table where Amie and Vale were waiting for them. He knew that hundreds of eyes followed their course, watching Agnes in amazement. She looked as out of place as Amie would have seemed in a church, but she seemed unconscious of the sensation she was causing—and Amie would never have missed that. "Beats 'The Belle of New York,'" he heard a man say, and had to choke down his impulse to tell him to keep still.

If Vale had invited Amie for his own



"Do you want to take me with you?"

amusement he seemed entirely willing to sacrifice himself once Agnes arrived. He devoted himself to her with the assiduity which always annoyed Blair, even giving up dances to talk to her. She was new to him, of course. That, Blair reasoned, explained his devotion, for Vale couldn't appreciate her fineness. Amie, moving over closer to Blair, sought to shut both the others out from his thoughts, flirting with him outrageously.

He tried to respond, but his emotions seemed incapable of being aroused. He was tired, tired of the noisy music, tired of the crowd, tired of Vale, tired of Amie. His gaze kept straying back to Agnes, serene in her quiet, and there came to his mind the memory of a stanza he had heard in college. An old professor in an English course had read it, and Blair had lingered on it for its rhythm.

She walks, the lady of my delight,
A shepherdess of sheep,

he recalled. Other lines faded, but the last of the stanza stood out;

She has her soul to keep.

That was it. That was why Agnes Wells was so different from all the rest of them. She knew that she had her soul to keep. The knowledge set her apart. That was why—yes, that was why he loved her!

HIS first conscious registration of his knowledge loosed a flood of light upon his brain. What a fool he had been! He must have loved her from the moment she had come into the high room at St. Mark's. That was why he had wanted her to come with him. That was why he was jealous of her admiration of Karol. That was why he had defended her against Amie's insinuations. Because he loved her he had opened his heart to her. Loving her, he had told her just what Amie meant to him. Fool, fool, fool! he upbraided himself. He had shown her the worst of himself. He had brought her here to Tracey's to look on Amie's proprietary possession of him, to listen to Vale's innocuous philanderings. A fury at his own folly laid hold upon him. He began to drink Vale's liquor, telling himself that nothing mattered now. He didn't even want the year since he had lost Agnes. "The only really good girl I've ever known," the hammer in his brain kept pounding.

"What's the matter with you, Van?" Amie complained, bending close to him.

"Let me alone," he muttered.

"He's sick," Vale laughed. "He has to play the part. We'd all do it, though, for the same stake." He gazed fatuously at Agnes, but her gaze passed him toward Blair, growing dark with concern as she watched. "I think," she said, rising, "that we'd better go."

"He's going to stay," said Amie.

"He isn't," Agnes told her.

"You can't come here to my party, and spoil it like this," Amie cried. "Van isn't sick. He's as well as Tom Vale is. You're both of you lying, you and that doctor. You're just trying to get him away from me, and I won't let you! There's no reason why he shouldn't have a good time. You're fooling him. Come on, Van, let's fool them. Let's dance, and dance, and dance till the cows come home!"

She sprang up, catching hold of his arm, but he did not move. He was watching Agnes. For an instant the girl stood hesitant, then came around the table and faced Amie squarely. "We aren't lying," she told her. "Mr. Blair hasn't one chance in a thousand if he keeps on this pace you set for him. He won't even have the year Dr. Karol hoped he'd have. But he isn't going to keep on it. I'm going to take him away from you." Her chin went up and her eyes flashed with the fire of molten steel. "I love him better than you do. I love him so well that I'm going to save him. You only want him so that you can hurt him, so that you can kill him. I don't care anything about myself. I care about him, and I'm going to save him from all of you. He's too good to be lost!"

In utter amazement at her outburst Amie Lane stared at the white uniformed girl, then, with eyes aflame with rage, she leaped toward her. In a flash the room was in uproar. Men and women shouted. The jazzing orchestra played the louder. Some one yelled for police. Blair saw Vale jump forward as Amie's hands went to Agnes' throat. He thrust the other man aside and swung in between the two girls. "Let her alone," he commanded Amie.

"I won't let her alone," she gasped. "What right has she to take——"

"Every right," he said. "I love her."

"You go home with Amie," he heard Vale say. "I'll take the nurse back to the hospital."

"You will not!" he cried, and swung out at the man he had called his friend.

"O, if you feel that way," Vale's voice came to him across what seemed an interminable distance. Then the world reeled away from him as he fell forward.

HE came back to consciousness in a white room which seemed strangely dim and strangely secluded. For a little while he lay in an unquestioning lethargy. His sight, accustoming itself after a time, revealed to him a window through which he could look out upon a purpling dusk over barren squares of roofs. His memory, groping backward, stumbled on recollection of the scene from Dr. Karol's window. He must be in St. Mark's. But who had brought him here? And where was Agnes? In his weakness he wanted her with the yearning he had known in his childhood for the mother he didn't remember. He seemed to have known her forever, to have wanted her always. Why wasn't she here?

Slowly the remembrance of Tracey's seeped into his mind. He turned aside with a moan. Why should she come to him? He had taken her to that place out of sheer perversity, out of the unfathomable folly of his stubbornness. No matter what she might have thought of him before that, she would hate him for that when she had time to think of it all. She had defied Amie, but she had done it from a sense of duty, not from love. Why, he couldn't expect it. He hadn't deserved to win a girl like Agnes. The poignancy of pain in his knowledge of the loss struck him the harder now because of his helplessness, but he tried to brace himself with the thought that it didn't matter. He must be coming to the end if they had brought him here. After all, he could be glad that life wasn't too long; and, perhaps, in some other world—

He saw Karol's head at the door before he heard the doctor's voice. He sought to close his eyes, but Karol interposed himself between him and pretense of sleep. "He has come back," he heard him say, as if to another person. "This headstrong young man who would not stay with us has returned. Now he must obey you, Miss Wells."

He saw her come from the other side of the room and he watched her with pathetic wistfulness as she aided the physician. Once, as he took his pulse, Karol smiled at him reassuringly, but Agnes kept her eyes from meeting his gaze. Only after Karol had gone did he venture to speak to her. "Did you bring me here?" he asked her.

"Mr. Vale and I did."

"Last night?"

"Fourteen days ago."

"Then I've been——"

"You've been very sick. Even——"

"Even Amie would believe it now?"

"Any one would."

"Will I get well?"

"Temporarily, yes. The rest depends upon yourself, just as it did before that night."

"Agnes!"

"Yes?"

"Come here."

She returned, standing above him and watching him with eyes into which shadows had come. His own eyes filled with tears, tears of weakness, of pity for himself, of regrets, of grief. He saw her lips quiver in the pain of sympathy, and with his old gambling instinct, he flung all on one chance. "Does it mean anything to you," he asked her, "whether I live or die?"

Bravely she met his gaze. "It means everything," she said.

"Then I'm going to get well."

"I knew you would." She bent nearer to him, and the beneficent glow of her loveliness enfolded him.

"You are beautiful," he said.

"Try to sleep now," she told him.

He closed his eyes, but he could still see her outlined against the sunset glow over the city roofs.

BAGGING THE KING OF THE TUNDRA

(This is the last of a series of stories on hunting in Alaska.)

By Bob Becker.

STALKING the woodland caribou on the snow covered tundra of the northland is no easy job. The matter of approach to your quarry is complicated by the fact that on the moss covered tundra you can't find a piece of shrubbery higher than fifteen inches behind which you can hide, and hence it requires some clever worming, sneaking, and crawling to get near Mr. Caribou. Before you get through your stalk you feel more like a snake than a white hunter.

When Frank, the guide, busted into my tent at 4:39 (more or less) one frosty morning and yelled "Muck a muck," which is Alaskan for "Roll out of bed, you lazy duffer, and come get your breakfast," I wasn't very keen about caribou hunting. To leave a warm sleeping bag and have to dress in a cold tent when there are a couple of inches of snow on the ground outside and the temperature is far from being tropical is not conducive to aspirations for caribou or any other kind of shooting. But I managed to dress and hike to the mess tent, where Gene was performing all kinds of tricks with a few pots and pans and an eighty pound cook stove. My, O my! the way that boy can cook! His breakfasts—well, you'd have to mortgage your home to buy one in a big city, the price would be so steep.

Breakfast taken care of, Topsy and Nellie, our horses, were brought up and Frank and I started for the hills some three or four miles from camp. It was quite a treat, this getting Frank to go on a hunt, as for many days I had been gunning with Field, the Siwash guide, and to have a real American along with whom I could talk freely was a distinct pleasure.

We rode through the crisp morning air for some distance along the westward trail before we turned off the path and headed for the hills on which we hoped to find our game. This brought some pretty tough riding, rocky streams to cross, dense timber to go through, and occasionally a bog to plow through which Topsy did not like and sometimes refused to negotiate.

Frank begins to "dress" the great prize.

Frank, the guide, admires the fallen King of the Tundra.

A Caribou Trail.

Going diagonally through the timber belt so as to strike the hills at an angle, we came upon a well beaten trail which had been used quite recently. It was a caribou trail leading to the moss covered tundra above, the kind of a place that the woodland caribou loves. It showed that hundreds of these handsome game animals had been crossing the valley, coming from the southward to the range of hills which we were going to hunt. Nellie and Topsy hailed this well beaten trail with delight, immediately "fell into it," and followed it to the top of the hill.

Funny pair, these two horses. Nellie was a stocky, plump, gentle roan that simply thrived on work. She was a wonder when it came to standing hard, grueling travel. When moving camp Nellie enjoyed the signal honor (?) of packing the precious cook stove. No other horse could be intrusted with it. But she was as high strung and temperamental as a movie star, and sometimes on the march would nearly throw a fit if Frank tried to stop her to adjust a pack. Topsy, smaller, daintier, a slower walker and not so powerful, was the trophy horse. Whereas Nellie would tear up a ten acre lot if the head of any wild animal were brought near her, you could slap a trophy on Topsy's back and she would never bat an eyelash.

When these two horses landed us on top of the trundra the sun was beginning to come through the clouds, and there in the snappy, clear atmosphere we could see for a long distance. Frank had no more than stopped his horse when he said that he had spotted some caribou, so we dismounted to look them over and plan our "attack." The glasses showed that on our right, about three-quarters of a mile away, were a cow and calf. Almost straight ahead of us and scattered over the trundra were about seven animals, young bulls and cows. We passed those up. What we wanted to see was a bunch of thirty or thirty-five with a fine big bull in charge. A trifle to our left we spotted some seventeen or eighteen. That was more like it. But Frank couldn't see a decent sized bull in the bunch. However, we decided to look 'em over at close range, so we mounted our horses, dipped down on the side of the hill a bit so as to keep out of sight, and came up on the tundra again at a point which we believed to be somewhere near that herd of seventeen or eighteen.

After "anchoring" our horses Frank and I began to look over the landscape. A few rocks projecting into the atmosphere from that waste of snow, moss, and water served as our lookout tower. We spotted our quarry and immediately prepared to advance for the skirmish. Heavy riding clothes were first discarded. Another stunt was to haul out my snow glasses, as the glare of sun upon the snow field was too strong for me. Frank unfortunately forgot to bring his, so he blackened his face, which helped considerably. Looking over the lay of the land, my blackfaced guide said that we should be able to walk easily within 200 yards of the caribou, as they were in a slight depression.

The last twenty-five yards were negotiated on hands and knees while trying to hide behind some scrub willows not over fifteen inches tall. Creeping along, we almost bumped into a cow that was lying down with only her head showing above the brush. Frank was flabbergasted by the sight of this cow so near us, as he didn't think we could get that close to any of the herd, but it showed that there were undoubtedly a number of the animals lying down, and you might run into one anywhere.

The Old Boy Disappoints Us.

Warily, upon our knees in the snow, we looked over that bunch of caribou, but the king of the herd was not to be seen. The question was, where had the old boy gone? Was he lying down somewhere, partially hidden in a depression of the tundra? Frank, twisting about trying to get sight of him, finally gave me a poke in the ribs and whispered to get down as there rose into the air a powerful, good looking bull whose antlers seemed to reach many feet into the sky. There was no doubt about the length of beam of those antlers, but—no points—and Frank and I shook our heads. That old gentleman would never do. He wasn't there, that was all.

There was nothing for us to do but retreat from the scene and mush on in search of another bull. So, undetected by the herd, we backed away, mounted our horses, and rode fully a mile and a half farther on the tundra. From the top of a small rise we again looked over the country. Far away we spotted a single bull, which made us think that perhaps he was one that had been whipped and driven from a herd by a more powerful scrapper. As I was anxious to look him over, Frank and I started for this single animal. It looked like a short hike across the trundra, but, gosh! it was a long way through that slushy snow, which made it heavy going. And it was hot work, too. I had to peel off my coat. Seemed funny to be "steaming" while walking in several inches of snow.

Bringing in the trophy. Frank had no rope, so he tied the head on the saddle with the horses' halters.

The joke of it was that after plugging our way across that tundra we couldn't find the single bull. But a surprise awaited us at the end of the trip. When we got down into the hollow through which a small stream flowed, we looked up the creek bed, and there was a large bunch of caribou. Frank counted up to twenty-eight, and there were undoubtedly several more lying down that we could not make out. This bunch just had to be inspected, so we started to follow the bank of the creek in order to get close to them.

Crawling, sneaking, sliding along that creek, sometimes wading in the ice cold water, sometimes slipping on the ice that fringed the banks, we finally arrived at a spot not more than fifty yards from one of the animals in the herd. It was a liberal education, lying there and watching those big animals at close quarters. The young bulls were scrapping and playing, several calves (dainty little fellows) were frolicking about near their mothers, and other members of the herd were feeding or sleeping on the tundra.

Stalking the Big Bull.

But again we couldn't find the big bull. So we decided to back up and look at the bunch from another angle. It took fully twenty minutes to make a half circle, and when we got around we found ourselves out in the open, striking figures against the snow, and our herd beginning to feed and already on the move.

There we were stuck in the open and not a piece of shelter behind which we could hide. What to do? If we moved we would attract more attention to ourselves than by sitting tight, so we squatted in the snow and, as Frank said, tried to look like a couple of caribou "at rest." Not very comfortable, "setting" there in the wet snow, but gradually the herd moved on and we were able to get up and swing around behind them. As we sat there I was able to see the big bull, and he looked pretty good, so the next thing on the program promised to be a shootin' event.

A wilderness of snow on the trail from the caribou country. Gene and Frank, at the right, are adjusting a slipping pack.

It is tough luck for the big fellows, but handy for the hunter that the big bull is usually behind his herd, driving them on. This arrangement makes it possible for you to bag your trophy without having to approach a large bunch from the front.

But at that, sneaking up on a large bunch of caribou even from the rear is no snap. I would sprint toward them a few yards, then "freeze" if one of the animals lifted its head from the tundra and looked around. Finally the time came when Frank and I parted company. He said that it was up to me to go ahead alone and try to get as close as possible to my bull, and he told me to watch my step, because if the herd caught sight of me I could kiss them goodby, as they would beat it in a hurry. So I shed all excess baggage, left it with Frank, saw that my little gun was ready, and started my stalk.

It was a case of doubling up like a jackknife, sprinting for a few yards, and when one of the caribou raised its head I plunged forward on my nose in the snow and laid there until Mr. Caribou started feeding again. But I never took my eyes from that big bull, who would feed for a few minutes and then go after some lagging member of the herd and drive it on. The boss sure was on the job and he kept that bunch on the move all the time.

I advanced twenty-five yards, then fifty, and soon I was 100 yards nearer to the herd, and almost as wet as if I had been splashing in a creek. Still the herd was some 300 yards away. A fool cow kept me stalled for several minutes as she wandered off to one side of the main herd and started feeding. I had to wait until the boss came over and made her move on. That little rest in the snow (as wet as it was) nevertheless helped considerably, as I was puffing like a steam engine from my "sprint and slide" exercise. I ate up a few more yards, and then a young bull spotted me—a moving object in the snow. I again hugged the earth and wished for a sheet which would have made me quite invisible against the white of the tundra. The bull, after looking long and carefully, finally decided I was harmless or else his eyes had deceived him, and went on feeding, and I picked up a few more yards.

Bagging the King.

I was now about 225 yards from the herd, and I could see that big king of the herd, his handsome antlers outlined every now and then against the sky. It looked almost impossible to sneak much nearer the moving herd, so I prepared to start the skirmish. Resting on one knee, I brought up the little gun and tried to sight it. But I was wheezing like an old engine and couldn't hold my gun steady. Too shaky.

The big fellow moved on a step or two and started to feed again. Again I pulled up the little Mannlicher, aimed at the shoulder of my quarry, and pulled the trigger. Never touched him. But it certainly touched off that herd, which as a unit threw up their heads and started running. I got to my feet and prepared for some speedy shooting. The big bull was on a slashing trot. Frank, some yards behind me, yelled, "Give it to him," and give it to him I did.

The little Mannlicher cracked again and I heard the smack of the bullet as it found its mark.

"You hit him," shouted Frank; "give him another one," he added. So once more the Mannlicher spat and SMACK, another hit. By this time the big bull was lagging behind the herd. He slowed down to a walk and the balance of the herd swept on. I took my eyes from him for a moment to observe that wonderful picture of the caribou herd trotting over the white tundra. I noticed the little calves, snow white tails showing, stepping along as gingerly and snappily as if they were walking on eggs. Occasionally one friskier than the rest would jump into the air to come down stiff-legged like a bucking broncho.

I started to run toward the wounded bull, standing head down. Frank yelled for me to take it easy and not get too close. So I slowed down to a walk, and as I did the wounded bull dropped down, and by the time I reached him no further shooting was necessary. The king of the tundra was mine.

A Real Monarch.

The king was rightly named. As I looked over his handsome coat, his graceful antlers, to me the most appealing of all antlered game, and his powerful body I felt that truly this old fellow was a king and ruler. He made a great picture there in the snow, and I sort of hated to see Frank take out his knife and start in to dress the head. But it was getting late and we were a long way from home, so no time was lost in the skinning job. Frank left me to go after the horses when we were half through with the task, so I worked there alone on the trunda.

Far away I could still see that band of caribou whose boss I had just bagged. All about me as far as you could look was snow, silence, and caribou. To the south and west in the valley below lay a giant glacier, a gleaming ice field in the late afternoon sun, while in the foreground of the valley stretched the moose country through which Field and I had been gunning.

With the shooting of the caribou bull I knew that the big hunt was over, and I realized that I was looking at this marvelous panorama probably for the last time for many moons. You know how you feel on the last day of the hunt, how you hate to leave a wonderful game country, a bit of the virgin wilderness with magnificent specimens of wild life, its snow and ice covered peaks, over which there seems to hang a sort of peace and seclusion that is found only in the Northland.

But upon the heels of such thoughts comes the elation you feel after bagging a handsome specimen of big game. Bagged because you were able to shoot straight and work hard for your trophy, and this is the way I felt when Frank and I wended our way across the tundra on the way back to camp.

The hunt was over. The king of the tundra was dead—but His Majesty will live for many years in memory.

AFTER THE CLOCK STRIKE

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—As the clock strikes six every feminine mind seems to be torn by two impulses. One is to come out either in ivory white or in a member of the pastel tints. The other is to assume colors that would make a parokeet look like an English sparrow.

These temptations seem equally strong, and as a result the horseshoe of the Metropolitan Opera house is nailed with a wide number of conflicting costumes. Against the pale blues and greens and the ivory velvets we see tissues that resemble in brilliance a stained glass window. There are marvelous brocades, silks, and velvets figured in metallic patterns, frosted metallic tissues just faintly pulsing with rose or green or blue, and there are embroideries of beads and silks which drown in color the plain fabric beneath. Metallic patterns and tissues are especially stressed, and we get in combination with gold and copper frequent use of vivid green and yellow.

No matter how brilliant the material, however, the result manages to lose none of its sacred simplicity. Indeed, the more dazzling the weave and pattern of our evening gown, the more we seek to propitiate the deity which commands, "Thou shalt not break the straight line." Just hang something from the shoulders and don't bother it afterwards—herein lies the secret of the fashionable evening dress of the hour. Yet—make no mistake! There isn't a dressmaker living who won't tell you that these straight line affairs are the most complicated in the world. They are all, in fact, the job of an artiste.

Having enunciated this general direction, it is well to speak of a few points en route. In the first place, many of the new models spurn the long waist in favor of a more conservative geography. In the second, the surplice closing is much favored. This latter tendency does not, however, interfere with the familiar elliptical neckline, which still seems to be thriving. Third, waist and skirt treatments are frequently dissimilar. The next point is that quite a bit of fur is used to outline the decolletage. Last, draping is concentrated preferably upon the front.

To proceed now to concrete illustrations of my theme. At the left the brilliant green so much favored at present is introduced via a skirt of velvet combined with a corsage of red, green and gold brocade. Here the side draping is negotiated through a novel agency—a loop of the fabric that is finely tucked. Slightly to the rear of this lateral decoration begins a circular panel of the bodice material. A stunning dinner dress, this, especially for the brunette of brilliant coloring.

The next evening gown inspires immediate comment upon the points in which the skirt of rose colored georgette contracts with the waistline. These points are a feature of many of the newest models, and infinite is the number of ways in which they are arranged. Some of them register through inset circular pieces tapering from fullness at the hem to a point above. Such insets are, indeed, exceedingly smart, and one imported evening model I have seen diversifies this detail by plaiting each section. In this way a contrast is afforded to the pearl embroideries which extend from the bodice to fill in the wedge shaped intervals between the points. This particular model is made over matching satin, and each inverted V of its skirt is picot edged. The surplice closing is employed both back and front. A large bow of georgette at the side is the final accent.

Characteristic of the classic mood of the times is the next sketch. Here green velvet is slashed at the sides to reveal an under bodice of silver cloth, and the train also discloses its silver inner life. A large ornament of silver emphasises that insistent front draping of the skirt, and to this are anchored narrow strands of the velvet, each lined with silver. Large paillettes of the same metallic persuasion occur at intervals on these strands.

Both of these frocks have the waistline placed rather high, a tendency shared by the charming little dinner frock of citron crepe next illustrated. This area has been settled by gold beads which appear in rather farflung but exceedingly effective communities. Circular side panels which are curved at the edge and drop lower than front and back afford the coveted contrast by avoiding ornamentation of any kind.

Some present day models don't declare any waistline at all. They just hint it in some furtive drape, some bit of ornamentation. Thus the fifth model presents a tentative boundary in a cluster of pink velvet roses at the side. This gown is of one of the beautiful new fabrics—an ivory chiffon velvet incrusted in pattern of gold.

The sixth frock, a dinner gown of silver cloth, is arresting chiefly through its usual sleeve drapery. This consists of a fuchsia shade of red chiffon attached to a band of identical material encircling the neckline. It may either hang in straight panels down the back or it may be worn over the arms. To carry out this note of color come the red beads interspersed with long stitches of matching thread which appear on skirt and bodice.

So influential a factor is the separate jacket in present modes that one is not surprised to find it asserting its sway even in the dinner gown. Thus the highly original model second from the right adds to its plaited foundation of blue crepe a black velvet jacket embroidered in gold. The belt is of gold tissue. This model, by the way, falls perhaps more under the heading of the elaborate negligee than under the term by which I have just described it. But so elaborate has become the character of the negligee and so widely is it used nowadays for the less intimate functions of life that it is really difficult to draw the line.

The last model, one of the most stunning I have seen, falls straight from the shoulders in the classic mode. What individuality it has expressed through the rippling movement of the one side opening. This shows a lining and an underslip of vivid green crepe. The bodice is plaited, and below this falls a single loop and a single end of unplaited crepe. As for the fabric itself, the gold tissue is made dazzling by a sort of peacock design in which motifs of green beads are surrounded by circles of black stitching.

The fans sponsored this year are nearly all large and brilliant gatherings of feathers. Head dresses incline to the simple bands of metallic tissue or of material matching the frock. As to evening wraps, these are as gorgeous and as varied as the garments worn by the old Venetian aristocracy. Brocades, velvets, furs and satins—these are fused in a pageant of brilliant colors.

The radical hostess believes that a party to be really successful must be just a little Greenwich Villagey. And the further away from Greenwich Village, the more Villagey the party. The radical hostess loves to sit on the floor and read aloud from the latest Dial. And if there are any college boys present—real radical ones—there will be a hot argument as to whether or not capital owns the college or the college owns capital.

The frightened hostess. This is the little bride's first dinner party in the new apartment. There is a far away look in her eye as she listens to your best little anecdote. "O, not really!" the little bride will exclaim. "O, how perfectly absurd!" But don't you fool yourself. She hasn't heard a word. All the time she's been going over in her mind whether or not Hulda will remember to serve the after dinner coffee at the table.

"Jennie, please keep that door closed!" The power behind the throne in the bride's household is the bride's mother. Very often the bride asks her to help out at her little dinner party and to see that Jennie and Maggie do not completely lose their heads in a crisis.

THE PERFECT HOSTESS

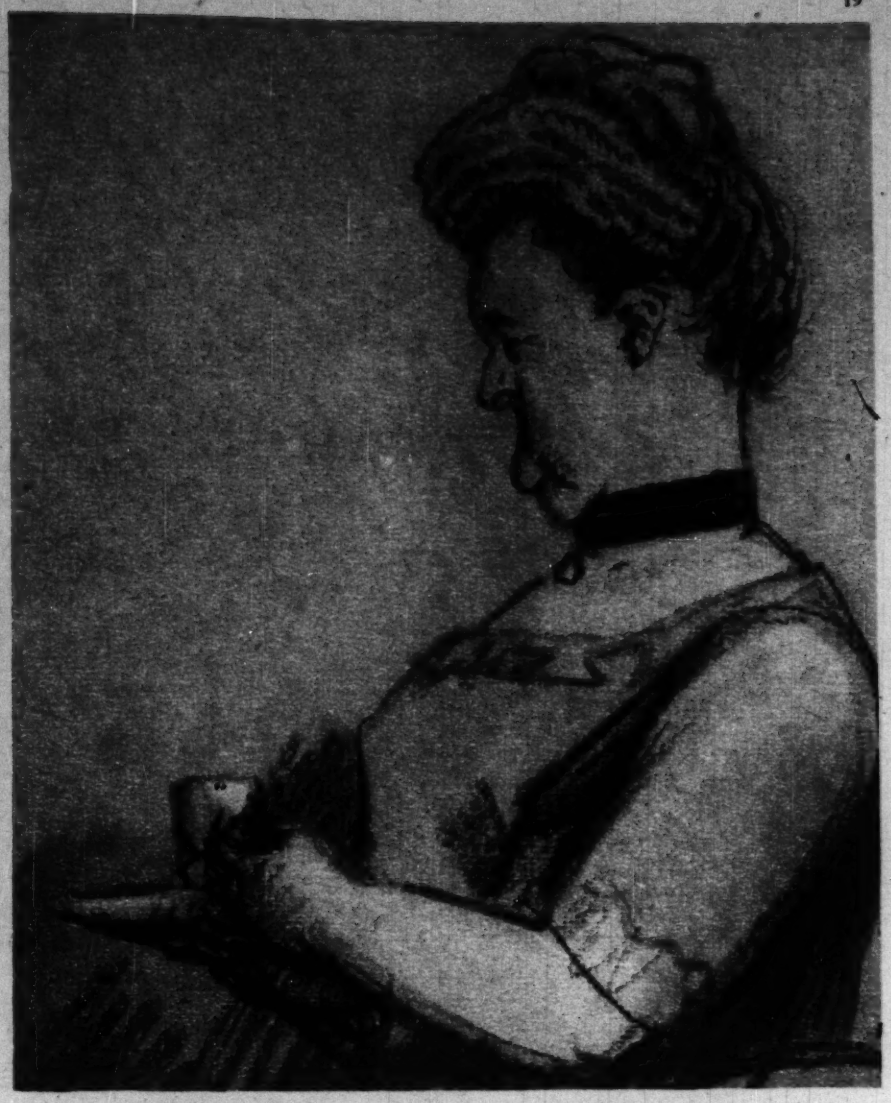
A little entertaining in the kitchen wing. Miss Hagerty, from County Mayo, is playing hostess, and a very perfect one, to Policeman Duffy, also from County Mayo.



The conservative hostess believes that the millennium in art, literature, and politics happened about 1889. "Only the other evening," the conservative hostess will say, "I was glancing through a bound volume of Munsey's Magazine for 1890. Why have we no such magazines nowadays?" And the dinner guests of the conservative hostess, being conservatives also, will feel just that way about things. Over the coffee they will discuss the league of nations and offer praise unbounded for Senator Lodge.

The determined hostess, who wants every guest to do his bit, is urging a shy young man to get up and sing that frightfully silly college song, "Hiddley Diddley Dye"—the one he was singing while half seas over at the Yale-Princeton game—O, he was too killing! After a while the determined hostess will pick on some one else. "O, Doctor Cleaver," she'll sing across the room, "do tell us something about the interesting operations you've performed lately! You must have just heaps of thrilling things to tell us!"

The hostess who meant the very mild cocktail for herself picked the wrong one. Some one else got the orange juice. The hostess, who can't take much of anything—"goes right to my head, my dear"—is feeling her liquor. She's nodding and smiling and saying "Yesh, indeed," rather thickly. Be all right in a moment.

The resigned hostess who doesn't like giving parties but is going to get through the evening as bravely as possible. There's just a little trouble—not very much—in the kitchen. Just enough to give the resigned hostess a suspicion of a headache. Just now she is trying to catch her husband's eye, to let him know it's time for the cocktails.

PLEASANT and DANGEROUS by Marion Strobel

Anthony Frequently Had Been the Third Angle of a Domestic Triangle; But It Was Different With Cyrena —She Had Freed Herself of Her Husband.

"Good-by, darling."

ANTHONY thought of himself as a romantic figure. Indeed, he was justified; he had frequently been the satisfactory angle between a husband and a wife. It was a position that he liked and understood, for it was gratifying to his imagination. He could always honestly believe that he adored the woman, that she was as a "child gone astray in the night" (he had used the phrase to a number of women: he thought it rather apt), and that he was mad with love of her, that he could never see her again, that her nearness made a beast of him, that he would go somewhere far away and try to forget—though he could not forget!—at any rate, he would not bother her any more—no, he would not bother her, he would not make her unhappy; his love was greater than his desire; but "O, my dear, if you only cared," and so on in incoherent contradictions till she obtained a divorce and the glamour dropped away from her as a chrysalis beneath the warmth of the sun, and she was simply a divorced woman that he had once loved. O, yes, he had loved her to distraction, but "emotions are so ephemeral. That is the pity of it, the tragedy. I must be honest with you. I have always been honest, haven't I? We can still be friends?" And kissing her hands —"Sweet, sweet woman"; and shrugging his shoulders—"'Nothing is constant except change.'"

Cyrena Beldon Homphrey, however, wasn't married. At least she was no longer married. That was the trouble. He wished he had known it sooner, before things had gone so far, before she had disconcertingly said. "I was so young. I didn't know what I was doing. A child gone astray in the night."

And now she was coming to have tea with him, alone in his apartment, to tell him "all about it." The contemplation of her visit disturbed and irritated him. He thought it indelicate of her: if she were no longer married she ought, automatically, to acquire again the outlook and demeanor of a maiden. He was somewhat vague concerning the outlook and demeanor of maidens, but he was sure they did not come to a man's apartment. Indeed, certain married women demurred. No, decidedly, an unmarried girl should not come to his apartment. . . . He momentarily wondered at the vast number of the young, the attractive, and the unmarried, and at his knowing so little about them. He had always avoided them. He thought men who deceived young girls very despicable. Not that he would want to deceive them, but he might. . . . His intentions were always nebulous, and young girls had a right to expect marriage. Not that he had anything against marriage. . . . He liked the possibility of it. In fact, he liked the possibility so much that he dreaded it might become an actuality.

The unexpected knowledge that Cyrena was no longer married was, therefore, terrifying. It made everything so easy: there was not the customary obstacle, in the person of a husband, with which to contend. The situation was, to Anthony, very flat, for, in a sense, there was no situation. Cyrena was a single woman (and an experienced one); he was a single man. If they wished to marry they could do so. That was all there was to it. The anticipation was as alluring to him as the contemplation of a steeplechase without hazards.

The whole thing was a bore.

He put another log on the wood fire in front of which he was standing, then turned and surveyed the room. It was, in a futuristic way, effective: the kind of room in which a bobbed haired, batik gowned artist could best explain how primary colors made a canvas "sing." At times Anthony had thought the Nile green of the curtains and the black chints of the sofa and chairs too obvious an admission—even in spite of the conventional cloisonne lamp that dignified the small table beside the fireplace and the indefinite beauty of two Brangwyn etchings. However, the room had, in the five years that he had lived in it, remained unchanged. And when his first smoke gray carpet, which he inherited, wore out he had replaced it with a new smoke gray carpet. For there was to him a certain sentimental attachment to the background that had served him through so many emotional epochs, a keeping the old uniform after the war is over feeling.

If Cyrena were only still in possession of her husband he would now be experiencing a pleasurable excitement. Really, she had no right to deprive a strategist of his campaign.

He began pacing the floor; six steps up the room, six steps back; six up, six back. Over and over.

THE door bell rang and he stopped still, swaying slightly, his body wishing to continue in rhythmic monotony.

"Ah, well," he said aloud, shrugging his shoulders, instinctively lighting a cigaret, "so it goes."

He crossed and opened the door.

"Cyrena, my dear, my dear——"

"Tony!" She had a way of sighing the abbreviation of his name. It sounded daring on her lips. He wondered whether she really was frightened of him. He hoped she was.

"Tony, darling, it is naughty coming here, isn't it?" She smiled up at him, her face mischievous.

"Sweet child." He took her hand and led her into the sitting room.

After he had placed her in the large armchair in front of the fire and she had thrown back the gray duvetyn cape and given him the blue brocaded and silver tasseled turban, he began really to enjoy her visit. He had forgotten that she was such a pleasure to look at, that her wide gray eyes and the dull gold of her hair emphasized the transparent, petallike quality of her skin. She was one of the few blondes whose appearance was not obvious.

Yes, really, she was charming—so utterly helpless, she even had a way of breaking off her sentences in the middle, as if her strength were not equal to them. And her voice had the thin gustiness of an April wind, which made her most commonplace remarks (and she often made them) seem somewhat unexpected. Usually she stressed her words with graceful, irrelevant gestures. "O, this day!" she would exclaim, closing her eyes, her hands at her throat. It did not matter particularly whether or not the sun was shining—it was just that at some period in each day she would be overcome with the joy of living. At least, he supposed that was it, although he supposed, too, that she must know that her eyelids were lavender and her fingers as miraculously tapering as those of a Da Vinci madonna. And that, therefore, the effect of closed eyes and fingers at throat was pleasing.

Today, however, with the black chints of the armchair framing her hair and the pale oval of her face, she was more directly appealing than usual, more dramatic than he had ever before seen her. And as if realizing this she had omitted all her customary gestures—her arms lay in her lap, white and still, her fingers were clasped.

"Tony, it isn't going to be easy to tell you," she said at last. This was after he had remarked upon her dress, and that black made her look more absurdly young than ever, and had asked her whether she wanted coffee or a cigaret, and had been otherwise appropriately solicitous.

"I've been trying to tell you for so long," she continued, "but it's hard—very hard. And Alfred, poor dear, was always so helpful about little things. Alfred was my husband, you know. . . . O, I've tried to tell you before. . . . But somehow at first I didn't know you well enough. An ex-husband is so intimate a topic of conversation! So intimate—like religion."

He glanced at her quickly, wondering whether she could have had the poor taste to joke about her marriage, but her face, still turned toward the fire, was very grave.

"And then later, when I got to know you better, I forgot Alfred. And everything was——" She broke off characteristically and made a small, futile gesture with her hands. "Well, you see how it was," she concluded.

When she began again her voice was very low, the words light as pollen blown in the wind.

"And I would never have told you if we hadn't had that talk last Sunday on the beneh in Lincoln park. You said such lovely things to me, Tony. Do you remember?"

He nodded, speculating on the absurdities he might have said. He never could remember afterward. . . . Really, women were an extraordinarily avaricious sex; they gathered their compliments as an Indian chief might gather colored feathers, and they wore them as conspicuously. He hated the vanity of it. After all, given a spring day, a park bench, a pretty woman, and the conversation would take care of itself. Cyrena had probably been as fragile and provocative as the crocuses beside the bench, and he had probably said so, but there were any number of women who would have deserved the same simile. He wondered whether he had compared her to the crocuses. He hoped he had.

"You said such very lovely things," she repeated; "that in spring we should all be free to follow our whimsical fancies; that all marriage should be dissolved for the months of April and May; that the whole world should be light hearted, and hold a carnival and dance on the street, and throw confetti—the men dressed as Pierrots and the girls as Pierrettes. And we should all love wisely and too well. O, you made it sound so delightful and so plausible. And, Tony, you would look irresistible in white satin with a very large and very stiff ruche about your neck."

"If it were only possible," he smiled. Indeed, he thought he might look charming.

"And you would make an irresistible Pierrette," he added politely.

"Ballet skirts are becoming, and I love wearing a hat over one eye. O, let's!"

She leaned toward him eagerly, her hands still clasped, her eyes bright, the color in her cheeks deepening as it always did when she was excited, and giving her a look of added youth. It was this childlike quality in her, coupled with the fact that she was married and therefore no longer a child, that had first piqued his curiosity. Had she been single he would have accepted her at her face value: a foolish and pretty moth hovering about a flame, and he would have dismissed her; but as she was married he considered her extraordinarily pretty and extraordinarily foolish, and a thing of wonder and a mystery to be solved.

"What do you mean, dear child?"

"O, couldn't we dress up as Pierrot and Pierrette and have a carnival all of our own?"

"And dance, and throw confetti? And love wisely and too well?"

She nodded, clapping her hands in her joy.

"Tony, it isn't going to be pleasant to tell you."

AFTER she had gone he thought that the whole afternoon—their talk of a carnival through April and May, and of being free, and the chatter of love—had been absurd. And when they had had their coffee she had called him "my sweet" and had fed him sugar. They had tried to be as sentimental and childish as Pierrot and Pierrette would have been, and he thought they had succeeded admirably. In fact, he thought that their conversation had had about as much dignity and purpose as the first steps of a long legged, woolly bodied lamb.

And it was not until she had said good-by that he remembered that she hadn't told him "all about it," and that the situation was exactly as it had been, only more so. For now he was bound to be her slave for two months. And as they had sworn to be gay, and to discard all responsibilities, she would not, of course, mention her husband, or rather her lack of one.

"I do love her," he spoke aloud, as he stood, elbows on the mantelpiece, face in hands, looking earnestly into the fire.

"But I can't marry her. She ought to understand that. I'm not a marrying man. Why, I'd make a woman miserable." He paused as though listening to an argument:

"Besides, she has no right to expect it. It's not a question of marriage. And, moreover, she suggested this idiotic spring gamboling. It would be too banal if we ended with the usual June wedding. And disastrous! Imagine being a Pierrot for two months, a whimsical, lovable chap, and then having to change into a husband—a responsible individual, who eats liver and bacon for breakfast, and reads the sporting sheet, and calls his wife 'the missus.' It's unthinkable. She must see that."

O, he'd make her see it—if it were necessary. But perhaps it wouldn't be necessary. Perhaps she would be that exceptional feminine creature—willing to play with no thought of the future. Perhaps, after two months filled with extravagance and sunshine she would blow him a kiss and vanish. The possibility cheered him tremendously.

"WHY do they call it a 'Lobster Farce'?" She had asked him the same question seven times. For on every Friday they had eaten their luncheon at the Petit. And the Petit always had "Lobster Farce" on Fridays. Curiously enough, they had never tired of the gay little restaurant with its audacious wall paper (pink pelicans flying across a cream colored background), and the intimate tables, each holding a lavender tulip in a green glass vase. Even the substantial stone fireplace, with a smoldering fire in mild weather, and on either side of it the impressive wrought iron candlesticks, with twelve unlit candles, were, to them, a charming irrelevance.

"They call it a 'Lobster Farce,' Cyrena, because it is such a very fine lobster that you laugh with joy as you eat it."

"Oh, Tony, really?" And she would put a tiny piece into her mouth, head tentatively on one side, fork poised in midair. And after a moment, laugh. Laugh and laugh—the sound as tinklingly sweet as wind through beaded curtains.

Today, however, as he laughed with her as was his wont, he was conscious that this was their last tête-à-tête. The knowledge made him watch her the more closely. He did not want ever to forget her wide gray eyes, the petallike quality of her skin, the indefinite line of her mouth, her lips slightly parted, breathless with youth. For the seventh time, he imagined how alluring she would be in crinoline, with a leghorn hat, and her arms filled with spring flowers—a Joshua Reynolds picture.

"Tony, what are you staring at? Don't you like this dress?"

"Of course I like it. Haven't I always said that you should wear dark blue serge, amber beads, and a tricorn hat?"

"Really, Tony?"

"Of course. Dear child, I wonder if you realize that this is the last luncheon that we will have here. Tomorrow is the first of June."

"Which ends our two months of spring madness, and restores us to the world just as we left it! Ah, Tony, dear, I had such high hopes when we started. It has been very, very pleasant, but I hoped—O, I hoped it would be a wee bit dangerous."

"What do you mean, Cyrena?" He spoke with distinctness and precision: he felt vaguely insulted.

"But it hasn't been dangerous, Tony. Just pleasant: theaters, concerts, automobile trips, roller skating, riding, and luncheon here. But we haven't thrown confetti, or been silly, or risked our lives or reputations——"

"I didn't know you wanted a scandal."

She laughed at that, her eyes nearly closing in her delight.

"Oh, darling, I didn't know what I wanted. But it was pleasant," she added soothingly. "Rather like being engaged to be married, wasn't it? Only when you're engaged you look forward to marriage." She paused provocatively. But as he did not take what he considered was a brazen hint, she continued:

"Though I could never again look forward to marriage."

"O, no, couldn't you?" He felt suddenly ridiculous, and his relief was so great that he added: "I had hoped, Cyrena, that I could make you forget your past unpleasant experience."

She looked at him in surprise: "O, I couldn't forget Alfred. Poor dear, he was always so helpful about little things."

A moment later she had changed to her most frivolous mood and had tossed him a gay, inconsequential phrase, which he at once caught and tossed back, marveling the while at his extraordinary skill in this game of conversational shuttlecock. And when he said good-by to her, on the windy Michigan avenue corner, she was still a tantalizingly light hearted Pierrette. She held his hand only for a second, and she laughed up at him:

"Good-by, Tony. Perhaps I'll see you next April. Perhaps then we could make it pleasant and dangerous? Good-by, darling!"

He missed her very much during the months of June and July. He even had frantic conversations with the clerk of her hotel, who adhered to his original statement that Mrs. Cyrena Beldon Homphrey had checked out of the hotel on the thirty-first of May and had left no forwarding address.

In August he came to the conclusion that he loved her more than he had ever loved a woman before, and in September he decided that he might marry her. He felt exalted, and he was not surprised that, shortly after he had made his decision, he should hear from her:

"I'll be in for tea on Saturday.

"PIERRETTE."

The letter was postmarked Chicago, but was without date or address.

"AH, Tony," she sighed the abbreviation of his name much as she had done on that first afternoon in his apartment; and he led her into the sitting room as he had done before and placed her in the large armchair. And, as before, she gave him her turban, threw back her duvetyn cape, and was dressed simply and in black. She was very pale, and he thought it made her more appealing than ever.

"Alfred has asked me to come back, Tony." She spoke without looking at him, and her voice was low and tired. "I think perhaps I shall. He's rather sweet. And now with prohibition—yes, I think, perhaps, I shall. I wanted you to know——"

He could never remember exactly what happened after that—only that she was in his arms and crying, and he was saying that he would not let her go back, that he loved her, that he was going to marry her. . . . And that a few days later he actually was married to her, and she was laughing up at him, her face sweetly ingenuous, her words light as pollen blown in a wind:

"Ah, Tony darling, will you forgive me? I told a little lie. Not a real lie. Just a little white lie. Alfred didn't actually ask me to come back, but I know he would have; he always said that if I wanted anything, if the use of his name would help—poor dear, he was always so helpful about little things—and I wanted to marry you, I loved you so—it was——" She made a small, futile gesture with her hands.

"Well, you see how it was."

THE ROOM ON THE ROOF

The Story of a Crime in a Skyscraper - - - - - - by Will Payne

THIRTEENTH INSTALLMENT.

The Slayer Confesses.

WHITESIDE spoke again, with a certain cheerfulness: "Well, my uncle being in the state he's in, and with your testimony about when I went to the roof, there's probably nothing more to worry about. Still, I do worry more or less. I realize that some of the stuff looks bad for us—the revolver, and my uncle's hating Krom, and so on. After all, a man's got his reputation to think of." He smiled around at her. "I wouldn't choose to spend the next few months in a cell. I may not get a chance to look around or do anything for myself after this inquest. They may hold me, after all, you see. I hoped that trunk might throw some light."

So, at last, there it was, plumply! But she couldn't answer, it seemed. Although her eyes were straight ahead, she knew that he was looking down at her, waiting for the answer.

"I don't know what was in the trunk," she said after a moment, eyes straight ahead. "It was opened, but I didn't see . . . . I can't tell you anything more about it—please . . . . They fooled me."

He was looking at her stony face with a vague awe; and she was exerting her will to keep from looking round at him.

"I see," he said, under his breath, with that vague awe. "Why, I'm sure it doesn't matter! I'm sure it will be all right, anyway. Don't bother. It's bound to be all right. Probably nothing in the trunk, but some of this invention stuff, anyway. It doesn't matter."

He was, of course, trying to reassure her, as one comforts a friend in distress. And he was far from unhappy; for there was something about her stony face and her babbling "They fooled me." Certainly "they" could mean nobody except Harwood. He knew that her look, back there in the basement at Slow river, gave him a pledge. And he understood now that she was telling him something much more than the words said. In all this there was a subtle language of youth which conveys meaning otherwise than by words; in which mere words may count for so little. He felt, with a touch of awe, that she was giving herself away to him in regard to the man to whom she was engaged. He rather blurted:

"I know you did all you could."

She realized then how much she had given herself away to him in regard to Nat Harwood. A few more steps brought them to a street corner, where she halted. She looked up at him; a strenuous night with little sleep might have accounted for her pallor:

"I think I'll take a bus here," she said. It was a dismissal, for she couldn't have borne talking to him any longer just then. There was too great a tumult in her breast—especially after he spoke to her about his uncle, for whose clean hands he felt so deep a satisfaction, while on her side of the case all seemed so bedraggled and besmudged.

He understood the dismissal, also—smiling and saying cheerfully, "Well, we'll meet at the inquest!" standing a little apart from her so there was no necessity of speaking until the bus came up.

She smiled faintly back at him as she went into the vehicle. He could always understand. She could always be sure of him—solid, like a rock in water. She was engaged to a man of quite another sort. But she was engaged; and within two hours this man might be going into a cell to answer a charge of murder.

But that must not happen now! She would see Nat and tell him that if he wanted her he must set Robert Whiteside free. . . . Meanwhile, why had Capt. West sent for her?

CAPT. WEST, with a proper pride in his profession, resented outside interference in police affairs—particularly interference backed by political and social influence with the powers higher up. So he was restive under Nathaniel Harwood's guiding hand in the matter of the murder in the roof room. In the preliminary stages of such a case the police department and the state's attorney's office had practically equal authority, and, under the surface, there was a rather lively professional jealousy between the two. Harwood had not endeared himself to Capt. West by calling in the state's attorney, as represented by Mr. Pratt.

In fine, Capt. West was much inclined to make a stroke off his own bat, if only for the purpose of letting Mr. Harwood know that the police department was running the case. So he had sent for Harwood's pretty secretary—whom, however, he received, at twenty minutes to ten, with becoming courtesy. His first inquiry was:

"Had you any reason to expect a message from Steinman yesterday afternoon?"

Naturally Bess opened her eyes at so unexpected a question, and replied, "Why, no!"

"What do you know about Steinman's movements the last two or three weeks?" the policeman asked.

Wondering, she told him that Mr. Steinman had left the little factory at Slow River, saying he was going away for a rest—at least Krom had so reported. But in telling it she remembered the night before when Nat had said, "Steinman's body may be in that trunk!" Some indefinite apprehension tugged at her nerves. Could anything have happened to the little inventor? Captain West, courteously listening, watched her—eyes fixed eagerly upon him, her voice anxious, a stir and flutter of the pulses showing in her manner. If that wasn't the stamp of truth where would one find it? She concluded, with an anxious, subtly pleading note:

"But why are you asking, Captain West? Have you heard anything from Mr. Steinman?"

"I put a man in Krom's room at the hotel," West replied dryly, for that also had been done without consulting Harwood. "At five o'clock a telephone call came. The man in the room said he was Krom and took the message—or as much of it as he could get. The person on the wire said he was telephoning from near Nariposa, Michigan. He said a man named Steinman was dying in his house and wanted to see Krom as soon as possible."

At the word "dying" she bent forward a little, her lips apart, her hands coming together in her lap.

"It looked," Captain West continued, "as though this man on the wire expected Krom and a young woman to go to Nariposa on the night train. The man said he would meet them at the station and drive them to the dying person. That was as much as my man could get."

The cry of distress in her voice was subdued, but distinguishable. "What did you do, Captain? Did you find Steinman? . . . He isn't dead?" The tone begged him to say no. Watching her, Captain West had no doubt of her affection and concern.

"No; he's not dead," he said. "How well do you know him? Tell me what you can about him."

"He's a dear, queer little man," she began, and ran on, in something of a jumble, to give him her impressions of the inventor.

"But where is he, Captain? Is he ill?" What absorbed her evidently was just a fond anxiety about the odd inventor. The policeman noted that with approval.

"He's not ill. We traced that telephone call, Miss Malden. It came from over on Clark street—not from Nariposa, Michigan. Had Krom any reason to think you would be in his room at five o'clock yesterday afternoon?" It was a question, he thought, that might have embarrassed, or offended, many young women. But she answered at once:

"Yes; I should have been there if—this other—hadn't happened. You see, I was taking dictation from him. He was supposed to be suffering from iritis; unable to use his eyes or to go out in the light." She explained rapidly about his sending for her, Mr. Harwood being interested in the invention. And she was remembering something from day before yesterday:

"He did speak to me about Mr. Steinman the day before—asked if I had heard anything from him; he said he hadn't heard for a week or so; he seemed a little anxious. But when I said we ought to start an inquiry he said Steinman was no doubt all right."

CAPTAIN WEST twisted the point of his beard and remarked: "It looks fairly clear," then. You would be in his room when this telephone message came. You were fond of Steinman. You thought Krom couldn't use his eyes. Probably you would have gone up to Nariposa with him and been met at the station by somebody or other and driven somewhere or other. H'm. Young ladies would save the police no end of trouble if they would remember not to go to strange places with strange men." Then he seemed to take off his not unkindly professional mask and to become merely human as he smiled and said: "You can afford to forgive me for telling you that because, in fact, you didn't go."

But she was remembering Robert Whiteside as he lurked miserably in the Ellenborough hotel corridor, saying, "No one else cares about you, but I care." And how she had then sent him about his business! She half concealed a little sigh by saying, "At any rate, Steinman is not dying."

"No," said the captain, and considered an instant. "The point that sticks in my mind now is the black bag. The elevator man is sure Krom had it when he went up. And you're sure you didn't see it in the roof room."

He put that as a statement, not as a question; yet Bess thought, with a shock, "That's really what he wanted to question me about!" Had he some clew? Must she commit herself?

"You think that's important?" she asked—a sort of instinctive sparring for time.

"Very!" said Captain West, with unmistakable decision. "If I could put my hands on that I could clear up the whole affair."

He was not questioning her; at least his speech was not in the form of a question. Yet his whole bearing—she felt—did question her. To clear up the whole affair! That might mean Robert Whiteside's fate. It might mean Nat Harwood's fate. If she committed herself now she might not be able to go back of it, no matter what happened. She'd said Robert Whiteside must go free. Those things flitted in her mind for a crucial instant—but she couldn't betray the man to whom she was engaged.

"I'm sure it wasn't up there," she repeated low. So she had cast the die! Her heart raced as she realized it. . . . "I wish I knew where Mr. Steinman is," she said, at random—in order to speak of anything except that black bag.

"Well, he's here," said the policeman. "It was he who shot Krom."

THAT statement, made with a casual air, simply dazed her. "O, no!" she breathed, as one makes a witless exclamation upon hearing an incredible statement.

"He says so," Captain West replied. "He claims self-defense—says Krom caught him up there and was going to throw him off the roof." The speaker paused an instant. "Mr. Harwood has no doubt it's true. It does sound plausible."

Her mind, so to speak, was laboring to get its breath; and she exclaimed foolishly: "But Steinman! . . . Such a harmless, timid little man . . . It doesn't seem possible." She gave it up and sat staring at the policeman.

West explained: "He says he came to town without Krom knowing it and went up to the roof room, to which he had keys, in order to get something about this invention, and Krom came in—rushed at him, threatening to throw him off the roof. He'd found that bone handled revolver in the drawer at Slow River and appropriated it—being a timid man, as you say. It's exactly the timid man who does pull a gun, if he has one, and blaze away. All that sounds plausible enough to me."

Bess pondered that astonishing denouement—or, rather, felt it—for a long, helpless moment. Her lips trembled and she murmured, "Poor little man!"

Captain West, who had been waiting for her reaction to the explanation, offended her by laughing. But she found no offense in his words: "I'm afraid you'd ruin any police department. But all the same you've probably got the final answer to our mysteries. Poor little men, and poor little women!" He was still laughing at her, very humanely. Then his face resumed its not unkindly professional mask as he observed:

"So that clears it up—all except the black bag. Steinman says Krom didn't have it when he came into the roof room. The elevator man is positive he had it when he stepped out of the elevator. He couldn't have thrown it out of a window—or hidden it in the corridor—or we'd have found it."

She kept silent. After a moment the policeman spoke dryly:

"Mr. Harwood has had the inquest postponed till noon. Very likely the black bag will not figure in the proceedings."

"Mr. Harwood has talked to Mr. Steinman?" she asked.

"O, yes," West replied, as though that would be a matter of course—and a matter of course that he took no joy in. "Steinman came in here about eight o'clock. I wasn't here, but he said that he shot Krom and wished to see Mr. Harwood. They questioned him about the shooting and telephoned Mr. Harwood—about half past eight, I think. Mr. Harwood is satisfied Steinman is telling the truth about it. He thinks the elevator man is mistaken about a black bag."

There was a certain dryness in the captain's tone. Bess had apprehended the day before that Nat's hand was always behind the scenes, so to speak, in this police investigation. She now apprehended that Captain West was not pleased thereat. She stifled a little sigh, and said:

"If there's nothing more I will go on to the office."

"Nothing more, thank you," West answered.

Going out to La Salle street she was thinking, "He really wanted to sound me about that bag." And she was sorry that she had been obliged to lie to him about it, for she had rather fallen in love with Captain West, as much as her preoccupations would allow.

THE STORY THUS FAR:

NATHANIEL HARWOOD, a handsome lawyer of 43, has lost most of the big fortune left him and his daughter by his wife. He is practically engaged to Mrs. Letitia Belknap, a widow with ten millions. Adolph Krom and a "Professor" Steinman interest him in a motion picture invention they have stolen from their employer, Simon Curlin. Harwood sets them to work in the room on the roof, a retreat above his offices in a Chicago skyscraper. Then he installs them in an old factory in Slow River, Mich., his home town. There he falls in love with young Elizabeth Malden. Elizabeth sees Curlin and his young nephew, Robert Whiteside, ejected from the factory. She picks up a revolver dropped by Curlin and leaves it in the shop.

Elizabeth goes to Chicago as Harwood's secretary and becomes engaged to him. Steinman disappears. Krom shows Harwood some pictures, claims the invention is finished, and demands the lawyer buy him out for $250,000. Krom relates that he killed Steinman in a drunken frenzy and buried the body in a trunk in the Slow River factory. Harwood pays him $30,000 on account. Krom sees Harwood kiss Elizabeth and is jealous. He plots with Peter Green, watchman at the Slow River factory, to kidnap Elizabeth.

Elizabeth sees Whiteside go through a door leading to the room on the roof. Dashing up, she finds Krom on the floor, shot dead. Beside him are Whiteside and Curlin, the latter holding the revolver Elizabeth picked up at the Slow River factory. Elizabeth sees Harwood examining a black bag Krom usually carried. Later she finds the bag hidden in Harwood's desk. Curlin and Whiteside claim they had an appointment with Krom in the roof room, but found him dead when they arrived.

In Krom's coat is found a note bequeathing all his property to Elizabeth, "especially trunk buried in coal bin." Whiteside and Curlin are released on parole till 10 o'clock next morning. Elizabeth goes to the Slow River factory with Judge Liscomb to find the trunk. There they find Curlin, who locks them in a coal bin. Whiteside appears, and his arm is broken as he battles his uncle.

Elizabeth is about to open the trunk when Police Sergeant Samuels and Harwood appear in the cellar. Curlin and Whiteside are sent off to Chicago. Harwood persuades Elizabeth to go upstairs while he opens the trunk. Calling her back, he points to two blocks, saying they were in the trunk. But she had seen the blocks on the floor before the trunk was opened. Harwood drives her back to Chicago in his car. There she meets Whiteside, who has again been paroled. Curlin has collapsed. She dreads to tell Robert she did not see the trunk opened.

THE ROOM

THE ROOF

So poor little Steinman had shot Krom! That, after all, was the overwhelming fact. Certainly that meant release for Robert Whiteside and his uncle. Steinman's confession must have been why the police had let Whiteside go on parole this morning. . . . But how had the black bag got into Nat's room? Absorbed in many thoughts, she walked down the street to the granite arch, with "Belknap Building" carved in it.

SHE was not surprised at finding Nat's room empty. Naturally he would be busy—partly, she thought, in setting the stage for the inquest, which, at his request, had been postponed to twelve o'clock. She had a quite new understanding of Nat now—quite new, that is, as compared with her understanding of only a week before. She was sure that his hand had been molding the police inquiry of the preceding afternoon. She was sure that his hand would be molding the inquest. With Nat a lot of the play went on behind the scenes, so to speak. The handsome, amiable, alert face which he turned to the world was only the show window.

Such an understanding had lately come to her. But she was pledged to marry him; she had yielded to his arms and kissed his lips; they had planned a future together. The interior of the shop hardly corresponded with the show window, but it did not occur to her that she could, therefore, repudiate her bargain. She had no doubt that he would be fond and kind and "good"—conventionally faithful to her, meeting the stock requirements of a husband. To stand by a pledge, to keep a promise, without counting the cost, was fundamental and instinctive with her. And she had a feeling that he needed her.

Harwood telephoned about half past ten to say the inquest had been postponed and to ask her to wait in the office for him; he was busy; would explain later. It was near twelve when he came in—briskly, with the air of an alert, competent man who was pressed for time. Certainly there was fondness in his smile and tone as he greeted her with, "Morning, Bessie! Manage to get some sleep?" The fondness struck heavily upon her heart; without doubt he loved her; and he needed her. But the time was short, and without even waiting for a return of his greeting he plunged into explanation, confidentially lowering his rapid utterance:

"It was Steinman who shot Krom. He's confessed it. Puts a new face on it all, you see. I'll tell you about it as we go along."

She let him make the brief recital without interrupting, for it seemed not worth while to tell him she already knew of Steinman's confession; that would involve an explanation of her visit to Captain West's office, and the time was short.

"Of course, it's important now to bring out that Krom was a dangerous man," he ran on, lightly and rapidly. "I'm positive Steinman is telling the truth about it; he shot in self-defense. But he's such a muddle headed little rabbit—no telling which way he may jump. He'd hardly have sense enough to bring out how much afraid of Krom he was and how much reason he had to be afraid. It would be a shame if the coroner's jury should bind him over to Criminal court—make him go through a trial for murder and all that. I've been going over it with him—driving into his head what he must bring out in his testimony. The state's attorney's office understands the case, and the coroner's office. We must show that Krom was a really dangerous man, addicted to drink and all that. I'm bound to clear Steinman, for there's not the least doubt that he ought to be cleared."

Bess could go hand in hand with him as to that, and even generously, loyally admire him for it. Assuredly poor little Steinman was no more a murderer at heart than she was. She couldn't tolerate the idea of his being locked up under a charge of murder, then put on trial for his life. As the poor little "perfessor's" powerful champion, Nat shone engagingly to her.

SHE looked around at the inquest and saw Mr. Pratt of the state's attorney's office and Robert Whiteside; then she recognized the strangest, most pathetic figure she had ever seen in her life, and for a long while after that recognition she had eyes for nothing else.

This figure was indubitably Steinman, but he had shaved his beard, so that his meager face seemed only half as big as before, with sunken cheeks and sunken eyes from which an endless misery seemed to look forth. But the absence of a beard was not all the transformation. She had always heretofore seen him in nondescript, shabby garments whose origin one could hardly even guess—usually with a soiled turndown collar and a rusty little black tie that was almost sure to have come untied. But this rag-bag costume seemed somehow quite appropriate when she came to know him; exactly in that way and in no other would the little inventor naturally dress. She wouldn't even have had him put on a clean, unrumpled collar every morning, for the soiled and rumpled collar was a part of his absolute indifference to everything that clean collars might be held to connote. It was more than indifference; it was a sort of primal innocence, as though he hadn't yet become aware that fig leaves were out of fashion.

But today Steinman was wearing fresh linen, a new necktie, and a new suit of clothes—their newness advertising the fact that they didn't fit him. Assuredly she had grown canny these last few days, for the moment she saw the new clothes she thought, "O, Nat! Nat!" She somehow knew, in an instant, that Harwood had thrust Steinman into these new clothes in order to make him a presentable witness in his own behalf at the inquest; dressed him up for the rôle of an eminent scientist who had been compelled to shoot in self-defense! She knew that as certainly as though she had seen Nat sending somebody posthaste over to State street to buy a sedate gray suit of the inventor's size—as nearly as the messenger could guess it—with instructions to fetch the suit and haberdashery back as soon as possible and clap Steinman into them. . . . O, Nat! Nat! . . . For she had come to see a dignity, even a beauty, in the nondescript old clothes, as though they were, in some sort, garments of unworldliness. Making Steinman respectable in a boy's ready made suit only made him ridiculous. She remembered having seen a newly sheared dog look ashamed of himself. Some of the little inventor's woebegone aspect seemed to refer to his new clothes. But she understood perfectly that Nat's idea of impressing the jury would be to clap him into new clothes—and maybe Nat was right about that.

THE inquest was going smoothly and briskly on. The bearded man described the wounds, the posture of the body, and so on. Sergeant Samuels occupied the witness stand a couple of minutes. Bess forgot Steinman for the time being as Robert Whiteside stood up to be sworn. And she soon guessed that busy Nat had been talking a little to Whiteside also. He told how he and his uncle had gone up to the roof room at a quarter past one to keep an engagement with Krom and had found Krom dead on the floor, and Miss Malden had come in a moment later and Mr. Harwood a minute after her. His examination lasted fifteen or twenty minutes; he was courteously dealt with.

Harwood took the stand. A summary of his testimony would have run thus:

"Krom and Steinman came to me last April saying they were on the track of an important invention. I agreed to advance them money for their living expenses and to buy some materials and tools—a few thousand dollars, all told—while they worked out the idea; also to furnish them a place to work in. I had built a small room on the roof for my own use, when I wished not to be disturbed; I turned that over to them. Naturally I prefer not to describe the invention, as it hasn't been patented.

"It was soon evident to me that Steinman was the real inventor. He speaks English imperfectly. I found him to be a reticent, retiring man, absorbed in his ideas, paying little attention to anything else. So Krom put himself forward as the spokesman; but I was satisfied he had comparatively little to do with the invention. . . .

"Yes; I considered Krom—well, a man to be watched. He drank heavily at times. I shouldn't have cared to be alone with him in an out of the way place if he had a grudge against me. Certainly I would have preferred to deal with Steinman alone, but the two men came to me together, Krom acting as spokesman. It wasn't my business to suggese to Steinman that he best drop Krom. I think that would hardly have been an honorable act on my part, under the circumstances. . . .

"No; I never witnessed an act of violence. Partly it was just my general impression that he was a man from whom violence might be expected under certain circumstances. . . . Yes, sir; he did talk violence. I am quite sure he had been drinking at the time.

He told me that he and Steinman had quarreled over this invention; that he had knocked Steinman on the head with a bottle, killing him, and buried his body in a trunk in the coal bin at Slow River, Michigan—in a little factory there which, also, I had turned over to the inventors to use in working out their ideas. He made that statement to me in connection with a demand for $250,000 on account of the invention. He said that Steinman had been disposed of, so that $250,000 paid to him would give me a clear title to the invention. . . .

"Yes; exactly; he declared that Steinman was dead, so the entire $250,000 should be paid to him, and that would give a clear title to the invention—the co-inventor being out of the way. I didn't take it at all seriously. I had already found that he made statements which were not to be taken seriously. He had been drinking. I set it down as a drunken man's bluster—for the purpose of shaking me down for $250,000 or some such sum. . . .

"Certainly, I did investigate further. While I did not take Krom's statement seriously, it was not a thing to be ignored. I went to Slow River, and found a ttunk buried in the coal bin; but the trunk contained only two cement building blocks an d some excelsior. However, a man who talks offhand about knocking people on the head and burying them in trunks doesn't inspire confidence."

The testimony, thus summarized, came a bit at a time, in response to questions, over half an hour or so. It was given in the lawyer's usual bright, candid manner, and of itself almost settled the case. As he finished, Bess' intertwined fingers tightened and she lightly pressed her lips together—for she thought it was now her turn to take the stand and add her touches to the picture he had painted—a picture not absolutely untrue at any point, unless it was the point of the contents of the trunk; yet so different from the one that had been painted in Capt. West's office the preceding day, when Krom was the "associate" and Curlin and Whiteside the prospective villains!

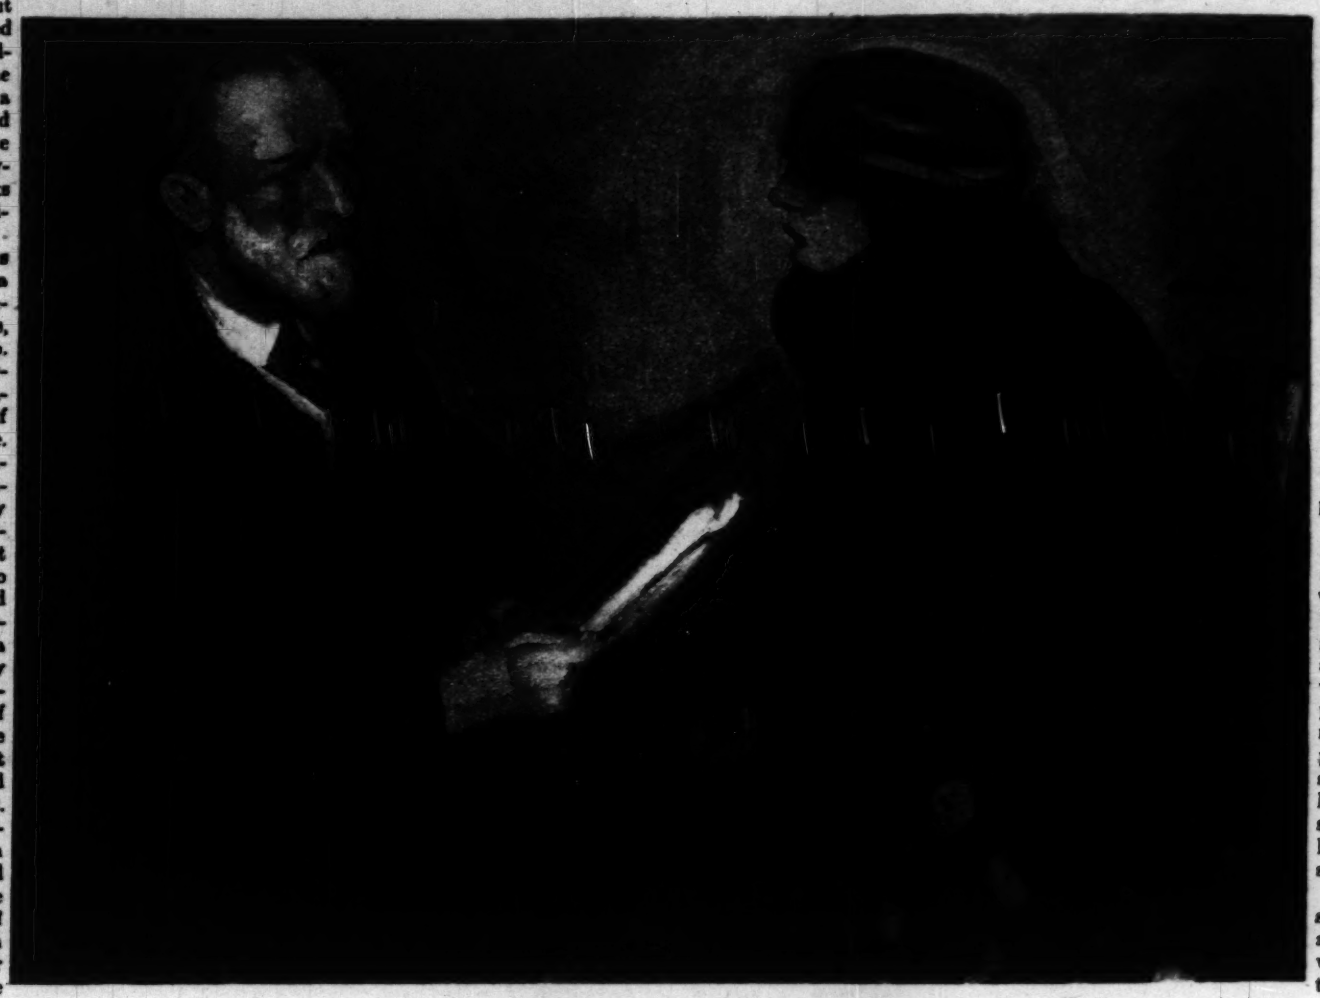
But in fact Steinman was next called. Her heart quailed as she saw him lift a tremulous little hand to stroke the beard which was no longer there—his woebegone eyes turning helplessly to Harwood. And she soon saw that Nat's misgivings respecting his dependability as a witness were needless. He remembered his coaching—answering carefully in his thick, guttural accent. The important points were:

"Grom, he says we should holt back our invention. He says we should mage Mr. Harwood give us great lod of money, gash in hant, before we finish it up. But I say we haf made the bargain, so why we should holt back now? He geds excited; talks bluster-lige; shages his fist. I am nervous aboud that, yess? I don' know whad he might do—up in such oud-the-way place lige that Slow River shob. I thing mebbe I better go away while and led him alone, or mebbe I get my head knocked off. . . .

"No; he don'd say he gill me, but he says he tell Mr. Harwood he gill me with a knock on the head and bury me in coal bin. I don'd so much lige to haf a man talk lige that to me. It is a bad idea, about burying in coal bins. So I lide out. But preddy soon I want some things about this invention. I got, all the while, to think aboud this invention. I want some things. I think mebbe I can get 'em oud that roof room and Grom not find me at it. So I shafe off my beard. . . .

"Yess, cerdainly, I am afraid of Grom. I shafe off my beard so mebbe he pass me in the street and not know me. Then I gome back to Chicago. I haf my keys to that room. Grom, he nefer go up there early in the morning. So I go up preddy early and loog all around for those things I want, but I didn't find 'em. Then that young lady, Miss Malden, gome in with a man and preddy near catch me, only I run and hide in the darg room that we mage in the corner. I get behind some boxes and stuff there. And preddy soon I peeg oud the door but that man is worging at the safe. He worg a long while and by and by he geds the safe open and goes away . . . .

"I wend ofer to loog in the safe for those things I wanted, aboud this invention. I was down on my knees looging. Then Grom comes in. There is so much noise with the wind I ain'd heard him goming in. He gif a shoud and rush at me. He shoud, 'I throw you off the roof!' He is rushing at me when he shouds. Before this he shows me a place by the roof where a man can easy be thrown ofer. He knows I am scared of that place. So he shouds, 'I throw you off the roof!' and rush at me. I haf that pistol in my pocket. He is reaching oud to grab me. I haf the pistol, but he don'd pay any attention to that. He is reaching oud, and I pull the trigger. . . . Yess, mebbe I pull, two, three times. It is all going round in my head; I don'd remember much—only I stick oud the pistol and pull the trigger."



At the word "dying" she bent forward.

THAT was the important part of the little inventor's testimony. It rang true to Bess' ears. Then she perceived that the testimony was at an end and she was not to be called. Evidently Nat had held her in reserve, but concluded that she was not needed. The jury was rising, which broke up the judicial decorum of the company. Other people were rising, stirring about. Some spectators were leaving, considering the show practically over. Nat and Mr. Pratt were conferring in undertones. . . .

Here was Robert Whiteside, looking at her with a faint smile. She arose and stepped to his side.

"Settled, don't you think?" he asked under his breath.

"I don't see how it can help be, after the testimony," she replied—which meant that he would be free. "What do you hear of your uncle?"

"He's recovering. They think now that he will be about again in a few days. . . . I'll go back to my job in Montana as soon as he is out of danger." It seemed tragically absurd that he should be saying such a fateful thing to her in such a commonplace way; but there were people all about, and Nat Harwood was only six feet away.

"Good luck!" she murmured.

"Mayn't I see you before I go?" Very innocent and commonplace words; but they pulled at his heart and hers.

She assented with perfunctory "Yes."

A slight pause; a hungry questioning in his eyes; "I'll call you up at your hotel this evening."

"In the same perfunctory, toneless voice she repeated, "Yes."

That was all; she went back to her chair beside Nat Harwood, who was still talking to Mr. Pratt and waiting for the verdict.

SOME one was rapping for order; the commotion in the room ceased; spectators who had lingered for the ringing down of the curtain settled back in their seats. The jury was ready to return a verdict.

Harwood was confident, yet at the decisive moment his nerves tightened; so did Elizabeth's and Robert Whiteside's. This was the fateful instant.

But the verdict found that Steinman fired in self-defense. Bess looked over at Robert Whiteside and smiled. He was free now—but she was bound!

Could one repudiate a solemn bargain because, on further investigation, it seemed not so good a bargain as one had expected? . . . No; one couldn't. He was free, but she was bound.

And the black bag had not been mentioned. She recalled Capt. West's dry surmise that it would not be mentioned. . . . Here was Nat, triumphant, beaming, courteous, ready to take her away with him. She stood tall and straight beside him, with downcast eyes, not caring to look at Robert Whiteside again.

"Well, that's settled, Bessie," Harwood was saying, his tone low but full of exultation all the same. "I was bound to clear Steinman, and I have." He smiled brilliantly at her as he paid himself the compliment.

She owned that the compliment was well deserved. Certainly the woe begone little inventor should have been cleared. Her busy, managing, manipulating man had accomplished that good deed at any rate. "I'm glad," she said, smiling back. There was a vague idea in the back of her head that she must salvage what she could of her bargain.

But Harwood's mind was running busily on. He looked at his watch. "Half past one, and a lot to do yet! I'll have some luncheon sent up to the office for Steinman and me—and you if you'll join us."

She saw that he was absorbed, eager to get on with the affairs in hand, and she wished to be alone. "You and Steinman will want to talk; I'll get a bite somewhere," she said.

HE let it go at that, being too preoccupied to care much for food and company—even her company. For there was a big exultation in his mind. Having recovered Steinman, he had the invention now, and he proposed to run no further risk of its slipping through his fingers. Erratic Steinman might take it into his head to flit away again. Harwood proposed therefore to have Prof. Kersten come in as an expert adviser, the professor being a far more dependable quantity than the little inventor. Steinman, amenable as a child, had raised no objection to that proposal; and once Kersten got the hang of the thing Harwood would have no more temperamental eccentricities to fear.

Once more, therefore, he must get in touch with Kersten; and there were other affairs—deferred by the absorbing events of the last twenty-four hours—that demanded his attention. With much to do, and a big exultation in his mind, he left Bess to her own devices in the matter of luncheon, and hurried away with Steinman.

And Bess had nothing whatever to do. That was the trouble. It seemed to her that she was walking off into a great emptiness, in which nothing mattered much and any particular thing was about as well undone as done. She would by no means have wept and wrung her hands if she had been alone. It seemed to her that she was surprisingly calm about it—even pausing to look into a shop window with some cursory interest in what she saw there. She wasn't getting the bargain she had expected; she had backed the wrong horse. But people who did such things must expect to pay the penalty. She saw herself from time to time helping Nat hide his stolen jam-pots; her heart was leaden; but she was not faltering.

Finishing luncheon, she went to the office, and encountered Harwood in the inner hall that led to her cabinet—very busy, on the wing. One of those matters, apart from the invention, which had been deferred in the last twenty-four crowded hours involved a conference in Mr. Martindale's room, to which Harwood was now on his way. Encountering Bess in the hall, he halted in his flight long enough to smile and explain, "I'll be tied up in Martindale's room for something like an hour. If Prof. Kersten should come meanwhile, please ask him to wait."

"Where's Steinman?" she asked, for the woebegone little inventor had been in her mind also.

"Upstairs," Harwood replied, over his shoulder, at Mr. Martindale's door.

Partly from an affectionate wish to shake hands, at least, with the "perfessor," and partly from an undefined attraction to the scene of the tragedy, she ran upstairs. The roof room was empty, but the door in the west wall stood open. Going over there she saw Steinman standing atop of the two wooden steps which had been set against the west wall, his hands resting upon, or clutching, the top of the wall. He was bending forward a little, looking downward. Her eyes took in the small figure against a vast panorama of roofs, walls, chimneys under a veil of smoke which gradually thickened until it shut in the cluttered scene at all points.

"Looking at the scenery?" she called gayly.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

A SNOW MAN GETS TOO HOT. BY WM. DONAHEY.

It was certainly a cold day. Even Tilly Titter, the English sparrow, said it was cold, although she was wearing several feathered petticoats that puffed her up until she waddled when she walked. In spite of the cold the Teenie Weenies had spent most of the morning playing in the snow. They had built a snow man, and such a funny looking man, too. He was almost seven inches tall; his eyes, teeth, andnose were made out of tiny bits of coal, and the Teenie Weenies found a cork out of an ink bottle which they put on his head for a hat. The Dunce stuck a straw in his mouth, and the little people thought they had never seen such a funny snow man. The Teenie Weenies played until the Cook called them to lunch, and after they had eaten their fill of boiled rice and mamed hickory nut they were quite content to sit by the warm stove and rest. Having been out in the cold fresh air all morning, they soon grew drowsy, and in a few minutes most of the little folks were nodding and blinking much as though the Sand Man had been around.

Presently there was a peculiar knock at the door. It was a heavy knock, although it was wonderfully soft.

"Come in, please," said the Lady of Fashion, who sat nearest the door.

There was a great deal of fumbling at the tiny latch, but presently the door was pushed open and a white face, with coal black eyes, peered into the room.

"Why, it's the snow man!" gasped the Lady of Fashion.

"Phew!" gasped the Snow Man. "My word, but it's hot and stuffy in here. Why don't you come out and play? It's nice and cold outdoors."

"I'll come!" cried the Lady of Fashion. "Wait until I get my hat and coat."

"I'll come, too!" "And me!" "I'll go!" shouted several of the Teenie Weenies, scurrying around in search of their coats and hats. In a few seconds several of the little folks ran out into the yard, where they found the Snow Man sucking an icicle.

"Freese me, if I wouldn't like to bite this icicle," he said. "But these soft coal teeth I've got won't stand it."

"Let's dance. I'll play on my flute for you!" cried the Turk as he pulled a tiny reed flute out of his pocket.

"O, shucks!" said the Snow Man, shaking his head rather doubtfully. "I shouldn't dance. Makes me awful hot. When I get overheated I melt."

"O, come on. The exercise is good for you," shouted the Turk, and he began to play "The Lady of Fashion Waltz."

The Teenie Weenies were soon swinging around in the snow to the music, and presently the Snow Man began to shuffle his feet. The Turk kept on playing louder and faster until the Snow Man was bounding into the air and performing the most remarkable dance the Teenie Weenies had ever seen. He danced on and on as the little people gathered about him, but soon he began to wabble in a most peculiar way. The perspiration ran off of him in a stream, and presently an eye and three teeth fell out.

"You're melting, Snow Man; you're melting!" cried the Lady of Fashion.

At that minute the Snow Man gave a great jump into the air, and when he came down his right leg crumpled up, spilling the poor fellow on to the ground.

"O, dear!" cried the Snow Man, looking terribly distressed. "I'm—I'm all wet. Why—why, I'm melting! Quick, get an icicle; get an armful of icicles and stuff 'em down on my back," but the words were scarcely out of his mouth when his cheek slid off his face.

"O-o-o-o-oh! He's melting! He's melting!" screamed the Lady of Fashion as she jumped to her feet and looked wildly about.

"What in the name of common sense is the matter with you?" cried the General, leaping out of his comfortable chair beside the stove and catching the little lady by the arm. "Who's melting? What's the trouble?"

"I—I—I must have been dreaming," answered the Lady of Fashion, rubbing her eyes. "I dreamed the Snow Man had danced so hard that—that he had overheated himself and had melted," and, running to the door, she looked out towards the place where the Teenie Weenies had built the snow man that morning.

"Yes, he's there!" cried the little lady, joyfully. "Thank goodness, it was only a dream."

Surely you have longed for the day to come when you could cease paying rent to a heartless landlord and call your home your own. I am now offering you the golden opportunity to free yourself from the clutches of the money-grabbing landlord and at no cost to yourself. Picture a handsome six-room house, nice lawn and pretty shrubbery and flowers growing in well-arranged beds. Don't you want a place like this, and FREE, too? Of course you do, so send me your name TODAY—before you lay this paper aside.

The House Can Be Built Anywhere You Want It

Don't hold back—don't say "no such luck for me." You can have the house built anywhere you say—California, Maine, or anywhere in the United States. It makes no difference where you want to live. This offer is open to all.

I WILL EVEN BUY A LOT FOR YOU

Perhaps you do not own a lot, or have no place to build, but don't allow this to prevent your sending in your name and address, because I will arrange to buy a lot for you if you don't own one. A wonderfully beautiful and comfortable home can be yours if you promptly answer this advertisement, and do as I say. Don't take chances of some other person getting ahead of you, but rush your name and address to me at once. An offer like this may never come to you again.

Costs Nothing to Investigate

You run absolutely no risk whatever. It costs you nothing to investigate this wonderfully liberal offer. I would like to place one of my houses in your locality. All I ask you to do is to rush me your name and address—a post card will do. Just say, "I want one of your FREE homes."

Wonderfully Soothing

is the instant effect of 2 or 3 drops of "Gets-It" when applied to the most painful corn—just like an anaesthetic. Hundreds of thousands of corn knives and razors have been allowed to grow rusty since their owners learned how much more easily, safely, quickly and painlessly "Gets-It" removes corns, first shriveling and then detaching them from the live flesh, so they can be peeled right off with the fingers.

Costs but a trifle—everywhere. Your money back on request.

THE SPORT OF KINGS ON ICE provides thrills which even turf racing can't offer. Here's a running race on the frozen lake at Davos in Switzerland.

Women in 56 countries defy severe climates . . . .

In the world's big cities where smoke and dirt age a woman's skin they depend on this famous method

In almost every country today, even on the bitter plains of North China and Manchuria, women have learned to defeat the ravages of climate on their skin. They climb and ski and toboggan on the roofs of the world—play out of doors in zero weather as a matter of course—the soft skin of their face unharmed.

In great cities, too, where coal dust and dirt have made fresh, supple skins almost an impossibility with just ordinary care, women now defy them to do their worst.

Two things were found essential to make the skin immune to cold and damp and dirt. First, to clean the skin with just the right amount and kind of oil it needs. And then to give it unfailing outdoor protection. To meet these two demands, Pond's developed two different creams—Pond's Vanishing Cream and Pond's Cold Cream.

First, the special cleansing that does more than cleanse

Give your skin a nightly cleansing with the cold cream that contains just the right amount and kind of oil to work in and out without clogging—Pond's Cold Cream. So rich in the right kind of oil it cleans thoroughly and keeps the skin beautifully supple, too. Yet it is light enough to wipe off with a soft cloth and leave your skin fresh and clear.

In commercial cities especially, where soot and dust dry and age the skin of face, neck and hands, women depend on this particular kind of cleansing that overcomes these coarsening influences.

Unharmed! The soft skin of her face though constantly exposed to icy winds. At fashionable winter resorts women depend upon Pond's Vanishing Cream to protect against exposure.

Give your skin every night the kind of cleansing that millions of women have found successful in defeating the coarsening effect of soot and dirt—Pond's Cold Cream.

And then the unfailing outdoor protection

Especially never fail, before going out, to apply the delicate vanishing cream which is known to women all over the world as the famous protective cream—Pond's Vanishing Cream. It contains the most effective softening and soothing ingredient known to skin specialists. And it is so beautifully proportioned that your skin absorbs it freely with no possibility of clogging.

In the winter resorts like the Swiss Alps, and in our own windiest and coldest cities, where women must have special protection, they find this cream unfailing. Because it is greaseless, it may be worn day and evening without fear of its causing a shine.

Use this double method. First the cream that cleans and oils. And then the famous outdoor protection. The most trying climate and conditions leave your skin unharmed. [illegible] from cold and damp, smoke and dirt. As cities have grown bigger and dirtier and as more women have gone to extreme climates to travel and live, Pond's has met every need with these two creams.

Wherever you live, try these two creams this winter and see how beautifully clean and supple they keep your skin. Both these creams, Pond's Cold Cream and Pond's Vanishing Cream, are found in all department stores and drug stores. Of course, they contain nothing which promotes the growth of hair.
